PREFACE.

THE NEW YORK CIVIL LIST, in its enlarged form, is substantially a new work, a more comprehensive plan having been adopted, which includes, with lists of officers connected with the public service of the State, a constitutional history of the Commonwealth. The growth of each department of government is traced, with the purpose of showing the changes and development of the constitutional system of the State, and of demonstrating the fact that the government of New York is the model system of organic liberty in the world, the natural growth of our own soil, the work of our own people, in a field in which they were pioneers. In the earlier editions of the enlarged Civil List this plan was imperfectly realized in some respects, particularly with reference to the administrative departments of government. This defect has since been partially remedied, and further improvements are contemplated, which will render the work complete as a sketch of the growth of the organic law of New York. The alphabetical index has been carefully revised, but is still imperfect. It includes all the names in the Lists, with the residences as far as known, and the pages on which they appear. The advantage of this index in enabling those who consult it to trace the official history of every person at any time connected with the Colonial or State government, or who has held a county office, is manifest. Corrections are invited with regard to names and residences. The Civil List for the year 1888, now in course of preparation, will contain important new matter, including, with the names of all officers entering upon their duties during the winter and spring of the year, valuable additions to the text, with respect to the various departments of the State Government.

THE NEW YORK CIVIL LIST.

NEW NETHERLAND.

New York bay, it is probable, was first entered by a European vessel in the year 1524 A. D. Four vessels, which had been fitted out by the French government, sailed from some port in Brittany, in 1523. Two were soon disabled and lost; and afterwards a third. The remaining vessel was the Dalfina (Dauphine), and was under command of Giovanni da Verrazano, a native of Florence. It sailed from the Madeiras in January, 1524, crossed the Atlantic and cruised up the American coast. From the account of the commander, contained in a letter to Francis II, King of France, under date of July 8, 1524, it is inferred that in the spring of that year he entered New York bay.

The attention of the Dutch was called very early to the advantages to be gained by encouraging trade with the Americas. A suggestion was made by William Usselinx, an enterprising merchant of Antwerp, in 1604, to organize a West India Company, for the purpose of reaping the benefits of commerce, and as the best means to annoy Spain. The proposition was received with favor, and the draft of a charter was prepared and informally approved. Secret overtures for peace, however, postponed the project for some time.¹

On the 10th of April, 1606, James I, King of Great Britain, for the planting of two colonies, granted the great North and South Virginia patent, by which leave was given to Sir Thomas Gates to begin a plantation between the 34th and 41st degrees of latitude, and to Thomas Henham a like privilege was conferred, between the 38th and the 45th parallels. The former began a settlement in Chesapeake bay in 1607, and the latter planted Plymouth in 1620.

The Dutch were very anxious to find a north-west passage around the American continent, which they thought would facilitate their trade with the East Indies. They accordingly secured the services of Hendrick Hudson, an English commander, who sailed from Amsterdam in the Half Moon, April 4, 1609, in the employ of the East India Company. On the 3d of September he anchored just within Sandy Hook. On the 4th a boat's crew put out to fish; and, according to an Indian tradition, landed on the long beach of Congee (Coney island), the first Europeans who trod the shore of the great harbor. On the 19th he anchored near Albany, and on the 23d returned down the river, sailing out to sea October 4, and reaching Dartmouth November 7.

At the time of the discovery of the great "River of the Mountains," the Manhattan Indians occupied the island called after them, and the Monatons Staten island. Long island was known by the name of Sewan-hack from Sewan (shells; wampum) and hacky or hacking (the land) thus called because the Indians of that island were the chief manufacturers of the aboriginal currency. The Indians of the island were called Matouwacks. Two Algonquin tribes were the chief inhabitants of the valley of the Hudson, the Mincees on the west, and the Mahicans on the east. These tribes were frequently at war between themselves, but always united against the Iroquois, or Confederacy of the Five Nations, who inhabited the country from the Hudson and Lake Champlain to Lakes Erie and Ontario and the St. Lawrence. South of the Iroquois were the Lenni Lenape, or Delawares. The North river was called the Cahohatatea by the Iroquois, and Mahican-ittick (place of the Mahicans) by the Delawares and other Southern tribes. The Mohegans or Mahicans, however, called it the Shatemuc. The Dutch first called it the Mauritius, in honor of the Stadtholder, Maurice of Orange.

The discovery of the "River of the Mountains" was received in Holland in characteristic manner. The States General made no effort for a long time to appropriate its territorial advantages, but a few shrewd merchants were quick to seize upon the opportunities for trade it afforded. For three years after Hudson's return the little round-prowed vessels of the Dutch busily traversed the Mauritius. The chief station was on Manhattan island; though only a fort and one or two small buildings had been erected — and perhaps not even these until 1613.

Foremost in these trading enterprises were Hendrick Christaensen, Adriaen Block and Cornelis Jacobsen May. Christaensen and Block equipped a vessel together in 1611. In 1612, several merchants fitted out the ships Fortune and Tiger, and placed them under their commands, respectively. Other merchants joined in the trade in 1613. Block spent the winter of 1613-14 on Manhattan island, where he built a yacht of sixteen tons, the Onrust (Restless)—the first vessel built by white men in its waters. In the spring (1614) he sailed through Hellegat,¹ and discovered the Housatonic and Connecticut rivers, going up the latter a long distance, and naming it the Varsche (Fresh Water) river. He then thoroughly explored the Sound, demonstrated for the first time the insular character of Long island, discovered the great Narragansett bay, and made his way up the New England coast as far as the bay of Nahant, which he called "the limit of New Netherland." Block island derives its name from him; but was called "Visscher's Haeck" by the Dutch. This island was seen by May before Block visited it. May, also, in 1614, explored the southern shore of Long island, and the Atlantic coast to Delaware bay. The same year Captain John De Witt, in the Little Fox, sailed up the North river, and gave his name to one of the islands near Red Hook. In this year, also, Christaensen established the first great trading post upon the river. It was built upon Castle island, near Albany, and was called Fort Nassau, in honor of the family of the Stadtholder.

Meantime, the English asserted their title to all the territory covered by the Virginia patent, and in 1613 Captain Argel was sent out by Sir Thomas Dale, Governor of Virginia, to dispossess the French at Port Royal and St. Croix. On his return, in the month of November, he "visited the Dutch on Hudson's river, who prudently submitted for the present;"² Christaensen, the Superintendent, agreeing to pay tribute in token of dependence on the English crown.

The States General, for the purpose of protecting the merchants engaged in the trade with Mauritius river, granted a decree March 27, 1614, framed in general terms, by which any discoverers of "new passages, havens, lands or places" should have "the exclusive right of navigating to the same for six voyages," provided they reported their discoveries within fourteen days after their return to Holland. On the 11th of October following, the United New Netherland Company was given by charter the monopoly of the trade to the American region, "between New France and Virginia, being the sea coasts between 40° and 45°," then first officially called New Netherland; and no other Dutch citizens were to be permitted to "frequent or navigate" those "newly discovered lands, havens or places," on "penalty of the confiscation of vessel and cargo, besides a fine of fifty thousand Netherlands ducats." The charter expired of its own limitation January 1, 1618. The three years were prosperous, but trade rather than the country was developed.

Hendrick Christaensen was murdered by an Indian soon after he had finished the trading house and defenses at Fort Nassau, and was succeeded in command by Jacob Eelkens, who had been a clerk in Amsterdam. A serious freshet on the island in the spring of 1618 caused Eelkens to remove the trading post, early in the summer, to the mouth of the Tawasentha (place of the many dead) where was an ancient Mohawk village and burial place of their dead.¹ A fort was built by Eelkens on the bluff, called by the natives Tawaesrun-shea, and here a little later he concluded the first formal treaty of friendship and alliance with the Indians. The treaty of Tawasentha was faithfully observed by the Iroquois, Mahicans, Delawares, and North River Indians who were parties to it.

The great West India Company was chartered² June 3, 1621. Its patent forbade any and all inhabitants of the United Netherlands, for twenty-four years after the first of July, 1621, to sail to the coasts of Africa between the tropic of Cancer and the cape of Good Hope, or to those of America between the banks of Newfoundland and the straits of Magellan, except in the service of the West India Company. It could exercise all the functions of government in the Dutch territory of America; and was only responsible to the States General for its acts as shown through its own reports. The affairs of all the region of New Netherland were placed in charge of the Amsterdam chamber; and the company formally "took possession" of the country in the spring of 1622. The managers adopted articles of internal regulation, which were approved by the States General June 21, 1623, whereupon the subscription books were closed. Meantime, Sir Dudley Carleton, English ambassador at the Hague, protested against the encroachments of Dutch fur traders upon the new Colony of Plymouth. The protest was stifled.

Under its charter, the company was required to "advance the peopling of those fruitful and unsettled parts." This was commenced in March, 1623, when a number of thrifty "Walloons" sailed from Holland in the ship New Netherland, under command of the company's first regularly appointed Director, Captain Cornelis Jacobsen May.

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY.

In order that we may rightly understand the growth of free institutions, it is desirable to consider the origins¹ of the systems of local and general administration which prevailed under the Dutch government, the extent and manifestations of popular power in New Netherland, and the legacy of liberty bequeathed to the colony of New York. This cannot be done without tracing the constitution of Aryan society back to its beginning in Central Asia, and following the streams which, pouring thence, flowed along the natural channels of migration until they reached the valley of the Hudson and the plains of Long island, and there mingled and crystallized their accumulations. Our argument is based on a theory of political evolution, which renders it necessary to summarize familiar historical facts, in order better to enforce both theory and argument. The theory is, that political systems, like individuals and other natural organisms, have grown, matured and died; that during this development and dissolution, seed was produced, deriving its character, like other germs, from that upon which it fed during the period of its inclosure, the seed becoming in its turn the nucleus of another organism. As the perfection of humanity consists in the due development of each faculty, and the correlation of all in one harmonious unity, so the perfection of political organization consists in like development of each function of government and their consolidation in one harmonious and indivisible whole, to the end that every individual and all classes may find complete security and ample room for growth under the protecting care of Law. This perfection was first attained in New York, through the operation of the law of political evolution we have formulated, and the system thus evolved is unique in this, that while under all other forms of government oppression is possible through the operation of their methods, it is impossible here without destroying the system itself.

The family is the social unit. Only by recognizing the fact that the patriarchal preceded the village system, can we understand the jealousy with which the privacy of home is preserved in India, the sacredness of the German home, with the sanctions of despotic power in its head, and the English proverb that a man's house is his castle. These are all remains of the time when families gathered in communities, and the community guaranteed the sovereignty of the patriarch who ruled absolutely, yet as a father over family and servants. The village community was an aggregation of these social units.

India is to-day divided into a vast number of these independent, self-acting organized social groups. Indian customs have for their object the security of these organizations, not only for the community as a whole, but for the various trades and callings which are pursued therein—the trading and manufacturing guilds, as well as cultivating associations. It is pertinent to our inquiry to note that in those parts of India in which the village community is the most perfect, and the clearest signs of original equality of proprietorship in the soil prevail, authority is lodged with the village council, which is always viewed as a representative body, and not as a body possessing original and inherent power. Whatever the real number of members, the village council always bears a name which recalls its ancient constitution of Five persons. No such thing is known as command or law. The council of village elders merely declares what has always been. It does not decree or enforce what some one else has commanded, either by divine or human authority. Custom is the only law. Antiquity is sufficient reason for obedience. No penalties are inflicted, the general disapprobation being regarded as sufficient punishment for disobedience, in the rare cases in which the conclusions of the elders are not accepted.

The ancient German cultivating community held a district of country divided into three parts—the village, the commons and the cultivated area, appropriated in lots to the several families, but tilled under direction of the community and periodically re-distributed. There is no country inhabited by an Aryan race in which traces of this redistribution do not exist. It has continued to our own day in the Russian villages. The Hindus preserve traditions of it. It was the source of usages which have survived until the present time in England and Germany. If very general language is employed, a description of the German and Scandinavian village communities might serve as a description of the same institution in India. Hindu and ancient European systems are substantially identical in all essential particulars, except one.

The most advanced radicalism springs out of the most stubborn conservatism, and re-acts into it. The veneration for ancient traditions and jealous protection of ancient customs, which characterized our Aryan ancestors, forms the sentiment from which all our liberties have originated, and indicates the manner in which they have been preserved. The primitive Aryan community would permit no variation from the ways of the fathers, except such departure as was forced by exterior power or internal necessity; of the latter of which the land-owners, and not the elders, were the judges. Thus, the will of the conqueror and the will of the freemen were the only forces competent to effect a change from time-honored methods. The necessities of their situation forced the Germans to abandon the conservatism still maintained in India, and to enter upon a new line of progress, which has had the most important results in the elevation of the human race. So long as the village council had no other duty than the judicial one of interpreting and explaining the customs of the fathers, there was obviously no call for a deliberative assembly. But when new conditions compelled the consideration of change, the freemen were assembled to decide upon it. India has nothing like the German popular assembly, because India has no need of it, in the opinion of the people. The Germans had their own assemblies, because the problems connected with migrations, war and settlement presented questions which only the entire community could determine. Land-owners only were freemen, although no man was a slave; land-owners only had political rights, and these rights were jealously protected. Absolute sovereignty inhered only in the body of freemen in each of their independent villages, who met together from time to time to frame laws and administer justice. While the Witan, or Wise Men, were by common consent left to determine formally the questions of war and peace, and of internal administration, they were necessarily controlled by public opinion; that is, by the conclusions reached in the popular assembly.

The Rhine was the natural boundary line between the Germans and the Kelts, who occupied Gaul and the British Isles. Certain tribes of Kelts and Germans doubtless coalesced, in pre-historic times, on the left bank of the lower Rhine; and this commingling must have had important beneficial results in the progress of mankind. There are certain characteristics of the two races which it is advisable to consider, in explanation of these results. The German was his own priest; the Kelt ministered at the altar of a consecrated authority. The German was his own lord; the Kelts were governed in time of peace by the Druids, who took advantage of the spiritual earnestness of the Keltic nature to punish disobedience by exclusion from the sacrifices, which was a terrible punishment to the condemned. The Druids were ecclesiastical despots; the Germans permitted no dictation in religion. The German served his God; the Kelt worshipped him. The German abhorred towns; the Kelt instinctively preferred them. The German village assemblies elected their own magistrates; the Kelts were ruled by their nobles and priests. The German princes or chieftains were really generals, and their armies consisted wholly of volunteers; the nobles among the Kelts elected annually a prince or chief-governor, who was the executive of the nobles and priests, and the commander of the armies when summoned to battle. The clan was a predominant feature among the Kelts; while among the Germans it had been superseded by voluntary associations, serving the same purpose of mutual protection, while preserving individual independence.

What are known as Indo-European races are thus seen to have been divided into two radically different types, which we will term here the Aryan and the Keltic. We adopt the word Aryan because its Sanscrit signification exactly expresses the theory of government we are endeavoring to trace. In Sanscrit the Aryan is the excellent householder.¹ Its root, also, may connect it with agriculture, while the Kelts were a pastoral people. There were diversified developments from the most primitive Aryan system. There were some small states, in which a more persistent form of patriarchal government had entailed a kind of hereditary paternalism. The prevailing type, however, was democratic or republican, as in Greece. The most perfect development of the republican type, among Aramean races, was the government of Carthage, which was rather a government of capitalists. On the Italian peninsula, the Etruscans so pressed upon the Italians as to result in compelling the latter to effect a more perfect organization. The Etruscans maintained the independence of the clan, and their confederacies were very loose, having no common central authority. Their nobles were their priests, and there was a strict line of demarcation between them and the common people. Hence they formed a variety of the Keltic type of government.

¹ All the families of man now associated under a common government in this State trace their ancestry back to a common home on the great plateaus of Central Asia. The words in their various languages which can be shown to have a common origin are words of peace, words of home, words of rural occupation. War, foreign intercourse and the sea gave birth to different words among differing peoples. The word Aryan is connected by some with the root ar (Lat. arara, to plough) as if to distinguish a people who were tillers (earpers) of the earth, from the purely nomadic Turcomans or Turks. Hence we would derive the Greek ari or aristos (the best)—that is, in the origin of the word, the best ploughman or tiller of the soil; and thus aristocracy, or the government of the best, would have meant originally the government of the best farmers or land-owners. The root is common to the old German, the Slavonian, Lithuanian, Celtic, Italian and Greek languages, in various forms related to agriculture. These peoples surrounded the great central Aryan State, on the north and west. The word Aryan is commonly derived, more directly, from ararya, excellent and householder. Thus the Aryan was the excellent householder; and the term is used in the Sanscrit books in the sense of "the illustrious," the "land of the illustrious," or of "heroes." In the Rig-Veda, allusion is made to towns and cities, to mighty kings and their great wealth. Besides agriculture, various useful arts were practiced by the people, as the art of weaving, of fabricating cars, golden and iron mail, and golden ornaments. The employment of the needle and the use of musical instruments were known. They were familiar with the ocean, but gave a different name thereto than the European branches of the family. We may look to the Chinese for contrasts and resemblances, recording the progress of eastern civilization. The Chinese are unsocial; live in families; have no partnerships or combinations; no great nobbling class; no independent and prosperous land-owners. Their land is subdivided into small holdings; there are mandarins and literati on the one side and millions of industrious poor on the other; wealth is not desired; all honor is reserved for public employment and learning, and they are very ingenious. In the cities there are guilds and associations, and in the country village communities elect their elders. Among similar communities in the original Arya, there arose a body of learned men or priests. Hindu law consists of a very great number of local bodies of usage, and of one set of customs reduced to writing by the priests, and claimed to have been given to Manu by the Supreme Being. These Institutes of Manu, thus pretending to divine authority, had the Brahmins for interpreters. This written Code has evidently been super-imposed upon the more ancient customs. It assumes the existence of king and judge, and the prevalence of the virtues and vices of civilization. In north-eastern Asia, were the great Mongolian warrior tribes who under the name of Huns, Turks, etc., made fierce invasions westward from time to time. Further westward, and north of the Indo-European (Aryan) races, were the Mongolian Finns. Far in the south-west corner of Europe, were the ancient Iberians, having curious links with the Finns, and who were crowded back as the Kelts pressed toward the Atlantic coast. To the east of the Kelts were the Slavonic tribes, nearest of kin to the Sanscrit branch of the Aryan family, and north of these were the German peoples.

Latin political history begins with the existence of clan-districts, hamlets or villages. These clanships became integral parts of a political community called cantons, analogous to our townships. These cantons were independent, and were governed by a prince, with the co-operation of a council of elders and an assembly of warriors. This earliest constitutional scheme was a primitive institution common to all the Latins, and probably originated long anterior to the separation of the stocks; and seems to be a logical development from the common Indo-German root. The cantons were associated in what is known as the Latin League. It was a fundamental principle with the ancient Romans, who were deeply religious but thoroughly utilitarian, that the priests should be powerless in the State; the State regulating its religion for itself, and each burgess controlling his own sanctuary and methods of worship. The burgess was the head of the household. The Roman community was originally constituted by the union of a number of village clanships, and whoever was a householder in one of these clans was a burgess of Rome. The king was the holder of executive power. The law itself, however, could only be altered by the assembly of the people and the council of the elders. The council of elders, or senate, subsequently became supreme, or virtually a college of magistrates with regal power; but the sovereignty remained with the burgesses.

During the Sullian epoch a compromise was effected with the municipalities, as between their most ancient rights as integral parts of the Roman community, and the privileges due them as allied states; by which primacy was attached to the metropolitan city.

Thus there arose the municipality as we understand the term—a subordinate civic community, supreme in its sphere, but divested of the independent sovereignty which belonged to the primitive canton and the still more primitive village. These municipalities retained the burgess assembly, which possessed the legislative power, and nominated the magistrates. There was also a municipal council, which consisted of one hundred members, and possessed functions similar to those of the Roman senate. Thus was perfected the Roman system of government, as distinguished from the Latin. Imperialism, as illustrated by Caesar, was simply leadership of the people. Later emperors converted this system into an imperial autocracy. The theory of the Roman empire was that of a representative despotism. The various offices of the republic were not annihilated, but their powers were gradually concentrated in the hands of a single man, and the senate became the last bulwark of political freedom. We must look beneath this aristocracy, however, if we would accurately judge the nature and extent of popular freedom: for large liberty may be enjoyed in the presence of imperfect political institutions. Distant peoples possessed perfect municipal and intellectual freedom; which with good roads and wise rulers secured for all the provinces a large measure of prosperity. The Empire was the age of the freest circulation of humanity. Roman policy tolerated the customs, religion and municipal rights of the conquered, and gradually conferred upon them the privileges of the conqueror, so that the highest honors and most important offices were open to them. The Roman religion was a creature of the State, a political sentiment and moral discipline, but was neither the enthusiasm of humanity nor a spiritual worship. On the other hand, cosmopolitanism or the fraternity of mankind was the law of the empire, performing the preparatory work necessary for the universal diffusion of the same idea by means of Christianity. Roman jurisprudence was framed by the Stoics, who based it on natural law, declaring that “all men are free,” and “all men are born equal” (Ulpian); but there was a broad chasm between Roman moralists and the Roman people, which could only be bridged by Christianity. This religion, combining the Stoical doctrine of universal brotherhood regulated by law, and the Greek appreciation of the power of the affections and the influence of the beautiful, with the Egyptian and Keltic spirit of religious reverence and the German spirit of devotion, produced a sympathetic, ethical and aggressive but disciplined enthusiasm for humanity aglow with Divine love. The Christian religion imperiously antagonized all existing religions, to the extent of uncompromising denunciation, and held the Roman empire to be Anti-Christ whose speedy downfall it foretold. While submitting to the temporal authority, the ministers of the Church became the arbiters of the differences among their people; and when the empire was disintegrated grew more and more aggressive in asserting a right to be their judges.

The German conquest of Western Europe compelled the entire reorganization of government. Society was thrown back upon its primitive elements to begin a new line of development. The Anglo-Saxons covered England with the little farmer communities of the Germans. The leaders in war of the various tribes became the chief executives of their realms. The German was jealous of his local rights, which were few, and were designed simply to secure justice and protect his freedom. If these ends were attained, he gloried in the glory of his lord, and was ready to respond to any call to active duty. Out of this principle of leadership grew the feudal system, which was essentially the revival of the patriarchal idea, and its adaptation to existing conditions. It was the theory of the paternal relation, extending from the king to the lowest serf. The Christian religion elevated and ennobled this system. The Roman and German overthrow of the Druidic power, and the advent of the teachers of the Gospel, constituted a correlation of forces destined to produce the most important results. The new faith was the golden fruit of an ancient Aramean theocracy. In their travel westward, its disciples had garnered all that was worth preserving in humanity. The local priests of the new faith in Gaul were from the conquered race, and therefore sympathized with the people. They succeeded, in the West as in the East, to a priesthood which claimed to rule by Divine authority. They proclaimed a religion of love to God and love to man. The inspirations and aspirations of that religion now breathed through Keltic worship, and its consecrating devotion energized the German service. The Church spoke by authority of God and man, therefore, when—holding the civilization of the ages in its keeping—it plead the cause of the people before king and noble, and demanded obedience. This clerical influence culminated in the revival of imperialism by Charles the Great, king of the Franks and emperor of Rome, who recognized the ancient liberties of the people. German Imperialism, as thus illustrated, was liberal paternalism, seeking to reconcile with itself ancient Aryan freedom and clerical power over the people. The radical defect of the system was that, if Emperor and Church turned oppressors, the people were bound in a more galling servitude than before.

England was primarily a commonwealth of free land-owners, for all authority was vested in the General Assembly. Gradually, however, the freemen absented themselves from the gathering of the Great Witan, and the grand council came to be little more than an assembly of the great officers of the Church, with the personal adherents of the king. This neglect of the Witenagemote by the English yeoman is easily explained, if we recall the ancient Aryan repugnance to any change in the customs or departure from the traditions of the fathers. Legislation, as we understand it, was little known. Attendance at the General Assembly was a task, the performance of which imposed burdens without compensation or adequate results. The Dane, after the conquest, permitted no distinction between conqueror and conquered, recognized provincial autonomy, secured the friendship of the Church, began the improvement of the peasantry, and developed a national feeling. The Norman continued the work of consolidation, and used the Church to win the support of the people as against the great earldoms, which were abolished by William the Conqueror. He retained the local courts, built up the English agricultural borough, which was the natural development of the German village, and used the boroughs as an offset to baronial power. The inhabitants of these boroughs had been drawn together for trade or protection. They owed dues to the lord of the manor, who also appointed bailiffs, who administered justice in the presence and with the assent of the townsmen. Property and person were alike secure against arbitrary seizure. The burgesses gathered in town meeting for free deliberation, at which the right of free speech was guaranteed. The land-owners, only, had civic existence. The finances were regulated by the merchant guild. The frith-guild took the place of kinsmen for the purposes of order and self-defense. These frith-guilds were general throughout Europe in the eighth and ninth centuries; and while subsequently suppressed on the continent, they were encouraged in England as the basis of social order. The merchant-guilds were developed into municipal governments, as towns grew in importance. The king appointed the chief officer of the borough.

The feudal system, which began as a tribal government among conquerors and over conquered, in the progress of its development united Roman and German customs, and culminated in the ninth century in territorial jurisdiction. The defects of the system ought not to blind us to its virtues. While the feudal proprietor, as the unit of political society, was almost an independent sovereign within his own small domains, he was, nevertheless, only a judge and leader; not an arbitrary dictator. It was a system for the administration of law, not for its defiance; for the performance of equitable obligations, not for the denial of justice. It was a system of loyalty to law by the lord as well as to him; and it provided securities for obedience, by making it the duty of the superior to see that the inferior obeyed its requirements. The King, the Church and the Commons were arrayed against the feudal lord, in protection of the rights of the people; while the lords denied the right of the king to legislate or tax without their consent. The fact that the ancient assemblies of the people died out in France as in England only shows how perfectly these obligations were kept; and feudalism became universally prevalent because it served the purpose for which it was designed. In Germany personal and local liberties were as keenly appreciated as in the earlier ages, and while the people were powerless to protect themselves against oppression by their lords, they nevertheless secured an enlarged freedom whenever and wherever the system was benignly administered. Indeed, there was too little government, and the Carolingian dynasty came to an inglorious ending because of that fact. As part of the feudal development, a dangerous custom had grown up since Charles the Great, of abandoning the general levy of troops by the sovereign and relying upon the individual noblemen to summon their vassals. Hence, when the fierce Magyars broke through the eastern frontier, each tribe was concerned only for itself, and the king (Lewis the Child) was compelled to pay tribute. He died soon after (in 911) not having attained manhood.

When Henry, Duke of the Saxons, was elected king of the Germans (919), they were still living on open farms, and there were but few cities, especially in the North. Henry, who is known as "the Fowler," built up cities to protect the industries of the Germans against the encroachments of the barons, and curtailed the power of the latter, thus restoring the ancient liberties of the people, as far as possible.¹ The Saxon dynasty became extinct just as the Dane succeeded in fastening himself upon England. The imperial policy of strengthening the cities, building up the lower orders of nobility, and respecting the rights of the freemen was also pursued by Conrad II, who founded the Franconian dynasty, having been elected by the clergy, nobility and freemen on the 4th of September, 1024. The bailiffs of the German villages, under the feudal system, were appointed by the barons or dukes. In the Netherlands, the freemen, artisans and traders began gradually to build their homes outside of the "lands master," or the burghs of the more powerful nobles, and to organize into guilds. These settlements obtained town charters, which, while not extensive, guaranteed them a local administration of justice, thus providing a government of law as against mere arbitrary power. The schout and schepens, or chief magistrate and aldermen, were originally appointed by the sovereign. The towns along the principal highways of trade in Germany developed into cities. One of these highways, forming an avenue of communication from the East and South with England, passed through the Netherlands. In the twelfth century, when the village boroughs of England were growing in numbers, the continental cities had acquired considerable commercial and manufacturing importance, and attained the full privileges of municipal government. The trade guilds chose wardens, and these again chose burgomasters from their own number. Each city had its senate, composed of burgomasters and sheriffs, and a council of citizens, by whom the senate was elected.

Frederick I (Barbarossa) the sagacious German Emperor who gave greatest glory to the House of Hohenstaufen, after the capture of Milan in 1158, summoned the learned Italian lawyers from the universities, and they brought out the Roman law from the dust of oblivion. These lawyers decided that, as the successor of the late Roman emperors, he possessed their rights, which included the right to appoint the magistrates of cities. He thereupon appointed Podestas, royal dues were conceded him, and absolutism was declared the law of the empire. By the peace of Constance, however, in 1183, the cities were given the exclusive choice of their own officers and the control of their internal affairs, the Imperial sovereignty being reserved. In this way the Roman law, sparingly modified by the feudal customaries, was introduced as the basis of statute law in the German cities, finally extending to the North and the Netherlands; and its renewed study was an important element in the revival of learning which preceded the Reformation. The first incorporated city in the Netherlands was Middleburgh, which received its charter from Count William I of Holland and Countess Joan of Flanders in 1217. The large cities of the Netherlands had extensive districts, including villages, under their government. A long and bloody struggle took place between the burghers and the barons, for the purpose of determining the sovereign rights in disputed sections of territory; the free burghers of the cities electing knights to lead them to battle. Determined contests also took place between the people and the aristocracy of the cities, which were merely corporate individuals, wheeling into the feudal ranks by the side of the barons, and contesting supremacy with them.

Meantime the English barons had become the protectors of the people, and extorted from King John the Great Charter (1215), which was simply a constitutional guarantee of ancient rights.¹ The greatest revolution in government was effected silently. The Great Council consisted of the prelates, the greater barons and the tenants-in-chief. The knights of the shire attended as the representatives of the baronage, and became merged in the Great Assembly, and thus the whole body of rural freeholders were admitted to a share in the government of the realm. In 1265, it was suggested to give the boroughs representation in the Parliament, and the suggestion was carried into effect in 1295. It is a singular fact that neither the counties nor the towns desired these representative rights, when first granted. The system was adopted by Edward the First, to obviate the necessity of direct negotiations with the sheriffs of counties and the magistrates of boroughs in the raising of funds for the support of government. While all burgesses were entitled to vote, most shirked the right as an irksome duty rather than a privilege, and left its discharge to a few principal burghers deputed for that purpose. The Roman law was obnoxious in England. The people steadily wrested their rights from prerogative, through such Parliaments as were influenced by them, and in the reign of Edward III (1326-77) it became established that the King enacted laws only at the request of the Commons and with the assent of the Lords. The English system was defective in that it afforded no adequate restraints upon irregular or arbitrary action either by King or Parliament.

We have still another German republican development to notice, in the rude but self-governed maritime province of Friesland, the communities of which were united in a simple federation. The Frisians, nearest of kin to the Anglo-Saxons, never accepted feudal-ism, and they had an organization designed solely to protect their little commonwealths against it. A congress of the whole confederacy was held annually, the delegates to which were chosen by popular suffrage. Each of its seven little states was subdivided into districts, and each district was governed by a Griet Mann (great man, select man) and Assistants. Above all these districts was a Podesta, identical in name and functions with the chief officer of the municipal republics of Italy. The chief duty of this magistrate was to protect the citizens against lawless barons, by executing summary justice upon them. The Podesta was chosen by the people, generally for a limited period, but sometimes for life; and was assisted by a board of eighteen or twenty councillors. Sometimes one Podesta was elected for the entire province, and Friesland lost its independence by electing the Duke of Saxony such Podesta, who sold the sovereignty thus acquired to the House of Austria, and Charles V compelled submission.

In 1326-9, the towns of the various provinces of the Netherlands appeared in the Assembly of the Provincial Estates along with the noblemen. At this time, the Imperial power had been destroyed by the encroachments of the principalities into which the Empire had been disintegrated. In the course of the following century the six chief cities of Holland acquired the right of sending deputies regularly to the Estates. These deputies, with the nobles as the sole representatives of the rural districts, constituted the parliamentary power of the provinces. The yeomanry were unrepresented. When the House of Burgundy obtained the sovereignty of the Netherlands, there arose wars between the princes of the House and the cities. At the death of Charles the Bold, the provinces and towns assembled in convention, in 1477, and extorted from the young Duchess Mary a charter or constitution, called the Great Privilege, by which the ancient rights were confirmed.¹ Thereafter the Provincial Estates sent delegates, or rather envoys with limited powers and precise instructions, to a general assembly or States General, representing all the provinces. The same year Mary married Maximilian, son of Frederick III, and thus the House of Austria obtained the vast heritage of Charles the Bold. Charles V vainly sought to compromise the religious differences of his time, and finally entered into an alliance with the Pope against the nobles. He was defeated in the struggle. By the religious peace of Augsburg, signed September 25, 1555, religious freedom was assured the princes and barons, but denied the people; the only concession granted subjects who would not submit to the religion of their lords being permission to emigrate. And this was all they secured, in direct terms, when at the close of the Thirty Years' War, by the treaty of Westphalia, signed October 24, 1648, the dismemberment of the German empire was effected, and the independence of the Netherlands and of Switzerland recognized. Surely, something broader than this is needed to enlist our sympathies. The barons and princes fought against the exercise of spiritual and civil authority over them, but asserted their right to tyrannize over others. They did not deny arbitrary power; they simply claimed to be the rightful despots, and resisted the claims of Emperor and Pope.¹

Charles V abdicated the throne one year after the religious peace of Augsburg, and was succeeded in Spain, Italy and the Netherlands by his son Philip II. The government of the United Provinces which carried on the great struggle with this despot was not a government by the people, for the municipal magistrates had become self-elected close corporations. Each province contained a large number of cities, which were governed by a board of magistrates, varying in number from twenty to forty. This college was called the Vroedschap (Assembly of Sages or Wise Men). The members were appointed for life. Sometimes the Sages filled vacancies directly, and sometimes they nominated a double or triple number to the Stadtholder, who selected one therefrom. The Sages chose the Schepens, a judicial body, and the Burgomasters. The union of the Netherlands was a compact between sovereign states; and there naturally sprang up within it a National and a Provincial party. The Nationalists were led by the Stadtholder, Prince Maurice, of Nassau; the Provincials by John of Barneveld, Advocate of Holland. Maurice, in 1618, forcibly overthrew the governments of dissenting provinces, and in 1619 caused the judicial murder of Barneveld. Maurice died at the Hague, April 23, 1625, leaving the States General supreme. The same year witnessed the accession of Charles I and the beginning of the second great epoch of the Thirty Years' War.

Motley says of the polity of the Netherlands that, "Judged by the principles of reason and justice, it was in the main a wholesome constitution, securing the independence and welfare of the State, and the liberty and prosperity of the individual, as well, certainly, as did any polity then existing in the world." On the other hand, it must be borne in mind, that while it had no King, it recognized no People, which was a fatal defect; for when the pressure from without was removed, the ruling classes separated themselves into a plutocracy, abandoning business and living on hereditary fortunes, thus bringing about the downfall of the Commonwealth. Here, however, civil and religious liberty held despotism at bay, while it made for itself a home beyond the seas.

The English contemporary of Philip II was Queen Elizabeth. During the earlier portion of her reign the last traces of bondage disappeared; but toward its close she asserted claims to arbitrary power which justly impairs her standing as a liberal monarch. Parliament asserted its constitutional rights with greater vigor; and the people gave evidences of the fact that any aggressions on the part of the Crown would not be submitted to.

The Charter of the West India Company was issued in 1621. The Thirty Years' War had commenced. It was the year in which the English Commons resolved, "That the liberties, franchises, privileges and jurisdiction of Parliament are the ancient and undoubted birthright and inheritance of the subjects of England;" and when James tore their protestation in pieces with the remark: "I will govern according to the common weal, but not according to the common will." Barneveld was dead; Grotius was hiding away from the despotism of Maurice. There was not a country in which popular rights were respected, and popular power could be expressed and enforced in orderly methods. Just then the western gate was opened.

Imperialism, clericalism and provincialism had now become merely different forms of paternalism; sometimes acting the part of a wise and indulgent parent, at other times crushing the people under the iron heel with all the cruelty of a depraved tyrant. The instincts of freedom, however, were strong within the people, for ancient Aryan liberties, sustained by equally ancient orderly obedience to Law, had been enjoyed during millenniums of agricultural labor. The hereditary instincts had been cultivated by centuries of true fatherly care on the part of the Church. There were no newspapers, then, to educate the people. The Church did it, and to the Church must we give credit. Nothing so promotes a sense of human equality and the worth of humanity, as the inculcation of the belief that man is the subject of Divine solicitude, and that the God who is Father of all requires each to love Him supremely and his neighbor as himself. This religion, leading to works in behalf of all mankind, made democrats and republicans of all. To the educating and elevating influence of the Church, therefore, we must give credit for the fact that the people were prepared to assert their ancient rights, even as against the authority of the parent under whose guidance they had attained so robust a majority.

Much is to be allowed to the Church of those days. Questioned by some it had trained to think, regarded no longer with reverence by those it had lifted to a level with itself, repudiated by others in their search for knowledge, disintegrated by the political powers it had strengthened and the intellectual and spiritual forces it had quickened, dishonored by some of its own representatives, derided by the sinner, disclaimed by many saints and despoiled by the robber, it had fallen upon a time when earnest men clutched for supremacy either in unholy lust or sincere conviction that only thus could the present prosperity and future happiness of themselves and those under their charge be secured. In speaking of the Church, we speak of it in its broadest sense; for when it fell to pieces its fragments warred with factious fury, clutching after the prerogatives they denied to the historical organization. This was a natural and unavoidable stage in progress toward a higher development. It was an age of civil and religious anarchy, in which each sought its own preservation by all the means in its power. To try any by our own standards would be unjust judgment. We condemn only those who sinned against the common standard of civilization of the age in which they lived.

The problem awaiting solution was to be solved by the rough friction and sharp collision of these forces, aroused when men awakened to the consciousness of their ancient rights, their native liberties, their inherent strength. That problem was, how to co-ordinate the various forms of force into one self-acting agency for the government of society. Popularism is merely the unfolding of the individual life; crush that, and the race dies under the heel of the despot. Provincialism widens individual development, by fostering local pride and stimulating local growth; crush that, and you crush the vital forces of society. National feeling, national sympathy, national unity, bind humanity together, broaden the sweep of their activities, enlarge the scope of their powers, extend the effect of their energies, inspire and vitalize them in their most comprehensive form, and give to them a strength and glory of achievement possible in no other way. Ecclesiasticism holds within it the eternal agencies of an eternal God. An imperial combination of these would be the union of the wisdom of the fathers, and its practical application in behalf of the children. How to do all this was first shown in New Netherland. There was no exemplification of it anywhere else on the globe, when the foundations were laid in that imperial province.

The English submitted the gravest questions of right and prerogative to precedent; and as authorities were conflicting, force was the only arbiter. The historians and jurists were partisans, intent either upon strengthening the Crown or Parliament. The judges of the common law, holding their situations during the pleasure of the king, were subservient to him; and other and more despotic tribunals were established. The head of the State was also head of the Church, and hence England was convulsed by ecclesiastical struggles for control. The legislative power and the taxing power, however, were denied to the Crown, although frequently usurped by it. On the other hand, the Dutch conceded neither the judicial, nor the ecclesiastical, nor the legislative, nor the fiscal power to a Chief Executive. In France, the tendency of the feudal system to absolutism found no adequate restraint, but the Dutch were more successful. In Spain, where parliamentary and municipal rights once existed in most liberal form, the aggressions of royalty had resulted in their overthrow. The Dutch, while not giving to the people the exclusive choice of their rulers, kept the feudal system within its legitimate sphere, and limited it to its ideal. The feudal ideal, politically, was the Law of service, written in Roman jurisprudence and realized in the Christian life. Its fatal weakness was, that it was powerless to protect the people against despotic kings, princes and judges; and its great strength was, that it inculcated the sense of personal and provincial rights, while it taught respect for civil and ecclesiastical rulers.

The first governments established in this country by authority were paternal or arbitrary in form. This was unavoidable. Before you have a settled government by or over the people, you must have a permanent settlement of the people. Hence the English and Dutch governments vested large powers in the original authorities, but they were nevertheless strictly required to administer the laws of the mother country. The Charter of the Dutch West India Company was issued after the judicial murder of Barneveld. By its terms, the will of the company was supreme, and all power was vested in the Director-General and Council, who were to be governed by the Dutch Roman law, the imperial statutes of Charles V, and the edicts, resolutions and customs of the United Netherlands, in all cases not otherwise provided for. This shows the genesis of Dutch government. The basis of it all was the customs of the fathers. The superstructure was a union of the Roman, German and Dutch municipal systems. The Dutch were governed by a league of commercial guilds, represented in the States-General in order that they might protect the organized interests of each class of people ; not that they might invade the rights of others. This principle of conserving the ancient and vested rights of all the people as against any portion thereof, even a majority, and as against government itself, was the foundation principle of the province as of the mother country, and distinguished it in the beginning from either of the English colonies. The government was a development of the ancient Aryan guild custom, moulded by contact with the Roman municipality, evolved under powerful trade influences, and modified in time of war to secure stability, without thought that in the end the change would strangle freedom in its very cradle. The purely rural element had no representation in the external government, as the system was entirely feudal ; but the rural populations seem to have administered justice among themselves as fully as a system not framed upon a principle developed out of their necessities could secure.

The English organized the government of Virginia on their opposite ancient model, which was that of an agricultural people ; cities having no sovereign rights except those acquired as a constituent element, by means of an increase of population at natural centers. A legislative assembly met at Jamestown, July 30, 1619 ; but it possessed little power. In July, 1621, the London Company gave the colony a written code of laws based on the English Constitution, appointed the Governor and Councillors, and continued the House of Burgesses as a representative body. In 1624 the representatives of the people enacted : " The Governor shall not lay any taxes or impositions upon the colony, their lands or commodities, other only than by authority of the General Assembly, to be levied and ymployed as this said Assembly shall appoynt." The same year the king abolished the London Company, and gave Virginia a royal government. In the last analysis, the English system gave the government absolute power over all subjects. Whoever controlled the government worked their sovereign pleasure with all people, whether such control was held by Crown or Parliament. This system gave unrestrained power to the tyrannical majority of a real minority, as surely as the opposing principle of Royal authority in a single executive gave despotic power to the Crown. The Dutch system, while holding the elements of feudal liability to tyranny, held them in strict subservience to Law, and guarded against abuses by conferring no power without accompanying it with an adequate safeguard against its arbitrary exercise. In England it was either the Crown or Parliament making laws at their own pleasure; in the Netherlands, government was a commercial agent, while the laws and customs of the fathers were administered and justice secured by magistrates nominated by the people. While the Dutch form was feudal, its spirit was municipal; and the municipality on the continent had been the fortress of liberty. It was now to be brought in contact with rural love of freedom, transplanted from England. The Dutch gave to New Netherland, in feudal shell, a paternal guardianship of liberty regulated by Law; the English gave to Virginia a popular love of liberty with popular methods for its preservation, provided the Sovereign gave consent, and the people did not become despots. It was in the blending of these that the true spirit of feudalism was to find its fruition, and the real genius of popularism its final and perfect consummation.

In 1620 (November 9), on board the Mayflower, by solemn compact, the foundations of a third system were laid; that of an ecclesiastical commonwealth, the members of which were to govern themselves in accordance with English law, and in loyalty to the English government. The English system was primarily a government of rural boroughs and shires, and had its root in German soil; but in New England this system was associated with ecclesiasticism. The primitive Aryan system of co-operative cultivation was first adopted by these church colonies;¹ but was associated with the old German and Roman idea that the head of the family is the chief priest of the household, independent of the State, only in Rhode Island. The English Puritan mind accepted the Aramean principle that allegiance is due to authoritative interpreters of religious teaching; but, in harmony with the German view, held that believers voluntarily associated are the interpreters, and that they constitute the State, to which civil and religious obedience are alike due. Church membership was essential to civic existence; and membership in the churches was largely under the control of the ministers. The system was, therefore, one of priestly primacy in matters of State, but not one of priestly dominion. It was a Church State. In Maryland, the attempt was made to establish a State which would recognize the indefeasible right of man to submit implicitly to the religious teaching of any Church, without forfeiting his civic rights, with the principle of non-interference by the State with any Church, or by one Church with the members of another—this system being associated with English civic polity.

The English parliamentary system vested supreme power in the legislative majority. The Virginia system placed the Legislature under the control of a Royal master. The New England system rendered the Church supreme. Maryland and Rhode Island placed supreme power in the hands of the people or their representatives, at the same time giving a pledge to respect the rights of all. The Dutch made the Judiciary supreme, and denied all arbitrary power, either in people or parliaments, in civil rulers or religious teachers, and sought to fortify the people against its exercise. Thus the feudal shell of Dutch government inclosed the seed of liberty, ready in fullness of time to germinate in most perfect form.

It was not until 1624, one year before the death of Prince Maurice, the accession of Charles I and the beginning of the second great period of the Thirty Years War, that government was actually established in New Netherland. In 1629, the manorial system was introduced. Patroons were invested with the power of feudal barons; but no political or judicial changes could be introduced without consent of the home government. In Massachusetts, the Puritans were then just beginning to organize a government¹ having for its main object "the propagation of the gospel." The same year Lord Baltimore was turned away from Virginia by the tender of an oath of allegiance which no true Catholic could take.¹

The English colonists on the Connecticut river were first governed by commissioners appointed by the General Court of Massachusetts. In 1637 new delegates from the three towns of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield were associated with them. In 1639 a written Constitution was adopted, under which all the freemen of the three towns were equal before the law. "Well knowing," its preamble recited, "where a people are gathered together the word of God requires that to mayntayne the peace and union of such a people, there should be an orderly and decent government established according to God, to order and dispose of the affayres of the people at all seasons as occation shall require; doe therefore assotiate and conioyne our selves to be as one publike State or commonwealth." They thus entered "into combination and confederation together to mayntayne & preserve the liberty & purity of the gospell of our Lord Jesus which we now professe, as also the disciplyne of the churches, which, according to the truth of the said gospell is now practised among us; as also in our Civell Affaires, to be guided & governed according to such lawes, rules, orders & decrees as shall be made, ordered & decreed."

In June, 1639, the government of the colony of New Haven was organized. The Bible was declared to be the Constitution; none but church members were admitted to citizenship. All officers were chosen at an annual election. The government was intrusted to seven men, termed Pillars.

In 1628 and in 1640 the privileges of the Patroons were materially restricted and those of free settlers enlarged. Whenever the people settled in sufficient numbers,² the Company was bound to give them local governments, the officers of which were to be appointed by the Director and Council, in accordance with the custom in the Netherlands. "No other religion was to be publicly tolerated or allowed in New Netherland, save that then taught and exercised

¹ Maryland was chartered in 1632. The Lords Baltimore were made absolute lords of the province. The freemen were to be called together to frame laws, and when this was inconvenient, the legislative power was given Lord Baltimore and the magistrates, provided they did not infringe on the rights of the citizens. The liberties thus secured were open to all English immigrants. The people were perpetually exempt from taxation by the Crown; the charter leaving all taxation to the proprietaries and the provincial assemblies. In 1635, the assembled freemen passed a series of regulations which Lord Baltimore rejected. Two years later he sent out others in their place, which were rejected by the freemen on the 25th of January, 1638. The question thus raised as to the power of the proprietor or the freemen to initiate laws was virtually yielded by Lord Baltimore in a letter. In 1639, a representative government was established, a declaration of rights was adopted, the liberal principles of the charter were affirmed, and the terms of citizenship were declared to be the same with those of England.

² The Dutch settled Flatlands in 1626, Newtown in 1638, and Breukelen, Gowanus and Gravenzande in 1639. The same year (January 13) they purchased from the Indians nearly the whole of the present county of Queens, and in 1640 the remainder of that portion of the island west of about the present Suffolk county line.

by authority of the Reformed Church in the United Provinces." This provision was a dead letter. English colonists had already settled on the eastern end of Long Island; and were subsequently given grants of land on the western extremity, accompanied by village or town charters.¹ Thus the Roman principle by which a State religion was sustained in harmony with religious freedom was practically recognized.

An Indian war broke out in 1641, causing intense excitement. Director Kieft thereupon invited all the masters and heads of families, residents of New Amsterdam and vicinity, to assemble in the fort on the 28th day of August. This is the first official recognition of the existence of the people, in New Netherland. Meantime, Maryland had advanced from a popular to a representative government, with a bill of rights based on the ancient liberties of England; and the church commonwealths of Hartford and New Haven had been established. When the freemen of New Amsterdam convened pursuant to call, therefore, they obtained tardy concession of a right enjoyed in some form all around them. After giving their opinion on the questions submitted to them, in accordance with Roman precedent, they appointed Twelve Men to represent them. Their constitution, and indeed their duty, reminds one of the jury system which originated in England in 1166, and which was a modification of the ancient Aryan custom of administering justice. The Twelve Men complained to the Director of the arbitrary constitution of the government; asked that four persons be chosen from their number (two to retire each year,) who shall have access to the Council, "so that taxes may not be imposed on the country in the absence of the Twelve," and reminded him of the fact that while in their native country the smallest village had a board of from five to seven schepens, New Amsterdam and the settlements adjacent had none. The Director promised reform, but admonished them that they were only appointed to consider the Indian troubles; and on the 11th of February, 1642, issued a proclamation forbidding them calling any further meetings without his express permission, "as they tend to dangerous consequences, and to the great injury both of the country and of our authority."

The issue thus raised was of the simplest and most fundamental character. It was as to whether the people were to be represented in the taxing body and were to be permitted to nominate their magistrates in accordance with the terms of the charter; or whether the Director and Council were to retain the power of taxation with the local judicial function. Under the most ancient Roman system, the Executive was also the Judge, or appointed others to act in his stead. The prerogative of selection from triple nominations, conceded by Dutch law, was in essence a compromise between this Roman system and the German method of popular administration of justice; and in its reconciliation of popular with parental power was an advance upon either, as it respected the preference of the people, while avoiding public tumult, and secured less arbitrary selections than were likely to be made under the Roman system of appointment. The Dutch system was entirely satisfactory to the colonists, and they were not disposed to relinquish their rights. Another opportunity to assert them soon came. By the summer of 1643, the troubles with the Indians and complications with the English had reached such gravity that the Director found it expedient to again call the freemen together. When they assembled, in September, he requested them "to elect five or six persons from among themselves," to consider maturely the articles which the Director and Council were prepared to propose. The number originally suggested affords a coincidence with the traditional number of the village council¹ among the Eastern Aryans, and with the Pentarchies of Carthage. It is, however, only a coincidence; as the purpose in view was to secure a representative council, and not a magisterial or governmental body.

The proposed method of consultation was a system of legislation in the old Roman sense. This system was designed to preserve old customs as nearly as possible, and yet provide an orderly method for effecting needed changes. It was intended to guard against radical innovations, and hence the power of legislation was not given exclusively to the burgess assembly. The elders, or senate, succeeding the village council, interpreted ancient customs and determined vested rights. The King executed the laws, and passed judgment upon transgressors. Under the most ancient Roman constitution, if he desired legislative action, he submitted propositions to the burgesses; and if approved by them, they were submitted to the elders, who determined whether they interfered with vested rights, and if they did not, the propositions were added to the laws. The Senate, therefore, as the guardians of the ancient rights of the people, possessed the veto power. In process of time the King consulted the Senate before submitting his propositions, in order that he might be sure of approval in case the people accepted them. This primitive system was subject to some fluctuation in the early days of Rome, with a tendency to enlarging the power of King and People to effect change against the will of the Senate. Sulla restricted the power of the people, and gave the initiative in legislation to the Senate, limiting the burgesses to the original prerogative of approval. Cæsar, as the representative of the people, appealed from the Senate to them, and they passed upon his propositions direct.

Kieft instituted a representative body, for the purpose of consultation in the enactment of laws. The people preferred leaving the responsibility of choosing the select men to the Director, claiming for themselves the right only to reject any undesirable nomination. "Eight men" were then "elected." The certificate of their election is on record, signed by twenty-eight freemen who agreed to approve what they should determine. The Eight Men were summoned by the Director-General, "to consider the critical condition of the country." They assembled September 15, and passed upon the most important questions of war and peace, and performed other legislative acts, which definitely fix the character of the body. Several meetings were held during the year, but the proceedings do not concern us here.

The year 1644 was a gloomy one for New Amsterdam and vicinity. There were not only complications with the English, war with the Indians and internal dissensions, but there were troubles with the quasi-independent colonie of Rensselaerswyck. The Patroon of this colonie was the only one who undertook the actual government of his domain as a feudal baron. Early in the year, one of his vessels, called the Arms of Rensselaerswyck, and its cargo, were confiscated at New Amsterdam; contraband war material being found on board. The Patroon thereupon caused a fort to be erected on Beeren's island, and directed that all vessels be excluded from the upper waters of the Hudson except his own and those of the West India Company. The commandant at this fort fired upon a vessel from New Amsterdam, which precipitated a conflict between the Patroon and the Director; but the former continued to assert the provincial attributes of sovereignty for several years.

The Eight Men were re-convened on the 18th of June, 1644, when the state of the treasury and the exigencies of the service were submitted to them. The Director proposed that customs and excise duties be levied. Hitherto the "staple right," or right to impose duties on passing vessels, which had been granted to the settlement under Director Van Twiller, had been the only revenue measure in force. The Eight Men opposed the new revenue law, and claimed that the power of taxation was only possessed by the States General; and that as the home government had guaranteed protection as one of the inducements to emigrate, it ought to pay the expense. They finally yielded, however, and a proclamation was issued, declaring that "by the advice of the Eight Men chosen by the commonalty," a tax was imposed on beer and liquors sold for domestic consumption and on beaver skins brought to the settlement and purchased within the limits; and that, as "the scarcity of money is very general," these duties were imposed "provisionally, until the good God should grant us peace, or that we shall be sufficiently aided from Holland." The act of concurring in this recommendation was the exercise of the highest legislative function, and demonstrates that the Eight Men were a parliamentary body, in the most ancient sense. The Executive asked that consent be given to the enactment of a revenue measure, in accordance with ancient custom, and his request was granted; which, with the action of the preceding year, settles the character of the body.

Early in July, soldiers arrived in New Amsterdam from the Netherlands, when the question arose as to how they were to be supplied with clothing and provisions. The Eight Men were opposed to continuing the revenue enactments, being of opinion that the impoverished inhabitants were entitled to be relieved from the burdens which had been "provisionally" imposed. The Director and Council, therefore, on the 4th of August, resolved to continue them without such consent, with some modifications, and to require the brewers to send in a return of the quantity manufactured. This usurpation created great excitement. The taxes had been rendered more oppressive, and inquisitorial returns demanded, at a time when relief was necessary, and freedom from arbitrary rule had been promised. The brewers resisted the collection of the tax, were prosecuted and compelled to pay.

The issue thus raised was no new one. The Germans held that taxation without consent was a badge of servitude, and their Dutch and English descendants had extorted from sovereigns the concession that they would ask needed revenues at the hands of the people's representatives, and not impose taxes arbitrarily. Indeed taxation only with consent was an admitted fundamental principle in France and throughout Western Europe, although it was frequently violated by despotic power. On the 28th of October, therefore, the Eight Men addressed a remonstrance to the Directors of the Company, blaming Kieft for the troubles with the Indians, and complaining that he had usurped "princely power" and the power of taxation. "We did not conceive," they said, "that our powers extended as far as to impose new taxes, but that such must first be considered by a superior authority (to wit, by the Lords majors)." The remonstrance concluded: "It is impossible to ever settle this country until a different system is introduced here, and a new Governor be sent over with more people, who shall settle themselves in suitable places, one near the other in form of villages and hamlets, and elect from among themselves a bailiff or schout and schepens who shall be empowered to send deputies to vote on public affairs with the Director and Council, so that hereafter the country may not be again brought into similar danger."

These rights were asked when the United Netherlands were in the zenith of their glory, and England and her colonies were torn by internal dissensions and religious feuds. The issue was joined in the year that saw the triumphs the great Swedish General Tostenson, in silencing Denmark, and in ruining an Imperial German army without even a battle, effectually settling the prolonged controversy of that desolating war, and sending the German empire staggering toward the grave. It was joined in the year that saw the victory of Marston Moor, and the granting of a charter to Roger Williams, giving to the people of Providence Plantations "full power and authority to govern and rule themselves." Maryland was in a state of anarchy, and Virginia was controlled by a Royalist party, which compelled the Puritans to leave the colony. The year previous, Massachusetts, New Plymouth, Connecticut and New Haven had formed a confederacy "to advance the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to enjoy the liberties of the gospel in purity with peace," under the name of the United Colonies of New England, "both for preserving and propagating the truth and liberties of the gospel, and for their own mutual safety and welfare;" and the year we are now considering witnessed the separation of the representatives of the people from the Council in Massachusetts, which rendered the General Assembly an independent and co-ordinate branch of the government.

The demand of the Eight Men was a demand for the establishment of a system of organic liberty more secure in its safeguards of freedom than any then in existence either in this country or in Europe. It did not leave liberty to the mercy of a church, as in New England; for it had been proved that even churches may be tyrants. It did not leave it to the will of the people, or their representatives alone, as in Rhode Island and Maryland; for experience had already shown, and was soon to show still more conclusively, that majorities cannot always be trusted to respect the rights of minorities. It did not commit freedom to the care of governments organized on the royal pattern as in Virginia, nor to Parliaments as in England, nor to paternal care as in Germany; for each had shown itself competent to oppress. The basis of organic liberty guaranteed by it is to be found in Roman, German and Dutch laws and customs. So long as these were obeyed, the liberties of the people were secure. It was only when they were violently set aside, that freedom was overthrown. The Eight Men adopted the New England system of an elective magistracy in villages and towns, whose delegates, appointed after consultation with the freemen, were to meet with the Director and Council, for the execution of the laws and the protection of all freemen. This was a proposition to return to the primitive Aryan magisterial system; and to supplement it, for purposes of mutual protection, with a representative council. It was an improvement on other systems, because in an age characterized by aggressions against freedom, it reduced the power to interfere with liberty to the minimum, and trusted its execution to the entire body of freemen, who inherited the spirit and the statutes of liberty from the earliest ages.

The Eight Men were sustained. The recall of Kieft was decided upon, on the 10th of December. The remonstrances and all the petitions and memorials of the colonists were referred to the chamber of accounts. The report, made in March, 1645, sustained the complaints of the colonists and approved the suggestion that villages and hamlets be organized after the manner of the English. The original charter to the Patroons, granted in 1629, authorized their colonies to appoint one or two deputies to acquaint the Director and Council of their condition; which, by implication, was extended by the charter of 1640 to any local government organized in pursuance thereof. It was now suggested that these deputies should, at the summons of the Director-General, hold an Assembly every six months, for mutual inter-communication and the general advancement of the welfare of the people, with power to deliberate on all questions which might concern the prosperity of their colonies, the propitiation of the Indians and the neighboring provinces, the maintenance of free privileges, the correction of abuses, and the upholding of the statutes and the laws.

The Commissioners of the Assembly of the XIX of the General Privileged West India Company acted upon this report in instructions given to the Director and Council under date of July 7, 1645. The Council was to consist of "the Director as President, his Vice and the Fiscal." In cases in which the Advocate-fiscal appeared as Attorney-general, either civil or criminal, the military commandant was to sit in his stead; and, if the charge was criminal, three persons were to be associated from the commonalty of the district where the crime or act was committed. The Supreme Council was the sole body "by whom all occurring affairs relating to police, justice, militia, the dignity and just rights of the company" were to be "administered and decided." That is; it was an executive, administrative and judicial body, but possessed no legislative functions, and had no power to alter or abridge the ancient rights of the people. The gathering of the inhabitants, "in the manner of towns, villages and hamlets, as the English are in the habit of doing," was to be aided by all means in their power, and the privileges (heretofore noted) as being granted in the "Freedoms and the amplifications thereof," were continued; and, further, "inasmuch as the respective colonists have been allowed, by the Freedoms, to delegate one or two persons to give information to the Director and Council concerning the state and condition of their colonies, the same is hereby confirmed." The recommendation of a semi-annual assembly, therefore, was not confirmed.

When Petrus Stuyvesant arrived at New Amsterdam, (May 27, 1647), the Scots had turned Charles over to a committee of the two Houses, and Maximilian had entered into a truce with his enemies; the horrors of civil war were about to be removed from the two countries, when England was to pass under the control of a Protector, and Germany from the hands of great tyrants into those of small ones. The new Director proceeded with great vigor to restore the disordered government. He promulgated municipal regulations, and stringent enactments against smuggling; established customs duties on wines and liquors (except for domestic consumption), and on beaver skins. He ordered an election of eighteen men from Manhattan, Breukelen, Amersfoort (Flatlands) and Pavonia, (N. J.), from whom he selected nine, as "Interlocutors and Trustees of the Commonalty," or "Tribunes" of the people.

These Nine Men were to hold courts of arbitration weekly, and were to give advice to the Director and Council, on all matters submitted to them. They received their appointment September 25, 1647. Three were taken from the merchants, three from the burghers and three from the farmers. Thus was preserved and continued the system of giving representation to the various vocations, which formed the groundwork of municipal organization in the Netherlands. The tribunal was of very ancient date. Indeed, in its essence, it was a method of adjudication which prevailed in one form or another from time immemorial: of which the village elders were the most ancient type. The "Tribunal of Well-Born Men," or "Men's Men," had existed for centuries in the Netherlands. It originally had separate criminal and civil jurisdiction, the first exercised by thirteen and the second by seven men. These courts were afterward united, the number of members being thirteen until 1614, when it was altered to "Nine Well-Born Men." This institution was now introduced, as the form of government for the capital of New Netherland and surrounding villages. It was provided that six should annually retire, and that twelve names were to be referred to the Director, with the Nine who had served during the year, from whence the new board was to be selected. The board met on the 15th of November, when the Director communicated his views by written message, in consequence of illness. They consented to appropriations for schools and for completing the church; but declined to repair the fortifications, on the ground that, as the company had agreed to incur expenditures of that class, the money for that purpose ought to come out of the funds derived from customs and excise duties, and from tolls paid at the company's mills. This board, therefore, was also a legislative body, in the ancient sense; that is, a body without whose consent taxes could not be lawfully assessed nor vested rights modified.

The Director prosecuted with vigor his plans for the government of the province, and the Nine Men were equally determined to secure popular government. We cannot dwell upon these exciting events. The Director undertook to compel the Patroon of Rensselaerswyck to recognize his supreme authority; and he caused the arrest of Van Der Donck, President of the Nine Men, for preparing a journal to be used against him, who was taken to jail by a file of soldiers. On the 21st of February, 1648, Stuyvesant issued a call for a meeting of citizens and delegates of the militia, which was held March 4th. At this meeting it was ordered that Van Der Donck continue under arrest until examined, and on the 5th a commission was appointed for that purpose. On the 15th the Director called his Council and other public officers together as a Court of Impeachment, and Van Der Donck was expelled from the Council and the Nine Men. Agents were now sent to Holland by the colonists, of whom Van Der Donck was principal, to present their complaints. Stuyvesant was represented by Van Tienhoven, his secretary.

The Netherlands now became the scene of a prolonged contest. The petitioners laid their complaints before the States-General at great length, and demanded burgher government, freedom from customs, tenths and other burdens, the abolition of the export duty on tobacco, commercial reforms and the settlement of the boundaries of the province. The reply to the complaints of the colonists contained a contrast with the New England colonies. While it was true that the people of New England were free from customs duties, they were assessed directly for all the purposes of government. The only internal tax paid in New Netherland was the tax upon tapsters, which was returned to them by those who frequented the taverns and by travelers; citizens might lay in as much wine and beer as they pleased, free of excise. It was also deemed an advantage to the Dutch, that they had neither a quarterly meeting of the magistrates of each province, nor a General Assembly of all the provinces, for the expenses, allowances and wages of these were a public charge. The papers were referred to a committee, which submitted a report April 11, 1650. This recommended a liberal and popular policy. All grievances were to be remedied, and Stuyvesant was to be recalled; the Patroons were to be "obliged to settle their colonists in the form of villages;" the Nine Men were to be given additional judicial functions, and were to be continued for three years; a burgher government was to be established in New Amsterdam; the Patroons or their deputies, and delegates from the commonalty, were to choose representatives in the Council; a judicial system was to be erected in the province; and the colonists, or the Patroons thereof, and the commonalty, were to be convoked on questions of expenditure. The Amsterdam Chamber opposed this "Provisional Order," and submitted a counter proposition merely modifying the original "Privileges and Exemptions." Stuyvesant paid no attention to either.

At this time the Netherlands were greatly agitated on account of the English civil war. Charles I was beheaded July 30, 1649, and his family were at the Hague. The Stadtholder, William II of Orange, who had married Mary, the eldest daughter of the English king, arrested six of the most eminent deputies of the States General, and surrounded that Assembly with troops; and had attempted to seize the city of Amsterdam for opposing his will. His despotic career was suddenly cut short by death; and his posthumous son, William III, afterward King of England, was excluded from the Stadtholdership, under the influence of Oliver Cromwell.

The Nine Men now prepared new charges against Stuyvesant. The Vice-Director and Schout-fiscal, on the 28th of February, 1651, drew up a long protest against the Director, who thereupon issued a peremptory order expelling the former from the Council, which he refused to recognize, whereupon he was arrested by soldiers and lodged in a guard house. The conflict with the Patroon continued, and the Director asserted his sovereignty by establishing a separate village government for Beaverwyck, on the 10th of April, 1652. Meantime, the States General revived the Provisional Order, the enforcement of which was favored by all the Chambers, except Amsterdam. The Amsterdam Directors were therefore compelled to yield in a measure to the popular demand; and on the 4th of April, on the application of Van Der Donck, they granted an order directing the establishment of a burgher government in New Amsterdam, and making other concessions. In December the Amsterdam Chamber censured the Patroon, for endeavoring to maintain his manor as a principality independent of the Director. Burgher government was instituted in New Amsterdam, February 2, 1653. The burgomasters and schepens constituted a Court of Sessions and a Common Council. Among their first acts in the latter capacity was the taking of measures for the defense of the city, and the raising of money therefor.

On the 20th of May, Captain John Underhill hoisted the colors of Parliament on Long island, and issued an address assailing the Director and his administration, charging him, among other things, with having "unlawfully imposed taxes contrary to the privileges of freemen, violated liberty of conscience," imprisoned both English and Dutch without trial, enacted general laws without the approbation of his government, and "imposed magistrates on freemen without election and voting." "This great autocracy and tyranny," read the address, "is too grievous for any brave Englishman and good Christian to endure." Patriotism, however, was then superior to every other consideration, with the colonists. They would not rally to the standard of a foreign foe, even when it was raised in defense of their most ancient rights, and the liberties for which they had been stubbornly contending. Underhill was ordered to quit the province, and he went.

The war resulted in high prices, and in September, pursuant to call of the Director, delegates from the several colonies and courts assembled at New Amsterdam, as a provincial diet, to legislate for their reduction.

In July, funds were still lacking to complete the fort, and on the 28th the authorities of New Amsterdam were called upon for further supplies. The magistrates and burghers thereupon demanded the surrender of the wine and beer excise to the city treasury, in which case they pledged themselves that "means would then be provided to meet whatever expenses might occur." The Director refused, and the contest continued until the 25th of November, when he consented to give up the excise on beer and wine "consumed within the city," on condition that the magistrates should keep the public works in repair, maintain the civil and ecclesiastical servants, and lease the excise to the highest bidder, "after the manner of Fatherland." At the same time he imposed an additional duty on wines and distilled liquors "which," he said, "are used in this country in the greatest profusion." Thus, as the outcome of this conflict, Stuyvesant was forced to surrender his assumed prerogative of imposing and applying excise duties, and the municipality was restricted to its own legitimate revenues, and undertook to defray its own legitimate expenditures. It was an advance toward local control of local affairs, and a restriction thereto. There can be no doubt that the magistrates had before them the Dutch model of municipal supremacy, but the ambition of the Director was an insurmountable obstacle to the realization of any such purpose.

On the day when this reasonable adjustment was reached, an important convention was held at the Stadt Huys. Long island was infested with gangs of lawless men, and a convention of four towns had been held in October to consider their depredations. The result of that convention was, a call for the convention held November 25th, to consider what was best to be done "for the welfare of the country and its inhabitants, and to determine on some wise and salutary measures to arrest these robberies." The result of this informal convention was, the issuing of writs by the Director, on the 8th of December, for the assembling of a convention of delegates from all the towns, to be held on the 10th.

The delegates from the English towns, present at the November Convention, would not permit the Director-General nor one of his Council to preside over the body, as he "could not protect them" from depredations. "If the Director-General," they said, "acting for the Privileged West India Company, will not protect us, then we are compelled to provide against our own ruin and destruction, and therefore we will not pay any more taxes." The Director said that these declarations "smelt of rebellion," and answered that he was ready to protect his subjects with all the means "which God and his liege lords had vouchsafed him," but the answer did not satisfy them. Protection in return for taxation is one of the simplest of propositions. The English towns were undoubtedly emboldened to demand it at this time, as the marauders were emboldened to commit their robberies, by the existence of war between England and the Netherlands.

The towns went still further. They made propositions for a "firmer union" with the magistrates of the city, who replied that they must first consult with the Director and Council. Stuyvesant responded that he had no objection to their uniting with the English towns, and stated that "as they could not out-vote the latter now, it was his intention to grant, at the next election, courts of justice to the villages of Amersfoort (Flatlands), Breukelen and Midwout (Flushing) so as to possess, with Fort Orange, on all future occasions, an equal number of votes." The December Convention was afterward held to be illegal by the Director, on the ground that these villages did not have courts, which could alone legally appoint delegates. There is no reason to doubt the sincerity of the Director, in stating this to be his purpose, particularly as he did subsequently grant courts of justice to the villages named; and we must therefore ascribe to other causes the failure to hold a provincial diet until the close of the administration of Stuyvesant. The concession of local governments, however, was extorted from the Director by the Conventions of 1653.

The December Convention adopted a remonstrance to the Director and Council and the Amsterdam Chamber, drawn by an Englishman, named George Baxter, formerly English secretary of the Director, who is prominent in the history of the times. The opening sentence is significant. "We acknowledge," it reads, "a paternal government which God and Nature have established in the world * * * to which we consider ourselves bound by His word, and, therefore submit." This paternal government was recognized as having Divine sanction and existing in accordance with natural law. The remonstrants then enumerated the sacrifices they had made, and stated that they were "composed of various nations from different parts of the world." These cosmopolitans, however, did not need to go outside of the Netherlands to find the most ample support for the rights they claimed. After expressing their "apprehension of the establishment of an arbitrary government," they proceeded: "It is contrary to the first intentions and genuine principles of every well-regulated government, that one or more men should arrogate to themselves the exclusive power to dispose, at will, of the life and property of any individual; and this by virtue, or under pretense, of a law or order which he might fabricate, without the consent, knowledge or approbation of the whole body, their agents or representatives. Hence the enactment, in manner aforesaid, of new laws, affecting the commonalty, their lives and property, which is contrary to the granted privileges of the Netherlands government, and odious to every free-born man; and principally so to those whom God has placed under a free state, in newly settled lands, who are entitled to claim laws not transcending but resembling, as near as possible, those of Netherland. We humbly submit that it is one of our privileges, that our consent, or that of our representatives, is necessarily required in the enactment of such laws and orders." It was also complained that officers and magistrates were appointed in many places contrary to the laws of the Netherlands, and several without the consent or nomination of the people; and that obscure laws, enacted "without the approbation of the country, by the authority alone of the Director and Council, remain obligatory."

Stuyvesant's answer was in substance a confession that, if the charges were true, they constituted a serious impeachment before the superior tribunal. The laws of the Netherlands were the laws of the province; and if he assumed legislative or executive power not expressly conferred upon him, he was an usurper. He was a Judge of the law, not its maker; and he could in no wise transcend it. Hence he felt compelled to assert that in all affairs in which the country at large was interested the general ordinances had always been sanctioned by the qualified members of the whole province. With regard to local officials he said that "the English not only enjoy the nomination of their magistrates but some of them absolutely usurp their election, and actually appoint whatever magistrates they please, paying no regard to the religions they profess." Some, especially in Gravesend, are Libertines and Anabaptists [a thrust at Baxter] which is unquestionably in contradiction to the general laws of the Netherlands. He would not permit that "the election of magistrates be left to the rabble," and claimed for the Directors the same rights possessed by Patroons, with regard to appointments to office. "Your prayer is extravagant," he said, "you might as well claim to send delegates to the Assembly of their High Mightinesses themselves. Directors will never make themselves responsible to subjects; and the old laws will remain in force." Thus Stuyvesant repudiated Roman checks upon executive power, and the popular rights recognized among the ancient Germans; and asserted a perverted and arbitrary feudalism as the sole law of the province.

The Convention responded (December 13), defending the legality of its existence by an appeal to the "law of Nature," which authorizes all men to associate and convene together for the protection of their liberty and property. Thus popular rights and paternal authority, the power of the people and the power of the government, were claimed by this Convention to be alike imbedded in Nature. This assertion was a reconciliation of German popularism with Roman paternalism; and, with the claims with regard to the magistracy, laid broad and deep the foundations of the civil polity of New York. These foundations are, a Judiciary constituting the bulwark of ancient liberties and vested rights, with an efficient Executive power held completely under the control of the People and their representatives. These natural laws were clearly apprehended and forcibly set forth by the Convention. While phrased by the facile pen of an English secretary, they doubtless but crystallized the thoughts of the descendants of German and Kelt, as they gathered around their firesides and considered the troubles of Europe and the colonies, and discussed the fundamental principles of government. That which exists in the oak exists also in the acorn. In these, the closing days of the year 1653, there dropped from the wide-spreading branches of the ancient Aryan oak a wonderfully symmetrical acorn; and from this acorn there sprang the beautiful American oak under which we are gathered.

Stuyvesant was a legalist, not an idealist, and he saw none of the beauties of this germinal principle of organic liberty. He denied that the law of Nature authorized public meetings for the protection of public liberty. Magistrates alone, and "not all men," he held, are authorized so to assemble. "We derive our authority from God and the Company, not from a few ignorant subjects, and we alone can call the inhabitants together." Tried by Roman law, the Director was right ; tried by German custom, he was wrong. "Blood is thicker than water ;" and the heart of the true Aryan beats tumultuously when an exterior authority is invoked against rights enjoyed by his ancestors from the days when history fades into tradition, and tradition into myth, and myth into fable. Experience has shown that the people cannot always trust parental authority ; and that while enlightened power beneficently exercised is of great value, yet it must always be held to a strict accountability to the people or their immediate representatives, freely and freshly chosen and meeting with frequent regularity, or it will destroy liberty.

This caused the Director no concern. "Such manners and forms of meetings," he said ; "such insults, unprovoked affronts and contempt of the supreme authority, the Director and Council were bound to resist, yea, to punish ;" and he ordered them to disperse forthwith, "on pain of an arbitrary correction." Letters were also sent to the villages of Breukelen, Amersfoort and Midwout, commanding them not to permit their delegates to appear again at any meeting at New Amsterdam, at this conjuncture, as it can cause nothing but mischief. An appeal was thereupon taken to the Amsterdam Chamber. The magistrates of Gravesend forwarded a separate petition, containing assurances of loyalty, which were soon disproved by the people.

The following is the substance of the remonstrance and petition sent to the Amsterdam Chamber by the Convention : "The States General of the United Provinces are our liege lords ; we submit to the laws of the United Provinces ; and our rights and privileges ought to be in harmony with those of the Fatherland, for we are a member of the State, and not a subjugated people. We, who have come together from various parts of the world, and are a blended community of various lineage ; we who have, at our own expense, exchanged our native lands for the protection of the United Provinces ; we, who have transformed the wilderness into fruitful farms—demand that no new laws shall be enacted but with consent of the people, that none shall be appointed to office but with the approbation of the people, that obscure and obsolete laws shall never be revived." The originals were drafted by George Baxter, an Englishman, but the spirit is the same as that which animated all colonists, in seeking to be placed upon an equality with their brethren at home. The colonists sent an agent, Le Bleeuw, as bearer of an appeal to the West India Company, who was received with great coldness, and forbidden to return to New Netherland.

The magistrates of New Amsterdam, on the 24th of December, appealed to the Amsterdam Directors for power to administer the affairs of their municipality "according to the forms of government of the beloved city of Amsterdam, as far as the same is practicable, and to choose a Schout, or to at least nominate two persons for that office, from whom the Director and Council might choose one. They also asked for the whole of the excise ; for power to levy new imposts and taxes, and to take full charge of their own finances, and for the right to lease the ferry between New Amsterdam and Breukelen. It is fortunate for the true growth of the province that Stuyvesant was Director. A less imperious person would have permitted the exact reproduction of the Netherlands system here. Rensselaerswyck would then have been an independent principality, and New Amsterdam an independent city, in which case the permanent results might have been altogether different. It was in the conflict between the paternal and popular forces that the golden mean was to be reached.

The beginning of the year 1654 was marked by vigorous preparations in Massachusetts to send a hostile expedition against New Netherland ; and Baxter undertook the organization of a rebellion on Long island. This led the magistrates of New Amsterdam and neighboring Dutch towns to take measures to repel the fleet and forces which they expected to be sent against them. Intelligence of peace, and of the disposition of the appeals by the Amsterdam Chamber, arrived in the same vessel. Invasion was prevented ; disorder was checked, and the form of government was settled. The Chamber, in strict harmony with its arbitrary dealings in the past, declared it to be "the height of presumption in the people to protest against the government," ordered that "the seditious" of Gravesend be punished in the most exemplary manner, and censured Stuyvesant for having been too lenient with the ringleaders. It seems clear that the Chamber regarded the movement from the beginning as a seditious one in the interest of England by Englishmen ; and proceeded accordingly. New Amsterdam was accorded some concessions, and the question of local magistracies was settled ; the Director thereafter, from time to time, incorporating new towns and conferring on them the privileges granted Breukelen and other settlements.

Oliver Cromwell was now made Lord Protector, Maryland was illumined with the lurid fires of a religious war, and Massachusetts enjoyed its liberties in peace.

The civil supremacy of the Director had become well established in 1656, when a difficulty arose with the Lutherans with regard to the building of a church, which resulted in persecution on the part of Stuyvesant. The Baptists of Flushing also became the objects of his religious zeal, and the Quakers attracted his holy wrath. For this, however, he was rebuked by the Amsterdam Directors. "Let every one," said they, "remain free as long as he is modest, moderate, his political conduct irreproachable, and as long as he does not offend others or oppose the government." Liberalism is not the exclusive property of any class, church or race; illiberalism has been exhibited everywhere. It was Henri IV, of France, who, on the 13th of April, 1598, issued the tolerant edict of Nantes; it was Louis XIV who, after a series of infamous dragonades, revoked it on the 18th October, 1685, against the wishes of Pope Innocent XII, and undertook the extermination of the Reformed faith. The Netherlands learned liberality in the crucible of hate; and it now secured to others that religious liberty which it claimed for all at home. Liberalism is not indifferentism. It does not indicate uncertainty as to what truth is, or weakness in holding it. It is simply the holding of truth in love. Liberalism is the leaven of society; not the lump. If anywhere there is an unleavened lump, the leaven of liberalism is excluded; and liberalism is never more liberal than when it sustains the organized forces of society in affording protection against the unleavened lumps which assail it, and in pulverizing them, if need. New Netherland was not unleavened, and Stuyvesant was prevented from rendering it so.

Virginia, which had resisted Cromwell, capitulated to a force sent out by him in 1657, and his commissioners stipulated with the House of Burgesses that the people "should have and enjoy such freedom and privileges as belong to a freeborn people of England; that trade should also be as free in Virginia as in England; and that no tax, custom or imposition should be laid in Virginia, nor forts nor castles erected therein, without the consent of the General Assembly." This was a concession by external power. We turn from this to the colony, and there we find that there were no elections for members of Assembly from 1660 to 1676. In 1658, the laws of New Plymouth were revised, and an address was issued (September 29), in which the principles of an ecclesiastical commonwealth were again affirmed. Thus Virginia was dominated by a Royal aristocracy and New England by a Church State.

In the beginning of the year 1657 an attempt was made to in-introduce one of those caste distinctions of the Netherlands, which gave to the Dutch Republic marked peculiarities, as contrasted with the English commonwealth. The "burgher right" was then tendered to New Amsterdam. This right conferred important legal, commercial and political privileges. Distinctions were introduced among the burghers of Amsterdam, in 1652, by dividing them into two classes, the Great and Small. The lesser citizenship only conveyed freedom of trade, and the privilege of being received into the respective guilds. The great burghers, who only could hold office, became such by official distinction, inheritance and purchase. This odious legalized system of an aristocratic official caste was formally introduced into New Amsterdam, February 1st, 1657. To the honor of the Dutch founders of this imperial commonwealth be it said, the attempt to sell the great burgher right failed. One year later (1st February, 1658), when the burghers were first permitted to make double nominations for magistrates, Stuyvesant was compelled to invest some of the more prominent citizens with the right in order to fill the offices. He, however, obtained thereby the power to exclude from the privilege of holding office whoever he saw fit, unless they paid for it. It was not until August 5th, 1660, that a separate Schout was obtained. Thus was finally secured to New Amsterdam a large portion of the municipal rights intended to be conferred years before.

The time had now come to disintegrate the feudal shell in which the seeds of liberty in New Netherland were inclosed, in order that they might germinate and freedom have a chance to grow. Charles II landed at Dover May 26th, 1660. Connecticut was consolidated in April, 1662, under a charter confirming its established system. The English towns on the western end of Long island, in 1663, entered into negotiations with the view of submission to its government, and a descent was made on Midwout (Flatbush), to compel its inhabitants to unite in a war against Mannhattans. This led to a convention of delegates appointed by the magistrates of the loyal towns, which met at New Amsterdam July 6, 1663, and engaged to maintain an armed force for public protection. Another convention assembled November 1st, pursuant to a call of Director Stuyvesant, made at the request of the magistrates of New Amsterdam, which addressed a remonstrance to the Amsterdam Directors, setting forth the imperiled condition of the province, arising from wars with the Indians and the English. Stuyvesant, on the 15th, accepted the terms of Connecticut, by which Westchester was ceded to it, and the English towns were left to themselves. These towns now entered into a "Combination" to manage their own affairs, and elected John Scott as their President. On the 27th of February, the sheriffs and magistrates of the Dutch towns assembled at Midwout and adopted a remonstrance to the Amsterdam Directors, setting forth the outrages committed by Scott. At the request of the magistrates of New Amsterdam a General Assembly of delegates for all the towns and colonies was now called. This provincial diet was convened on the plan established by the Provisional Order of 1650, and it met on the 10th of April, 1664. The Director stated that the West India Company had expended 1,200,000 guilders in the government of the province, over and above the revenues it had received therefrom, and asked that supplies be voted for the general defense. This was refused, and then the Diet adjourned for one week to consider the propriety of again appealing to the home government. Meantime, a military force arrived, with instructions to check the English, reduce the revolted villages and replace the removed magistrates; but it was utterly inadequate for the purpose. When the Diet re-assembled, therefore, it advised that peace be made with the Indians, and decided that it would be useless to enforce the orders of the Amsterdam Directors against the English towns. Connecticut thereupon extended its authority over them, and in September Stuyvesant surrendered to Richard Nicolls, deputy of the Duke of York, who encouraged the people to believe that their liberties now were to be at least as great as those enjoyed in New England.

A Convention of two delegates from each town on Long island was held at Hempstead in February, 1665, for the purpose of receiving from the Governor the Code which he had prepared, and which was called "the Duke's Laws." The Code was chiefly compiled from laws then in force in New England, "with abatement of the severity against such as differ in matters of conscience and religion." The only popular feature of the Code was the one organizing Town Courts. It provided for the election, by a majority of the freeholders of each town, of eight overseers, to try minor causes and adopt local ordinances, subject to the approval of the Court of Assize. Four were to retire each year, and from them a constable was to be elected on the first or second of April, to act with the overseers, his election being subject to confirmation by the Justice, in whose hands the local administration was really vested. Long island, Staten island and parts of Westchester were united in a Shrievalty, called Yorkshire, and divided into three districts, called ridings. The English system of Sheriffs' Courts was introduced. The Governor and Council appointed each year a Sheriff for the whole of Yorkshire, and three Justices of the Peace for each riding, who were to continue in office during the Governor's pleasure, and were to hold a Court of Sessions in each riding three times a year, in which the Governor, or any of his Councillors, might preside. Besides their local duties, the High Sheriff and Justices were to sit with the Governor and his Council in the Supreme Court of the Province, called the Court of Assize, which was to meet at New York once a year, on the last Thursday in September. This Court was also a legislative body, as it was invested with "the supreme power of making, altering and abolishing any laws," except the customs laws, in which it could only recommend changes. Town officers were required to make assessments annually, and taxes were levied through the Courts of Sessions, which made requisitions upon the town authorities. The delegates to the Convention asked for power to choose their local magistrates, which was denied, the Governor exhibiting his instructions from the Duke of York, "wherein the choice of all the officers of justice was solely to be made by the Governor." They desired, and they had the right to demand, the control of public expenditure and the institution of a General Assembly. King Charles (in 1663) had given Rhode Island a charter guaranteeing it self-government, and yet English as well as Dutch towns on Long island were denied the right of representation. The colonists were grievously disappointed, but they continued the struggle, resulting in consolidating them still more firmly in defense of equal rights and personal liberty.

A report on the state of the province, made in July, 1665, sets forth that liberty of conscience prevailed, that trial by juries existed, that there were no laws contrary to the laws of England and no courts-martial except for soldiers; that there was no tax payable upon corn or cattle, and the country had little other product; and that the rate for public charges had been agreed upon in General Assembly and was managed exclusively by the Governor, Council and Court of Assize.¹

¹ The instructions by Charles II to the Commissioners sent out to settle the affairs of the provinces and hear cases of appeal, with the reports of the Commissioners, reveal very clearly his purpose. The Commissioners were Col. Richard Nicolls, Sir Robert Carr, George Cartwright and Samuel Maverick. These instructions are dated April 23, 1664. The King desired that Governors should hold from three to five years, and that three persons should be nominated to him for the office, from which he would select one. With reference to religious worship, he desired to make no change, unless "they do in truth deny that liberty of conscience to each other which is equally provided for and granted to every one of them by their charter." In his instructions with regard to Massachusetts, the king said that "such who desired to use the Book of Common Prayer may be permitted so to do without incurring any penalty, reproach or disadvantage in his interest, it being very scandalous that any man should be debarred the exercise of his religion, according to

Colonel Nicolls was succeeded as Governor, in 1667, by Lord Lovelace. The new Governor, in 1669, directed the Courts of Sessions to provide the means necessary to repair the palisadoes at New York. The towns refused to pay the taxes levied, because they were denied the privileges conceded to New England, the liberties due all Englishmen, the right that, under the British Constitution, no taxes could be levied except by their own representatives. The Court, sitting at Gravesend, characterized the resolves of the several towns as "false, scandalous, illegal and seditious;" the Governor and Council expressed similar sentiments and ordered the papers to be burned and their principal promoter prosecuted. The Great Charter forced from King John by the barons had provided that, with the exception of the customary feudal aids, "no scutage or aid shall be imposed in our realm save by the Common Council of the realm." Even these grants made in the Great Council were binding only on the barons and prelates who made them; and before the aid of the boroughs, the church or the shire could reach the royal treasury, a separate negotiation had to be conducted with the reeves of each town, the archdeacons of each diocese, and the sheriff and shire court of each county. Lovelace undertook to force the collection of taxes through this latter channel. It was with reluctance that the people of England abandoned the system under Edward, and accepted representation in Parliament instead. But Englishmen had grown wiser since, and no freeman would now relinquish the right. Hence the irrepressible conflict proceeded. The feeling in New the laws and customs of England, by those who, by the indulgence granted, have liberty left to be of what profession in religion they please; in a word, the persons of good and honest conversation who have lived long there may enjoy all the privileges, ecclesiastical and civil, which are due to them, and which are enjoyed by others, as to choose and be chosen into places of government and the like; and that differences of opinion do not lessen their charity to each other, since charity is a fundamental in all religion." In his instructions with regard to Connecticut, after referring to their supposed Presbyterian government, he said that "without in the least restraining them in the free exercise of their religion, but insisting with them as with the rest, that all the rest who dissent from them may have the like liberty without undergoing any disadvantage with reference to their civil interest, but that they enjoy the same privilege with the rest." The Commissioners, in their report May 27, 1665, after giving an account of their visit to New Plymouth, Rhode Island and Connecticut, say that "in all these colonies they freely consented that all administration of justice shall be in the king's name; that all householders shall take the oath of allegiance; that church membership shall not be considered in making freemen; that all persons of civil lives shall have liberty of conscience, so that they deny not their shares of maintenance to the public ministers fairly chosen by plurality of votes." Massachusetts was alone stubborn. It denied the jurisdiction of the Commissioners, and contended that Supreme authority was in the General Court. In a communication to the Governor and Council (July 16), the commissioners say: "The duty which we owe to God, to the King and to all his subjects constrains us to persuade you not to suffer yourselves to be so much misled by the spirit of independency. The King did not grant away his sovereignty over you when he made you a corporation. When His majesty gave you power to make wholesome laws and to administer justice by them, he parted not with his right of judging whether these laws were wholesome, or whether justice was administered according or no. When His majesty gave you authority over such of his subjects as lived within the limits of your jurisdiction, he made them not your subjects nor your supreme authority. That prerogative certainly His majesty reserved for himself. * * * The other colonies have set you so many good examples, even that of Rhode Island, one whom you have so long despised and disowned, and now lately derided for their submission to His majesty." In their report to the King, after referring to the difficulty encountered in the endeavor to persuade Massachusetts to administer justice in the name of the Crown, the Commissioners say: "To elude His majesty's desire of their admitting men civil and of competent estates to be freemen, they have made an act whereby he that is twenty-four years old, a housekeeper, and brings one certificate of his civil life, another of his being orthodox in matters of faith, and a third of his paying ten shillings (besides head money) at a single rate, may then have liberty to make his desires known to the court, and it shall be put to a vote." They then show how this is evaded, remarking that "he that is a church member, though he be a servant and pay only 2d, may be a freeman." Acts of persecution are recounted. "Those whom they will not admit to the communion they compel to come to their sermons, by forcing from them five shillings for every neglect; yet these men thought their own paying one shilling for not coming to prayers in England was an unspeakable tyranny."

York was intensified by the granting of a General Assembly to New Jersey, with the right of freedom from taxation except by its consent. The first assembly met in 1668. The representatives were Puritans, and they adopted the laws of New England.

The contest over the right of no taxation without representation was not limited to New York, however. A revenue collector was sent over from England, with authority to collect the customs in Massachusetts. He accused the General Court of entire disregard of the Navigation Act. The charge was admitted and defended, on the ground that such laws were "an invasion of the rights, liberties and properties" of the colonies, "they not being represented in Parliament." This was in 1671. The same year, the colony of New Plymouth affirmed the rights of Englishmen, under the imposing title of "The General Fundamentals." The enumerated rights were eight in number. The first affirmed the invalidity of legislation imposed without the consent of the body of freemen or their representatives; the second, provided that a Governor and assistants be annually elected by the vote of the freemen. The third to the seventh, inclusive, related to rights of justice and of property. The eighth was a lengthy re-affirmation of the ecclesiastical or church rights sought to be secured by the establishment of the colony. In Virginia, an aristocratic assembly had finally adjourned in 1660 after clothing the Governor with enormous powers, and these powers had now fallen into the hands of a Governor who hated education and despised toleration in religion. Thus Virginia and New England, and also Maryland, were in the hands of despotic parties. In New Netherland, however, the people never tyrannized over each other, and they claimed equal rights and personal liberty for all freemen as against any class and against royalty itself.

France and England declared war against the Netherlands March 17, 1672. The tide of battle went against the Dutch. The people demanded the removal of the disabilities of William III of Orange, then in his twenty-second year, and ambitious to lead the armies of the country. The demand was heeded, and he was made Stadtholder. In 1673, New Netherland was retaken, and the Dutch inhabitants were stirred by the same enthusiasm which had thrilled the hearts of the Dutch in the mother country. They received back the right to nominate their local magistrates amid great rejoicing; and their dismay, therefore, was great when, in 1674, by the treaty of Westminster, they were compelled to surrender their Dutch liberties and return to the jurisdiction of an English despotism.

The conduct of the new Governor, the tyrannical Andros, realized their worst fears. He revived the abuses of the Lovelace administration. Taxes were levied without authority of law, and the protests of the people were treated with scorn. In response to the demand for a popular legislative assembly, the Duke of York wrote to Governor Andros that popular assemblies were dangerous to government, and that he did not see any use for them. He attempted to force upon the colonists a law, enacted on his own mere motion, establishing for three years the rate of customs. This inflamed the colonists to the point of resistance. On the expiration of the law by its own terms in November, 1680, the merchants refused to pay any more duties. They sued the Collector of the Port for detaining goods, the duties on which had not been paid, and he was arrested, brought before the Court of Assize charged with high treason, and sent to England for trial. The Duke of York, fearful that the expenses of the colony would become a charge upon his own private purse as they had been on the treasury of the West India Company, thereupon sent out Colonel Dongan as Governor, with power to convene a General Assembly. This body met at Fort James, New York, October 17, 1683. Its records are lost, and the names of its members cannot be given; but its works endure. The facts illustrate the uncertainty of human fame, and the imperishable character of human achievement.

The first act of this, the first General Assembly of the Colony of New York, was entitled, "Charter of Liberties and Privileges granted by His Royal Highness to the Inhabitants of New York and its dependencies." Its first sentence contained the phrase: "People met in General Assembly," to which James objected, when he became king of England, on the ground that it is "not found in any other Constitution in America;" and this royal objection, with the character of this charter, places New York in advance of any other colony, and proves that it held the leadership in the struggle for equal rights and ancient liberties. The entire sentence read that "under His Majesty and Royal Highness, James Duke of York, Albany, etc.," "supreme legislative power shall forever be and reside in the Governor, Council and People met in General Assembly." The year of its adoption witnessed the establishment of a free and representative government in Pennsylvania, and the first session of its General Assembly.

James became King of England in February, 1685. At a meeting of the Committee of Trade and Plantations March 3, this minute was ordered entered: "The Charter of Incorporation of the Province of New York being read, His Majesty doth not think it fit to confirm," and the government was ordered assimilated to that projected for New England. Observations upon the charter were entered, which show that the objections were political, and demonstrate that the colonists were in advance of the inhabitants of other colonies, in their demands upon the Crown as well as in their concessions of personal liberty.

The Charter opened grandly. It declared "that for the better establishing of the government of this province of New York, and that Justice and Right may be equally done to all persons within the same, Be it enacted by the Governor, Council and Representatives now in General Assembly met and assembled, and by the authority of the same." And the charter, after providing for the election of a General Assembly, enacted that the Representatives of the Province, with the Governor and his Council, shall be the Supreme and only legislative power. To this the King quietly inquired: "whether this does not abridge the acts of Parliament that may be made concerning New York." His observation upon this provision seems to be somewhat in conflict with his remarks on the provision that the inhabitants be governed by and according to the laws of England. "This privilege," he said, "is not granted to any of His Majesty's Plantations." Of the provision that sheriffs and other officers of justice be appointed with like powers as in England, he said, "This is not so distinctly granted or practiced in any other plantation." The charter provided "that the exercise of the chief magistracy and administration of the government over the said province shall be in the said Governor, assisted by a Council with whose advice and consent, or with at least four of them, he is to rule and govern the same according to the laws thereof." To this the King objected that "no other Governor is restrained from doing any thing without the Council." The charter provided "that according to the usage, custom and practice of the Parliament of England, sessions of a General Assembly be held in this province once in three years at least," to which the King objected that triennial sessions are "an obligation upon the government greater than has been ever agreed to in any other plantation, and the grant of such a privilege has been rejected elsewhere, notwithstanding a revenue offered to induce it." The provision that acts be presented to the Governor and Council for approval, said the King, "seems to take away from the Governor and Council the power of framing laws as in other plantations." The provision limiting to two years the power of the Lord Proprietor to dissent to bills, said James, "does abridge the King's power and has been thought inconvenient in other plantations." The provision that the Assembly is to judge of the elections and qualifications of its members, "may be inconvenient," he said, "and is not practiced in some other plantations." Of the provision guaranteeing liberty of conscience, the King remarked that it "is practiced in the proprietaries;" and it was the only section which he seems to have affirmatively approved, although there were other important provisions which he did not explicitly disapprove.

The view of the legislative function contained in the New York Charter of Liberties is Roman, not Saxon. It recognizes the joint possession of this power by the Executive and his Councillors, and the People, corresponding to the old Roman Executive, Elders and Burgesses. The English people, on the other hand, claimed exclusive supremacy for Parliament¹ and the Saxon idea had its logical development in the system of government by what is substantially an Executive Committee of Parliament; for while the Ministers are commissioned by the Crown, their tenure depends upon the pleasure of Parliament. Some of the colonists of New York had experienced oppression at the hands of the people of New England. The evils of executive and of parliamentary supremacy had each been made manifest, in turn, in England. Hence it was sought to guard against tyranny by majorities as well as by rulers, by providing checks against both. It was thought that ancient and vested rights would be best preserved by associating the Executive and his advisers with the representatives of the people, and giving to them jointly the supreme legislative power. This union of Roman paternalism and Anglo-Saxon popularism needed but the restoration of the old German right of choosing their leader, to make the system the perfect synthesis of organic liberty.

The entire Charter we are considering is a clear and crisp declaration of the ancient liberties of all Aryan freemen. The remaining portion reads substantially as follows: "Every freeholder and freeman shall vote without restraint. No freeman shall suffer but by judgment of his peers, and all trials shall be by a jury of twelve men. No tax, tillage, assessment, custom, loan, benevolence or imposition whatever shall be laid, assessed, imposed or levied, on any of his Majesty's subjects within this province or their estates, upon any manner of color or pretense, but by the act of the Governor, Council and Representatives of the People in General Assembly met and assembled. No seaman or soldier shall be quartered on the inhabitants against their will. No martial law shall exist. No person professing faith in God by Jesus Christ shall at any time be any ways disquieted or questioned for any difference of opinion." Appended to the charter was a continued bill of customs. Its approval by the Governor was the signal for great rejoicing.

Thus was set forth in admirable phrase the rights for which the Dutch and English colonists had unitedly contended for nearly half a century. It was the full fruitage of freedom, bursting the shell of feudalism, and clothing itself in more perfect organic form, evolved from ancient systems which had become incapable of preserving and protecting the liberties of the people. Alike in spirit and substance it presented in most perfect form that which was dearest to all—to the eighteen nationalities represented in the province under Stuyvesant—to English and Dutch, their common German ancestors and Keltic neighbors, so long crushed under Druidic dominion. While all these races were united in framing this "Charter of Liberties," still it is true that we owe our priceless inheritance primarily to that spirit of freedom and catholicity, instinctive in the Dutch and purified amid the conflicts of the Netherlands, and to that Dutch eclecticism, fostered by the mingling of races and religions, which enabled the statesmen of that day to devise for the protection of human freedom a liberal conservative government, which, when perfected, would permit change when the people will it, and prevent it when they do not.

The distinguishing feature of the colonial policy of James II was his attempt to consolidate all the colonies, from Maine to the Delaware river, as the Dominion of New England, under the government of Andros. In 1686, he abolished the General Assembly of New York, and authorized the Governor, with the assent of the Council, to enact such laws as he might deem best; printing presses were forbidden and odious taxes were levied. The same year he took away the charters of Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and appointed Andros Governor of all the provinces of New England. Andros ruled with a strong hand in Massachusetts. He permitted nothing to be printed without his sanction; he abolished popular representation; prohibited voting by ballot; forbade town meetings; allowed the public schools to go to ruin. He overthrew the civil rights of New Hampshire, and sought (in 1687) to secure the charter of Connecticut, but the heart of the Charter Oak beat too truly against him. The same year, religious liberty was proclaimed in New England. In April, 1688, New York and New Jersey were included in the New Dominion.

William III married Mary, daughter of the Duke of York, in 1677, and followed it by aggressions upon the States General. His imperious will and good judgment fitted him for Liberator of England. He landed at Torbay, November 5, 1688. News of the accession of William and Mary reached Boston, April 4, 1689, and on the 18th the inhabitants rose in rebellion. Andros was imprisoned, and before the 10th of May, all New England was administering government under the old charters. New York rose in revolt on the 31st of May, and Jacob Leisler was subsequently appointed Lieutenant-Governor by a Committee of Safety. In all the land, there was only one place where there was sufficient cool judgment to await the will of the new authorities; and that was in Albany. The municipal authorities of this city proclaimed William and Mary, but refused to acknowledge Leisler until compelled to in the spring of 1690. In 1691, he was tried and executed for treason. The same year, Governor Sloughter arrived, with instructions to re-establish the Assembly; and thus the sturdy Dutchmen received a large measure of their rights from the hands of a Dutch king. The old liberties were restricted, however. The Test Act was established. The new Governor was instructed "to permit liberty of conscience to all persons except Papists." This was a natural result of the conflicts in England, but the proscription did not take root in New York. The General Assembly of 1691 passed the original Charter of Liberties, with some changes in reference to churches, but it was repealed by the King in 1697.

Voluntary submission to ancient Law, judicially expounded by their own freely recognized elders, was the simple but secure safeguard of primitive Aryan liberties. Equality among land-owners, the decisions of all new questions in the popular assembly, and voluntary submission to a freely chosen leader, were the simple but effective securities of equal political rights among early Indo-European races. When the elders or senate infringed upon the rights of the people, the leader, prince or king became their protector and judge. When petty princes denied popular rights, emperors preserved them; when they were invaded by emperors, princes and people combined for their preservation. When all united to crush liberty, it found an asylum in America. Vested rights, popular liberties and ancient law, preserved inviolate by local tribunals, found their best protection in the Netherlands. On the Italian peninsula, the King was Executive and Judge; and he became such in England through the Norman Conquest. But the representatives of the people were the law makers and tax imposers. The Dutch and English colonists of New Netherland combined their ancient inheritances, and affirmed their common rights in the Charter of Liberties, which was a guarantee of the freedom of each as against the other, and of all as against Royal power. The King appointed the Governor and Council, who constituted the Executive and Judicial powers and shared in the Legislative power. But they were to govern according to law; the laws of England and the laws of the province. From the earliest days of conflict between Royalty and People, the taxing power had been the effective means of protection to the latter. They secured their rights, by granting or withholding revenue. Thus the colonists expected to preserve their liberties. Governor and Council were the paid executors of their will and the judges of their laws. Their representatives, with these paid servants appointed by the King, constituted the supreme legislative power. In England there was a perpetual conflict for sovereign rights, between Crown and Parliament. It was proposed to settle the question in New York, as between Executive and Legislative authority, by denying sovereignty to either, and affirming it to rest in the people alone. Hence, when they wrote "the People" in the Charter of Liberties, they asserted their own sovereignty and denied the sovereignty alike of King and Legislature. Then, as clearly as to-day, and more clearly in New York than anywhere else, was it perceived that the only enduring foundations of organized society are, Scrupulous regard for the equal rights of all, protected by the securities of Law as expounded by an independent Judiciary, the efficiency of a carefully-guarded Executive, the supremacy of the Legislature and the sovereignty of the People, all alike guaranteed by Charter or Constitution, and impartially maintained by all the powers of Government.

The principles for which the colonists of New Netherland struggled so bravely continued to govern the action of the people, and were placed in the framework of the organic system and carried out in practical administration, as far as possible. We shall follow the history of their perfection, and trace the record of their struggles. They sought to preserve the widest liberties for the individual, to restrict the governmental power of the people as well as of rulers so far as personal liberty is concerned and the rights of minorities, and to render perfect the autonomy of local as well as general governments, while reserving sovereignty to the people. Governments possessed only such powers as constitutions and laws gave them. When the first State Constitution was framed, the ancient Aryan freehold principle was continued as the basis of suffrage. Reverence for religion and liberty in its exercise were combined with the Dutch and Roman repugnance to ecclesiasticism in civil government, by prohibiting ministers from holding office; a restriction only done away with in 1846, and then by a small majority in the Constitutional Convention. The framers of the first Constitution fettered the legislative power with a Council of Revision and the executive power with a Council of Appointment, upon principles still applied in a simplified form, in order to guard against aggressions upon personal rights from either direction.

The principles underlying the New York system were applied in the structure of the Federal Constitution. New York occupied the center of political gravity. It had absorbed Keltic spirituality and German service, vivified by the life and consecrated by the death of the Galilean, but restricted by the Germano-Roman opposition to priestly dominion. It had received the English principle of popularism, regulated by the ancient Aryan principle of non-interference with personal and vested rights, and their judicial interpretation. It had inherited the Roman principle of paternalism, governed by the German principle of free choice of the executive by the people, and the English principle of restraint by the people's representatives. It had the ancient dread of any government with the modern appreciation of its benefits, and it sought to combine both by constitutional regulation and judicial arbitrament. It applied all the resources of statesmanship to the preservation of the equilibrium between these forms of liberal forces, alike in the written and unwritten law, and gave to them energizing vigor as well as conservative power. It recognized the weakness of the old Confederacy, and it feared the strength of a Federal Union. The dangers of each having been avoided, it threw all the weight of its influence in the direction of realizing its exalted ideal in the Union of States as in the Commonwealth itself. With keen foresight and wise statesmanship, it has exerted the power of its superior political system to the development of material and moral greatness; and all its imperial resources are now as then applied to the common benefit of all the people.

A great commercial artery to-day runs through New York as centuries ago another carried the life current through New Netherland to England. To-day, a great agricultural region, fertile in soil and rich in production, surrounds the cities which have been built up by this commerce, as centuries ago England was thrifty in agricultural life. Thus, under one jurisdiction, New York combines the twin sources of greatness, the municipal life of the Netherlands and the rural life of England, as in the beginning it drew equally from the populations of both; and it becomes her, while preserving carefully the equal balance between them, now as then, to bestow her fostering care upon each. If to-day we have advanced somewhat beyond our Dutch ancestors; if we have simplified and amplified the machinery of government, broadened suffrage, enlarged the direct power of the people, and lost the ancient fear of the ministry, let us not forget that the underlying principles are and must ever remain the same, and that it is to those excellent householders that we owe the American system for reconciling liberty with order and progress with conservatism, to the preservation of ancient Aryan law-protected freedom in its most unrestricted sense, and its energizing in all that concerns the common interests of our common humanity.

PLATE A

PROPRIETARY GOVERNMENTS.

It was not until the arrival of Peter Minuit as Director-General, in 1624, that the different settlements of New Netherland were properly united under a single government. He bought Manhattan island from the Indians, in 1626, for "the value of sixty guilders,¹" and established himself there with his Council, Oppper Koopman and Schout. The Oppper Koopman was next in authority to the Director and Council. He was the chief commissary, book-keeper and provincial secretary. The Schout was public prosecutor, high sheriff and customs officer. Exclusive executive, legislative and judicial power and authority were vested in the Director and Council. The Dutch Roman law and the ordinances enacted from time to time constituted the law of the land. Appeals from the judgments of the Court of the Director and Council lay to the States General, or the Court of Holland. Many impediments, however, were thrown in the way of such appeals.²

MANORIAL SYSTEM.

The West India Company's College of Nineteen, June 7, 1629, issued a "Charter of Privileges and Exemptions," which provided that any member of the Company who should purchase of the Indians and found in any part of New Netherland (except Manhattan), a colonie of fifty persons over fifteen years of age, should be in all respects the feudal lord or Patroon of the territory of which he should thus take possession. The Patroon had power to appoint officers and magistrates in all towns and cities on his lands; to hold manorial courts, from which, in cases where the judgment exceeded fifty guilders, the only appeal was to the Director-General and Council—in short, to hold and govern his great manor with as absolute rule as any baron of the Middle Ages. The power of the Patroons over their tenants was almost unlimited. No "man or woman, son or daughter, man-servant or maid-servant," could leave a Patroon's service during the time they had agreed to remain, except by his written consent, no matter what abuses or breaches of contract existed on the part of the Patroon. This charter also prescribed regulations and granted privileges with regard to trade, gave to the freemen all the land they could cultivate, and exempted them from taxation for ten years. Churches and schools were required to be established, and the manufacture of cloths was prohibited. The Company retained the fur trade, and fettered commerce. Several Directors of the Company availed themselves of the advantages it offered. The Patroon of Rensselaerswyck, however, was the only one who established a manorial court; and he rendered the privilege of appeal nugatory by exacting of his tenants, as a condition to the occupation of land, that they would not avail themselves of it. This monopoly had a disastrous effect upon the colony; differences arose between the Company and the Patroons, and a new policy was, therefore, inaugurated. In 1638, free emigration was encouraged; and in 1640 (July 19) the College of Nineteen passed an ordinance materially modifying the Charter of Privileges and Exemptions. This policy of free emigration, free lands and free trade—incomplete as it was—increased at once and largely the prosperity of the colony.

ADVISORY COUNCILS.

The Indians in the neighborhood of Manhattan were not included in the treaty of Tawasentha.⁷ Troubles with them, and complications with the English, now began to seriously embarrass the colony. The first popular assemblage was called by Director Kieft, August 23, 1641, to consider the course best to be taken to obtain the surrender of an Indian who had murdered an aged and quiet settler, Claes Smits, in revenge for the wanton murder of his uncle, committed in 1626. The meeting was held August 29. At this meeting it was resolved to appoint "Twelve Select Men," to advise with the Director-General with respect to the condition of affairs in the colony.⁸ Thus was constituted the first representative body within the limits of the present State of New York. It possessed no legislative powers, however. "The Twelve Men" were again convened January 21, 1642, on account of Indian troubles. At this meeting, they formally demanded popular representation in the government, and an enlargement of the Council. Their demand was refused, and on the 12th of February they were abolished. Peace was concluded with the Long Island Indians, March 22, 1643, and with the Hackingsacks (New Jersey Indians) on the 22d of April, following.

THE EIGHT MEN.

The River Indians were dissatisfied with the treaty concluded in the spring. The war growing more general and vindictive, Director Kieft called the people together again, in September, 1643, and requested them to choose from among themselves a new advisory council.¹ "The Eight Men" were accordingly selected on the 13th, and met for the first time on the 15th. They convened every Saturday for deliberation, for some time, and were again convoked June 18, 1644. The war with the Indians closed in 1645, treaties of peace being executed with some of the Long Island Indians May 29, with the Mohawks at Fort Orange in July, and with the Manhattans at New Amsterdam August 30. The Eight Men were accordingly dissolved.

The Eight Men seized the reins of power with more vigor than their predecessors. They opposed the administration of Director Kieft, sent pathetic appeals and urgent remonstrances to the States General, denied the power of the Director to impose taxes, and were earnest in their demands for popular rights, in the same measure and to the same extent enjoyed by the people at home. Their petitions were heeded, and Petrus Stuyvesant was sent out to govern the province.

THE NINE MEN.¹

Director Stuyvesant ruled with rigor, and without success. He soon began to see that he could not administer the government without popular support. Taxes were paid, if at all, with reluctance; the Indians were threatening, and the palisades needed repair; business was dull, and there was a general condition of discontent, depression and danger. The Director, therefore, very unwillingly, followed the advice of his Council, and admitted the people to participation in the government. A general election was ordered in the autumn of 1647, at which the burghers of New Amsterdam, Breuckelen, Amersfoort (Flatlands), and Pavonia (N. J.), were to choose eighteen delegates, from whom the Director and Council were to select nine.

The powers of the Nine Men were defined by proclamation in September, 1647. They were established in order that the colony, "and principally New Amsterdam, our capital and residence, might continue and increase in good order, justice, police, population, prosperity and mutual harmony, and be provided with strong fortifications, a church, a school, trading-place, harbor, and similar highly necessary public edifices and improvements;" that "the honor of God and the welfare of our dear Fatherland, to the best advantage of the company, and the prosperity of our good citizens" be promoted; that "the pure Reformed religion, as it is here and in the churches of the Netherlands," be preserved and inculcated. It was only to give advice on such propositions as the Director and Council chose to submit to it.² The Board could only meet when called together by the Director and Council, and the Director-General was to preside whenever he thought fit. Six of the Nine Men retired annually, and six new members were appointed by the Director from twelve of "the most notable citizens" to be nominated by the Board.

Three of the Nine Men—one from each class—were to sit in turn at the Council board each week; were to attend for a month in rotation on the weekly court, as long as civil cases were before it, and to act subsequently as referees or arbitrators in civil suits, with the right of appeal to the Council, on payment of a fee. Thus they constituted the first inferior court in the present city of New York,

1 "The Tribunal of well-born Men," or of "Men's Men," as it was sometimes called, was one of very ancient date, having been first instituted in the Low Countries, it is supposed, in the year 1295. It originally had separate criminal and civil jurisdiction, the first exercised by thirteen and the second by seven men. These courts were united shortly before the Revolution, the bailiff of each district having been then allowed to administer justice, in both civil and criminal cases, with "Thirteen elected good men." This system, so like the modern jury, continued until the spring of 1614, when the number was altered to "Nine well-born men," who were authorized to administer justice together. [Van Leeuwen's Com., 15.] These tribunals would seem to be a modification of the primitive Witan (Wise Men), who administered justice before the Christian era, among German tribes.

and were the immediate predecessors of the Burgomasters and Schepens, or Common Council of New Amsterdam.

MUNICIPAL SYSTEM.

Agitation continued for the purpose of obtaining the full measure of popular rights enjoyed in Holland, and for the recall of Stuyvesant, notwithstanding his concessions. The movement was led by Adriaen van der Donck, President of the Nine Men, and his expulsion from that Board and from the Council was secured by the Director. Van der Donck, with Jacob Wolphertsen and Jan Evertsen Bout, were then sent to Holland as agents for the colonists. Van der Donck remained abroad three years, when he returned bringing a favorable decree with him.

In accordance with its concessions, Director Stuyvesant issued a proclamation on the day of the Feast of Candlemas, February 2, 1653. It was the intention of the States General to establish "burgher government" in New Amsterdam, in the same form that it existed in Holland; to confer upon the people the right to elect a schout or sheriff, two burgomasters who were in effect the chief magistrates of the town, and five schepens who were to constitute a court with civil and criminal jurisdiction, with appeal to the Supreme Court, consisting of the Director and Council, and that certain privileges of trade should be extended. Burgomasters had existed in Holland since the fourteenth century; and it was intended that they should be elected by the burghers of New Amsterdam, for they were to be "the fathers of the burghery." The Director and Council, however, assumed the power to appoint, in the first instance, and continued to exercise the power until 1658, when the Burgomasters were allowed the privilege of nominating a double number, from which the Director and Council selected the members of the Board for the ensuing year.¹

The Burgomasters succeeded the Nine Men. They were, ex officio, chief rulers of the city; principal church wardens; guardians of the poor, of widows and orphans; without their consent no woman or minor could execute any legal instrument. They assisted in the enactment of city laws, held all city property in trust, farmed the excise, and were keepers of the city seal. Each Burgomaster attended daily, in rotation, during three months in the year, at the City Hall, for the dispatch of public business; and at the end of the quarter called a meeting of the acting and ancient Burgomasters, to whom he reported the state of the city. Each Burgomaster was allowed a salary of 350 guilders; equal to $140. One Burgomaster retired annually from office, and then became City Treasurer for the next year.¹

Local officers, or inferior courts with limited jurisdiction, were authorized in various villages from time to time. Breuckelen was thus incorporated, June 12, 1646.

REPRESENTATIVE CONVENTIONS.

In September, 1653, delegates from the several colonies and courts met at New Amsterdam,¹ and, with the Director and Council, enacted divers ordinances against the excessive prices of merchandise, provisions, etc. The names of the delegates are not on record.

In October, 1653, delegates from Hempstead, Gravesend, Flushing and Middleburgh (Newtown), met at the last-named place and called a convention to be held at New Amsterdam the next month.⁵

The convention thus called met November 26, 1653. The occasion for the meeting was the war between England and Holland.⁶

DUTCH AND ENGLISH DIFFICULTIES.

THE Colony of Plymouth was planted in 1620, under a patent, issued by King James I. In 1631, the Earl of Arundel, President of the Plymouth Company, granted to Robert, Earl of Warwick, the country from the Narragansetts along the shore, forty leagues, and westward to the Pacific Ocean. Connecticut river, however, after its discovery by Block in 1614, was periodically and exclusively visited by Dutch traders, for many years. In 1632, the arms of the States General were erected at the mouth of the river, at a spot called Kievit's Hooek (now Saybrook), purchased from the natives for the West India Company. In 1633, Director Van Twiller purchased an extensive and beautiful table land, called the Connittekoek, lying on the west bank of the river some sixty miles from its mouth. The purchase was concluded June 8. The price paid was "one piece of duffels, 27 ells long, six axes, six kettles, eighteen knives, one sword blade, one shears and some toys." The Commissioners were Jacob Van Curler, Frederick Luffertsen, Gillis Pietero, Claus Jans Ruyter, Domingo Dios, Barent Jacobz Cool and Pieter Lowrensen. Upon this table land a trading post was established, called "The House of Good Hope." The Governor of Massachusetts' Bay speedily protested against this acquisition, as an encroachment upon English rights. Director Van Twiller responded, under date of October 4, 1633, claiming rightfulness of possession by purchase. Meantime, the colony of Plymouth sent out an expedition, which landed about a mile above Good Hope (Hartford) and the English thereafter rapidly settled at various points in Connecticut and upon Long island, which was also claimed under patent from Earl Stirling. These questions devolved upon Director Stuyvesant to adjust. He accordingly appointed two Boundary Commissioners, Thomas Willett, a merchant of Plymouth, and George Baxter, employed by Stuyvesant as his Secretary. The Commission fixed the boundary line on Long island, from the westernmost part of Oyster Bay straight to the sea; on the mainland, the point of departure was on the west side of Greenwich Bay, about four miles from Stamford, the line to run thence up into the country twenty miles, provided it did not come within ten miles of the North river. This was called the Hartford Boundary Treaty of 1650. The States General delayed its confirmation so long as to lose its benefits; and then it was nullified by Connecticut. The English pressed hard upon the Dutch in Westchester, while Massachusetts, under the claim that her patent extended indefinitely westward, proposed to settle a colony on the upper waters of the Hudson, and insisted upon the right to navigate the river in order to reach her alleged possessions. Fort Good Hope was sequestered by the General Court of Hartford, by an act passed April 6, 1654.

After the restoration of Charles II, John Winthrop the younger was sent by the General Court of Hartford as the agent of that colony to England, with instructions to procure a new charter from the king. New letters patent were accordingly issued in April, 1662, confirming the boundaries of the original patent, with enlarged privileges. It gave to the patentees one hundred and twenty miles from the Narragansett river along the coast, "toward the south-west, west and by south," and from that line westward in its full breadth to the South Sea (the Pacific Ocean). The new patent covered not only Long island but all northern New Netherland. For two years Stuyvesant resisted these pretensions to the best of his ability, but was finally glad to accept of a compromise, to the effect that there should be mutual forbearance, the Dutch and English towns to be free respectively from interference from either government. This left the English in undisturbed possession of all they had gained by their aggressions. Under the new charter, the colony of Connecticut bought of the Indians all the country lying between Westchester and the North river, including Spuyten Duyvil creek, which had been purchased by the Dutch fifteen years before.

Charles II, on the 12th of March, 1664, conveyed by patent to his brother James, Duke of York and Albany, all that portion of the present State of Maine included between the rivers St. Croix and Kennebec; also, Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and Long island; together with all the land from the west side of the Connecticut river to the east side of Delaware bay. The next month a fleet of four ships, with a force of three or four hundred men, under the command of Colonel Richard Nicolls, as the lieutenant-governor of the duke, sailed for New England. With Nicolls were joined as commissioners, Sir Robert Carr, Sir George Cartwright and Samuel Maverick, with extraordinary powers for settling all difficulties in the New England colonies, as well as to take possession of the Dutch province and reduce its inhabitants to obedience. The commissioners arrived in Boston late in July, and there was, a delay of nearly a month before the expedition sailed for New Amsterdam. Director Stuyvesant was absent at Fort Orange when the English flag-ship sailed up the bay. He returned as quickly as possible, and on Friday, the 29th, sent a deputation to Nicolls to demand his purpose. With all his energy and daring, however, he could not disguise the defenseless condition of New Amsterdam. There was no alternative but surrender,¹ which he did on the 8th of September, 1664. Governor Nicolls proceeded to organize civil government,² and to that end called a convention at Hempstead³ in March, 1665.

On the 7th of August, 1673, a Dutch fleet of twenty-three ships, being in need of wood and water, anchored in the outer bay of New York, just below Staten island. The fleet was under command of Commodores Cornelius Evertsen and Jacob Benckes. The Dutch inhabitants gladly conveyed to them intelligence of the defenseless condition of the island. The port was then in command of John Manning, captain of an independent company. On the 9th, he communicated with the officers of the fleet, proposing to surrender; whereupon the ship sailed up to the harbor, moored under the fort, landed their crew, and entered the garrison, without giving or receiving a shot. For this act of surrendering to commanders only accidentally within the waters of the province, Manning was subsequently tried and condemned.

The Commodores, on the 12th of August, organized a Council of War consisting of Captains Anthony Colve, Nicholas Boes and Abraham Ferd. Van Zyll. The following month, Captain Colve was appointed temporary Governor, and the fleet proceeded to its destination. The old official titles were restored amid popular rejoicing. The joy of the inhabitants was short, however. Colve was restoring the Dutch system as rapidly as possible, when his government was brought to an abrupt end. New Netherland was conceded to the English by the peace of Westminster, proclaimed March 6, 1674, and a new patent was issued to the Duke of York in June. On the 11th of July, Colve officially announced, at the Stadt Huys, that he must surrender the province on a duly authorized demand. Articles of capitulation were signed September 7; Fort Orange surrendered October 5, and was named Albany, and the Dutch and Swedes on South river capitulated October 12. On the 10th of November, Colve formally gave "New Netherlands and dependencies" over to "Governor Major Edmund Andros, on behalf of His Britannic Majesty," and the province was fully restored to English rule.

Governor Andros asserted his authority from the Connecticut to the Delaware, and the territorial bounds of the colony continued to be thereafter a subject of contention with its neighbors. His conduct of the government created great dissatisfaction.¹

GOVERNOR DONGAN'S ASSEMBLY.

Governor Dongan arrived in August, 1683, and on the 13th of September ordered the election of a General Assembly, consisting of fourteen Representatives, apportioned as follows: Long island, two; Staten Island, one; Esopus, two; Albany and Rensselaer's colony, two; Schenectady, one; Pemaquid and dependencies, one; Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, Elizabeth and other adjacent islands, one; Westchester, four, and New York, four. The Assembly thus elected met at Fort James, New York, October 17, 1683. The death of the King raised a doubt in the mind of Governor Dongan, as to the legal existence of the Assembly. He therefore issued writs for the election of a new one. The records being lost,² the names of the following members, only, can be given:

This Assembly adjourned November 3, 1685, to meet September 25, 1686. King James II, however, abolished the General Assembly June 16, 1686. Intelligence of his action was received in New York September 14, eleven days before the time fixed by the Assembly for its Second Session. Governor Dongan had in the meantime, on the 4th of September, prorogued the Assembly until March 25, 1687. In compliance with the edict of the King, this action was superseded on the 20th of January, 1687, by an order dissolving the General Assembly.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR LEISLER'S ASSEMBLY.

Writs for the election of a General Assembly were issued by Lieutenant-Governor Leisler, after his accession to power in 1689. Every county, except Suffolk, chose representatives. This Assembly held two sessions, one in April and the other in October, 1690.

ENGLISH JURISDICTION.

The Dutch rested their title to New Netherland on the fact that they were the original purchasers from the Indians, and upon the rights acquired by treaties with the Long Island Indians, the River Indians and the Iroquois nation or confederated republic of Indians, whose rule extended far and wide over the continent, and who were the allies of England. The Duke of York's title was not deemed perfect, until the issue of the new patent in 1674, conveying substantially the lands acquired by the peace of Westminster; and the English Governors claimed jurisdiction co-extensive with the original claims of New Netherland. In subsequent voluminous correspondence concerning the conflicting rights of French and English, the latter distinctly placed their claims upon these grounds, and not upon the shadowy and vague title of discovery, or the still more absurd point that Hendrick Hudson was a native Englishman. The English, therefore, succeeded to the Dutch jurisdiction, and questions of territorial boundaries between other provinces, as well as questions of sovereignty with the French, were treated from this standpoint. The Dutch laws, not inconsistent with the laws of England, continued to be the law of the province.

PLATE C

CONSTITUTION OF THE COLONY.

The ancient rights and liberties of all Aryan freemen, with the clear appreciation and affirmation of the sovereignty of the People, constituted the legacy of liberty bequeathed to the colony of New York by the Dutch and English inhabitants of New Netherland. The institutions by which this legacy was to be preserved and this sovereignty made to execute its will were yet to be developed on our own soil, from the germs transplanted from the old world. This has been an unconscious growth, and we scarcely realized the beauties of our construction, until they flashed upon us, revealing rather the workmanship of a superior intelligence moulding the incidents and accidents of history to its purpose, than any design among men. In practical appreciation of the science of government, however, we have led the world and learned little from others; while all peoples have come to us to understand the secrets of its philosophy, and profit by its mechanical application.

The English Constitution is governed by precedent. The Crown and the Parliament, from time to time, had conflicts of authority, and as these became settled they entered into the organic law of the land. Precisely this process went on in this Colony. The General Assemblies were engaged in writing the Constitution in accordance with the will of the People; the Governors endeavored to settle it in accordance with the will of the Crown. This organic growth we will endeavor to trace.

The Charter of Liberties¹ as passed by the General Assembly in 1691 (May 13) was entitled "An Act declaring what are the Rights and Privileges of their Majesties' Subjects inhabiting within the Province of New York." It was vetoed May 11, 1697, the Lords of Trade, in their adverse report, assigning as a reason that it gave "great and unreasonable privileges" to Members of Assembly, and "contained also several large and doubtful expressions." It was, therefore, recommended that the meaningless Charter of Virginia be transmitted to the General Assembly for enactment, but it was never accepted by that body. The conflict between the Crown and the People had already commenced. Toward the close of 1694, the Assembly perceiving that the taxes and revenue, in about three years, had been nearly £40,000, and that the same were generally misapplied, desired the Governor (Fletcher) to account, which he refused to do, saying that it was the business of the Assembly to raise money and of the Governor and Council to lay it out. The Assembly was dissolved and a new and more subservient one elected in 1695, which it was declared was "packed" by the Governor.

The spirit of the Royal government is shown in the veto of the Charter of Liberties, and in the commission and instructions to Earl of Bellomont as Governor, the first issued June 18, 1697, and the second dated August 31 following. He was given an absolute negative on the acts of the Assembly and Council, to the end that nothing may be passed dangerous to the prerogatives of the Crown; he had the power to prorogue the Assembly, to institute Courts, to appoint Judges and to disburse the Revenues. Officers were not to be displaced "without good and sufficient cause" in writing to His Majesty. Schoolmasters must be licensed by the Bishop of London. "For as much as great inconveniences may arise by the liberty of printing within the province of New York, you are to provide all necessary orders, that no person keep any press for printing, nor that any book, pamphlet or other matter whatsoever be printed, without your especial leave and consent first obtained." In other words, the Royal government of Great Britain over the province was a Royal despotism.

The Earl of Bellomont complained to the Lords of Trade, May 13, 1699, that Chief Judge Smith and Attorney-General Graham had given it as their opinion that the King cannot, by law, establish courts of justice by his own authority; that it must be done by act of Assembly. The question thus raised continued to be a disturbing one.¹ Another question which caused some disturbance was the enacting clause. The original and favorite phraseology was, "Be it enacted by His Excellency the Governor and Council, and Representatives convened in General Assembly, and by the authority of the same." This was changed in 1703 to read, "Be it enacted, and it is hereby enacted, by his Excellency the Governor, by and with the consent of Her Majesty's Council and Representatives of the Colony of New York." In 1704, it was sought to insert the word "advice," to which the Assembly objected (June 9). In the Commission to Governor Hunter (October 19, 1709) the style of enacting laws was directed to be, "By the Governor, Council and Assembly," and no other. The words "And it is hereby enacted by authority of the same" were adhered to, however, and in 1748 (Aug. 13) Governor Shirley, of Mass., who had been consulted by Governor Clinton, objected to the phrase, on the ground that while it could not be a "designed encroachment" on the Royal prerogative, yet as it "may have a tendency to accustom the Assemblies to consider their power of passing laws as complete without His Majesty's allowance of them, it should be omitted." This was undoubtedly precisely the reason why the Assembly, from the beginning, insisted on the perfect possession of legislative power by the People, as they had always contended and had finally written their demands in the Charter of Liberties.

Another of the inalienable rights of all freemen was pressed to an issue, and decided early in the history of the colony. In the Governor's instructions, he was required to see that no one preached in the province, except under a license of the Bishop of London, without his (the Governor's) express permission. In 1707, Rev. Francis Makemie, a Presbyterian clergyman, traveling through New York, violated this requirement and was brought before the Governor, to whom he boldly replied: "Your instructions are no law to me." He was indicted, tried and acquitted, the learned Chief Justice (Mompesson) charging the jury that the question was a doubtful one. In 1728, a royal commission was issued to the Bishop of London conferring on him spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction in all the plantations of America. The effort to make the Church of England the established church in New York was steadily pressed, but it was as steadily and very successfully resisted.

The Governor's commission¹ contained this paragraph: "You, the said Robert Hunter, with the consent of our said Council and Assembly, or the major part of them, respectively, shall have full power and authority to make, constitute and ordain laws, statutes and ordinances for the public peace." The supporters of the Royal prerogative claimed that the Assembly had no other right to exercise the power of legislation than that conferred by the King's commission, while the opponents of prerogative insisted that the power to legislate is a natural and indefeasible right of the People, and not a prerogative of royalty.

The spirit and determination of the People were clearly manifest in the first Assembly, but any outward rupture was carefully avoided. A revenue bill was passed, limited to two years, and a bill for the quieting and settling the disorders that have lately happened within this province; another for the establishing and securing their Majesty's present government against the like disorders for the future, and another for the establishment of Courts of Judicature. These bills, or the principles connected therewith and enunciated in the Charter of Liberties, constituted the dividing line between Crown and People during the entire colonial period.

The first Assembly was dissolved and a second chosen in 1692. To this Assembly, the subject of revenue was presented by Governor Fletcher, as the existing law would expire in the following April. The Assembly passed a bill continuing the revenue for two years, the Council sought to amend by making it five years, and the Governor asked that the revenue be settled on their Majesties for their lives. The Assembly adhered to the original bill and was dissolved, the Governor first scolding them because they had done nothing for their Majesties. "There are none of you," he said, impatiently, "but what are big with the privilege of Englishmen, and Magna Charta, which is your right." The next Assembly was little better. It passed a bill continuing the revenue for five years, which the Governor was forced to accept. He, however, lectured them for their "stubbornness" in refusing to make it for the lives of their Majesties, and dissolved them. The fourth Assembly complained of profligacy in expenditures, framed bills for the frontier defenses in such a way that the Governor said they took "the military command away" from him, and was finally dissolved, the Council expressing the opinion that "there is no good to be expected from this Assembly." The fifth Assembly, elected in 1695, held several sessions, with but little conflict with the Governor. The sixth Assembly was berated by Bellomont with a scolding address in May, 1698, and dissolved in June for being "disloyal." The seventh Assembly acted in harmony with the Governor, and was terminated by his death. The eighth Assembly existed through the administration of Lieutenant-Governor Nanfan, and had no political significance. The ninth Assembly, which was the first under Lord Cornbury, presented a marked contrast to it, however, and gave vigorous expression to popular rights.

The profligacy of previous administrations caused the House to adopt an address to the Governor, June 16, 1703, relative to exorbitant fees and exactions, and requesting the appointment of a Treasurer who shall be "a freeholder and inhabitant here." The insecurity of moneys in the hands of Receivers-General, who were non-residents and irresponsible, with the inability to obtain proper accounting, led to this expedient, which was to be productive of important consequences.

At the opening of the fourth session of this Assembly (April 13, 1704), the Governor called attention to "the wicked construction put by the then Chief Justice" on the act relative to disorders, passed in 1691, and requested its amendment. This led to the most energetic assertion of their claims on the part of the various departments of government. The Council (May 9) insisted that the General Assembly consisted of the Governor, Council and House of Representatives; inserted the word "advice" in the enacting clause, and referred to the Colony as a "province," to all of which the Assembly objected; but on the 26th, the House yielded except with regard to the word advice, "always saving their rights, this compliance notwithstanding." The Governor thereupon (June 1) summoned them before him, and required them to state what those rights are, saying that he knew of none which they possessed as an Assembly, "but such as the Queen is pleased to allow."

The Assembly promptly responded. In an address to the Queen, adopted October 24, 1702, referring to the representations that many in the Province were "disaffected to the government and laws of England," they had affirmed their "readiness to support the government of England, as by law established." The colony had been seriously troubled since the inauguration of the Leisler government. Leisler and Milbourn had been executed, and now Col. Nicholas Bayard and Ald. John Hutchins, of the city of New York, had been convicted of high treason. The colonists were determined to secure a reversal of these convictions, and the Legislature passed an act for that purpose, which subsequently received the approval of the Queen, the sentences were annulled, and the attainder removed. Now, when required to state their rights, they not only did so, but they defined and limited the powers of the Governor. They stated in their address (June 9), that they were endeavoring to conform themselves to the true intent of the commissions issued by the Crown. In these commissions, the "deputies of the People" were referred to as the General Assembly. They had yielded on this point, however, but were "dissatisfied with the word advice." The limitation they placed on the legislative power of the Governor must have sounded strangely in those days. "Your Excellency is not directed," they boldly said, "in the making of laws, to take the Advice of Council or Assembly, or both, but manifestly the contrary. Your Lordship's own prudence being wholly and solely intrusted to prevent that whatsoever might be agreed on by the Council and Assembly (in his judgment) to the prejudice of the Crown should not receive the sanction of law." When the Governor had exercised his discretion with regard to the rights of the Crown, he had exhausted the powers of the commission. While he possessed an absolute veto, it was solely for that purpose, and not for the purpose of thwarting the will of the People; and as they claimed "English histories and laws" were "the birthright of Englishmen," they insisted that the words "common consent in Parliament" settled the question of right. The General Assembly proceeded: "This Assembly being intrusted by the People of this plantation with that care of their liberties and properties, and sensible of their own weakness, lest through ignorance or inadvertency they should consent to any thing hurtful to themselves or their posterity (in all things admitting of doubts) are willing to save their rights, and those rights they mean to be that natural and civil liberty, so often claimed, declared and confirmed by the English laws, and which they conceive every free Englishman is entitled to. Whatsoever else may admit of controversy, the People of this colony think they have an undoubted, true and entire property in their goods and estates, of which they ought not to be divested but by their free consents, in such manner and to such ends and purposes as they shall think fit and not otherwise; if the contrary should be admitted, all notion of property would cease." These principles being obnoxious to the Governor, the General Assembly was dissolved toward the close of the year, and a new election ordered.

The tenth General Assembly was as stubborn in its resistance of the claims of the Crown as the ninth had been. In October, 1705, Governor Cornbury received instructions "not to permit any clause whatsoever to be inserted in any law for levying money or the value of money, whereby the same shall not be made liable to be accounted for to us here in England," and not "to suffer any public money whatsoever to be issued or disposed of otherwise than by warrant under your hand, by and with the advice and consent of our said Council." The Assembly having asked for the appointment of a Treasurer, on the ground of gross financial mismanagement by the agents of the Crown, they responded to the Governor on the 10th, that the fact that the Treasurer would be "accountable to the General Assembly" would not prevent his accounting also to the Crown, and on the 12th they denied the right of Council to amend money bills. The Governor declined to approve several bills because contrary to his instructions. On the 27th of September, 1706, the Governor stated to the General Assembly, in his speech, that he was commanded by the Lords of Trade to say that the Council "have undoubtedly as much to do in passing of bills for the granting and raising of money as the Assembly, and consequently have a right to alter or amend any such money bills as well as the Assembly;" and, with reference to another act, he said that they regarded it as "highly presumptuous in the Assembly to pretend to propose or pass any clause whereby her Majesty is restrained in her Royal prerogative of pardoning or reprieving her subjects whenever she sees it reasonable and convenient." The Assembly continuing obstinate, it was dissolved.

The eleventh Assembly was equally tenacious of the rights of the People. It passed, unanimously, in 1708, a series of resolutions claiming the appointment of coroners without their being chosen by the people as a grievance and contrary to law; declaring that it is and always has been the unquestionable right of every freeman in this colony, that he had a perfect and entire property in his goods and estate; that the imposing and levying of any moneys upon her Majesty's subjects of this colony, under any pretense or color whatsoever, without consent in General Assembly, is a grievance and a violation of the People's property; that extravagant and unlimited fees have been exacted, which are unreasonable and unlawful; that the erecting a Court of Equity without consent in General Assembly is contrary to law, without precedent and of dangerous consequence to the liberty and properties of the subjects, and denouncing the tariff act. It was accordingly dissolved.

The question of the power of the People as represented in the Assembly was immediately pressed to an issue. Hunter's commission not only empowered him to appoint Judges, Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, Justices of the Peace, etc., but it gave him

"full power and authority, with the advice and consent of the Council, to erect, constitute and establish Courts of Judicature."

The revenue law expired May 18, 1709, whereupon the Assembly passed an act making moneys payable to a Colonial Treasurer appointed by that body, and collected by an officer of the Assembly's appointing. The act was amended by the Council, striking out Treasurer and inserting Receiver-General, an officer appointed by the Crown, and making him responsible to the Governor, Council and Assembly; whereupon the Assembly denied the right of Council to amend money bills.

The Queen's Council (March 1, 1710), the Assembly persisting in the refusal to pass a revenue act, adopted an order to lay the matter before Parliament, which, after several delays, was done in 1711. The bill imposing a revenue act upon the colonies was pressed for two years without effect, notwithstanding it was a Tory Parliament.

The next conflict occurred in 1711. In a very impertinent speech, on the 12th of April, Governor Hunter demanded of the General Assembly whether they intended to support the Government or not, at the same time explaining that "giving money for support of government and disposing of it at your pleasure, is the same with giving none at all." The Assembly was soon after dissolved.

Governor Hunter wrote to the Lords of Trade (September 12, 1711), that "so long as the members of Assembly held their elections by no other tenure but that of saving the public money or starving the government, there is nothing to be depended upon them." Meantime, the Governor vetoed an act relating to Sheriffs because it circumscribed the powers of the Governor, an act establishing an Agency at the Court of Great Britain, and an act establishing fees.

The issue between the Council and the Assembly was sharply defined in November, 1711. On the 14th, Mr. Johannis Cuyler, of Albany, was directed to acquaint the Council "that this House is well assured they cannot but be sufficiently informed of the undoubted right and constant resolves of this House not to admit of any amendment to be made by that Board to money bills." In response, on the 16th, Capt. Walter was instructed to acquaint the Assembly that the Council have the right to alter or amend money bills, "being a part of the Legislature constituted as they conceive by the same power as the Assembly are, which is by the mere grace of the Crown, signified in the Governor's Commission."

The Assembly responded on the 17th, in a bold enunciation of the sovereign rights of the People: "The share the Council have (if any) in the legislation does not flow from any title they have from the nature of that Board, which is only to advise, or from their being another distinct state or rank of people in the Constitution, which they are not, being all Commons, but only from the mere pleasure of the Prince, signified in the commission. On the contrary, the inherent right the Assembly have to dispose of the moneys of the freemen of this colony does not proceed from any commission, letters patents or other grant from the Crown, but from the choice and election of the People, who ought not to be divested of their property (nor justly can) without their consent." And they remarked that if the Lords of Trade "did conceive no reason why the Council should not have the right to amend money bills, is far from concluding there is none; the Assembly understand them very well, and are sufficiently convinced of the necessity they are in not to admit of any encroachment so much to their prejudice."

This, said the Council, in a communication to the Lords of Trade (December 13, 1711), "calls in question any share we have in the legislation which is given us by the Queen's Commission, that gives this province the indulgence of an Assembly."

The Governor opened the Court of Chancery himself, whereupon the Assembly (November 24, 1711) resolved that "the erecting a Court of Equity without their consent is contrary to law, without precedent and of dangerous consequences to the liberty and property of the subject;" also, "that the establishing fees without the consent of the General Assembly is contrary to law."

The Lords of Trade wrote to Governor Hunter (June 12, 1712), that "the Assembly sit only by virtue of a power in Her Majesty's commission to you, without which they could not be elected to serve in Assembly." The resolution of the Assembly regarding the Courts, they said, "is very presumptuous and a diminution of her Majesty's royal prerogative, for that her Majesty has an undoubted right of appointing such and so many Courts of Judicature in the plantations as she shall think necessary for the distribution of justice;" and the power of regulating the fees was also insisted upon. Their "naming Treasurers to collect the public money when her Majesty has appointed an officer for that purpose, are other instances of their disrespect and undutifulness." The Lords of Trade also wrote to Secretary St. John (April 23, 1712), "They pretended that they do not sit as an Assembly and dispose of money by virtue of any commission, letters patents or other grant from the Crown, but from the free choice and election of the People."

The General Assembly persisted in the assertion of their rights. Governor Hunter wrote to the Lords of Trade December 16, 1712, with reference to the proceedings of the Assembly in adjourning from time to time and in asking for a recess during the winter season, that they render it clear "that there is no hope of any support of government from them, unless her Majesty will be pleased to put it entirely into their own hands," and he dwelt upon the importance of the matter as an example to other colonies. The contest continued with no evidence of yielding on the part of the Assembly. In 1715, Chief Justice Mompesson died, whereupon Lewis Morris was appointed, because, wrote the Governor to the Lords of Trade, he is "able to live without a salary, which they will most certainly never grant to any in that station." With this realizing sense of the importance of the act, Governor Hunter finally yielded, a new Assembly having been elected which still sustained the demands of the people; whereupon they voted the government a revenue for five years, and Governor Hunter explained the necessities of his surrender in a letter to the Lords of Trade dated July 25, 1715. The Assembly voted the revenue for five years, instead of one, in return for a general naturalization act, to which the government had been opposed.

The Governors of New York, throughout this contest, represented the real spirit of the English monarchies. The election of William and Mary established the right of Parliament to control the Crown. Mary died three years before the veto of the Charter of Liberties, and William came to his death five years thereafter; Anne succeeding by virtue of the Bill of Rights. George I became sovereign one year before Governor Hunter's surrender, by virtue of the Act of Settlement, and his successors hold by the same title. But William was nevertheless disposed to fully assert the Royal prerogative, and Anne was by nature as despotic as her father (James II). They were compelled to recognize the power of Parliament, but they resented it, nevertheless; the representatives of the land-owners, who were the voters, asserting their absolute control of taxation. The two preceding sovereigns had been voted a revenue for life, and Parliament now saw the error. The first act of the first Parliament of William and Mary was to restrict the revenue grant to four years. William resented this, whereupon Parliament voted only annual supplies, and the policy has been since maintained, as affording the only effective way of controlling the Executive. Parliament also took the control of the army, but it left the control of trade to the Crown, and no one proposed to remove the censorship of the press. Religious toleration was secured, and the practice of choosing a homogeneous Ministry from the majority in Commons was introduced. But it was under the Whig Junto that the Charter of Liberties was repealed. The same year (1697), by the peace of Ryswick, William succeeded in his policy against France. The accession of the Tories to power, gave William the opportunity to prove that a consummate statesman may bend adverse elements to his will. The Grand Alliance and the Whig war received the reluctant approval of Tories, when the Tory Marlborough was given command; who pushed the King's policy to a successful issue. After William's death, Anne was compelled to declare from the throne her purpose to continue his policy. She did it, and in 1707 became the first Sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain. The Tories grew more bitter against the war, and in 1708 Marlborough was compelled to try and save himself by urging the Queen to restore the Whigs to power. In 1710, however, the Tories returned to power, and in 1712, the fall of Marlborough was made complete, by the creation of twelve Tory peers. Thus, was finally consummated, the great constitutional revolution, by which Parliamentary sovereignty became the organic law of Great Britain. The treaty of Utrecht was signed in 1713, and George I acceded to the throne in 1714. Under him and his successor the Crown exerted no power. In character insignificant, with no personal attachments, Parliament had no difficulty in riveting its control of government. A Whig administration came into power with George I; and under this administration New York finally succeeded in establishing Legislative supremacy. The strong hearts and stout arms of the colonists, however, alone brought deliverance. They received no support, either from Whig or Tory ministries. Thus, the great contest for civil liberty proceeded in this colony side by side with the great revolution in Great Britain, and triumphed with it, and over all administrations both at home and in the province.

The victory of the People went beyond the Parliamentary successes in Great Britain. It not only established the great doctrine that the Executive shall collect no taxes not first granted by the Legislative power; but it established the important principle that the taxes shall be collected and paid over to the Executive by the servants of the Assembly, in such manner as that Assembly may direct. The People, through their representatives, took absolute control of the revenue; no longer as a grant to Royalty, but as the Sovereign, raising the money needed to pay its own expenses and the salaries of its agents and subordinates.

The Assembly at first only insisted that the Treasurer should have the management of moneys raised for extraordinary purposes. In 1729, however, the Assembly, with the approval of Governor Montgomerie, ascertained the salaries of all the officers of the government, and increased or diminished the same at their pleasure. Lewis Morris, a member of the Council, protested against these proceedings, whereupon the Governor removed him, and appointed in his place "Philip Van Courtland, Esq., a man more inclinable to give up the rights of the Crown," wrote Morris to the Lords of Trade in 1732, in asking to be restored to the Council. This marks a distinct stage in the growth of the American system, of great significance. It was the assumption of Legislative control of Executive power, rendered necessary by the profligacy of the strangers sent over here to govern the country. It was the assertion of an ancient right, choosing new instrumentalities in order to render it effective.

The progress made in this direction, and the significance of it, is clearly stated in a letter by Attorney-General Bradley to the Lords of Trade, dated November 22, 1729. "Most of the previous and open steps," said he, "which a dependent province can take to render themselves independent at their pleasure, are taken by the Assembly of New York." Among these steps he instances first, that "they have long struggled for and at last gained their point, viz., that the salaries of all officers of the Crown should be such as they are pleased to vote them." Again, he says, "the Assembly of late will never pass any money bill unless some injurious bill to Her Majesty's prerogative and interest be passed at the same time, which (as things are at present circumstanced) must be complied with or no money can be had for the necessary support of government. The Assembly likewise appoint a Treasurer of their own, though Her Majesty has a Receiver-General here."

The Attorney-General complained that they had threatened with expulsion those who have disclosed their secrets, and preferred other accusations. In their votes of the 30th July, 1728, they have resolved "that for any act, matter or thing done in General Assembly, the members thereof are accountable and answerable to the House only, and to no other persons whatsoever," said he, "by which resolve the Assembly seem in express words to claim an independency, for none but a supreme power can be exempted from rendering an account of their actions." This supremacy of the People was quite displeasing to the law officer of the province. "Persons in power dare not yet venture to displease these people so far as to show much countenance to officers of the Crown. Assemblies seem already to be got beyond all manner of check or restraint whatsoever, and this at a time, too, when other neighboring provinces seem to show the same kind of spirit, and a strong intention to take the earliest opportunity of setting up for themselves. While Assemblies dare act thus, and seem to have it in their power to obtain what laws they please, how can Her Majesty's interests be secure in so remote a country? Would it not be advisable that a commissioner of the Crown sit with the Assembly as in Scotland, and that the officers of the Crown be rendered independent?"

This progress was made during the long and uneventful Ministry of Walpole; who, whatever criticisms may be passed upon him, exhibited enlightened statesmanship, and preferred the prosperity which comes from the liberal encouragement of the vocations of peace and the yielding to the people of their rights. He was a great financier, and devised an excise bill which would have been highly beneficent; but it was so unpopular that he was forced to withdraw it. He set aside the plan for an American excise, with the remark: "I have Old England set against me by this measure, and do you think I will have New England too?" This was in 1733, and the same year Parliament passed an act imposing exorbitant duties on sugar, molasses and rum, which was among the producing causes of the discontent which finally culminated in the Revolution.

English journalism grew into importance under the Commonwealth, but it was fettered by a censorship which was not removed until after the Revolution. This censorship was established in New York, however, by the instructions to which we have referred. In 1733, the New York Weekly Journal was established by Zenger; and in 1735 occurred his famous trial for criticising the Governor, which resulted in his acquittal twelve years before the Franklins had been persecuted and prosecuted in Boston for libels upon its hierarchy; and now for the first time the colonial press was free. Twenty-nine years thereafter, Wilkes was sent to prison for attacking a minister by name in the North Briton, and criticising the government; but it was still six years later when the failure of the prosecution against "Junius" established in England the right of the press to criticise members, parliaments and sovereigns.

By all the acts passed for the support of the government to the year 1737, the disposal of the public money was left in the hands of the Governor and Council, conformable to the direction of His Majesty's commissions and instructions. During the administrations of Governors Hunter, Burnet, Montgomerie and Cosby, continuing about twenty-eight years, general provision was made for the support of government, for the term of five years, at the entrance of every Governor upon his administration, with one general appropriation of the money to the public service, the Treasurer and Members of Assembly only excepted; all public money being directed to be drawn out of the Treasury by warrants from the Governor with the advice and consent of his Majesty's Council. But in 1737, the Assembly limited the support of the government to one year, and by directing in the acts what sums for particular services and what salaries for particular officers by name, should have, they took upon themselves the disposal of the money and the nomination of the officers.¹

In 1738 the rate of interest was reduced by the Assembly from eight per cent to six per cent, but the act was amended by the Council so as to fix the rate at seven per cent. The same year the King repealed the act limiting the continuance of one Assembly to three years, as William had vetoed a similar act passed by Parliament during his reign.

In 1739 (February 6), the Lords of Trade advised Lieutenant-Governor Clarke, who was acting Governor, that the power to appropriate money belonged to the Assembly, while its issuing and the appointing of officers belonged to the Governor; and they instructed him that in getting needed revenue, he must take "particular care to get it done in such a manner as not to admit of any the least encroachment upon the prerogative of the Crown." Nothing was accomplished in that direction, however.

Admiral George Clinton, Governor, son of the Earl of Lincoln, arrived in New York in September, 1743. He was a good natured gentleman, whose fortune had been impaired by extravagance, and he was disposed to mend it. Chief Justice De Lancey, a wealthy and able lawyer and politician, was the unquestioned leader of the people; and he was strongly supported by Horsmanden, Bayard, Murray, Livingston and others. Clinton was controlled by De Lancey until they quarreled during a convivial gathering, and while their friendship lasted the Governor made no effort to protect the prerogative.

Governor Clinton's first Assembly met on the 8th of November, 1743, and passed an act for the support of government limited to one year, and for the payment of salaries, "which," said the Privy Council in the report from which we have quoted, "ought to be settled on the offices, but are granted to the officers by name, by which the disposal of public money and the appointment of officers are usurped by the Assembly, and a power of making their salaries at any time as inconsiderable or large as they please."

Walpole had turned the government over to his faithful friend Henry Pelham, when, on the 13th of March, 1744, the Speaker of the New York Assembly acquainted the House with the fact that a bill had been preferred to the House of Commons in Great Britain, to prevent the issuing of paper money in America; and he observed to them that this bill, if passed into a law, would greatly affect that colony in particular. He also called attention to the last clauses, which were foreign to the title and scope of the bill, contrary to the Constitution of Great Britain, and would in effect subject all the British colonies in America to the absolute will of the Crown and of those acting under its authority. The bill was referred to a committee, whose report was adopted on the 15th, to the effect that it would establish such absolute power of the Crown in the plantations as would be inconsistent with the liberties and privileges inherent in an Englishman, while he is in a British dominion.

The Assembly adjourned and met again on the 17th of April, 1744, when it passed an act for repairing fortifications, by which commissioners were appointed to perform the services required, to whom the moneys granted for such service were directed to be paid without warrant from the Governor and Council. The same Assembly passed the usual revenue measures, and, said the Privy Council, "the money directed to be paid without warrant from the Governor; and, as often as a necessity has since occurred for making provision for the public service, and acts of supply have been passed for that purpose, this same method of appointing commissioners and disposing of public money by their own authority has been kept up by the Assembly, and such encroachments generally made by that means upon the legal prerogative of the Crown, that many of the most essential powers in the Governor have been transferred to the Assembly, who, by degrees, have vested themselves with the disposal of public money, by nominating officers and fixing their salaries, by superseding the Governor's warrant in the issuing of public money, with the custody of the naval stores of the colony, the direction of the fortifications and the power of regulating the militia. They likewise assumed to themselves, independent of the government, the passing of the muster rolls of all the troops, except the four independent companies raised for the service of the province, appointed paymasters, and have also empowered the Commissioners for Indian Affairs to revive and employ outscouts as they shall see a necessity." The government was then practically in the hands of the People, and had indeed been so most of the time since 1691.

A struggle as important as that which closed in 1715 was now to begin. "On the memorable day, the 6th of June, 1746," said the Assembly in a remonstrance to the Governor in 1747, "every party concerned in the administration were of the same mind, and disposed to act as one person." A personal quarrel over their cups between Clinton and De Lancey was to plunge the province into a fierce feud, which was to have its ending in American Independence. New York was then in the enjoyment of larger liberties than Great Britain. In the effort to enforce prerogative, all power was to be lost.

Governor Clinton wrote to the Lords of Trade December 12, 1746, that by the method of annexing salaries to the person by name, the Assembly had acquired control. Persons disagreeable to the ruling faction "must starve, to use the words that have frequently been made use of on such like occasion." Thus "the ruling faction has obtained in effect the nomination of all officers, and they have become even so insolent that they have, in the bill for the payment of the salaries, removed one officer's name and put in another without consulting me," and the Speaker had ordered the Secretary to make out a commission accordingly. "By these means all the officers of the government are become dependent on the Assembly, and the King's prerogative of judging of the merits of his servants and of appointing such persons as he may think most proper is wrested out of the hands of his Governor, and the King himself (as far as in their power) deprived of it. The Assembly carries matters in their case to such a length that they call those bills for the payment of salaries and other contingencies money bills, to which they will not allow the Council to make any amendments, and a Governor must either take it as it comes from them, or he and all the officers of the Government must remain without support."

Governor Clinton now separated himself almost entirely from the public men of the province, whose long residence and intimate acquaintance gave them the requisite experience for successful administration. Among the old residents whose assistance was invaluable was Philip Schuyler, son of the first Mayor of Albany, and a man of great influence with the Indians. He remained identified with the popular party, and sustained De Lancey, whereupon Clinton took the Indian affairs out of the hands of the commissioners, and placed them in the hands of William Johnson, as Sole Commissary of Indian Affairs. The Indians had desired to maintain strict neutrality in the war with the French, and the Assembly thought it best that they should do so; but they were induced into a declaration of war, made in Albany, on condition that their old men, women and children should be protected. The Assembly, it seems, did not make the provision the Governor desired; perhaps because they thought it better that the Indians should guard their own feeble ones, rather than that white men should be taken from the public defense for such a purpose. In his messages of the 28th of August and the 10th of September, 1747, the Governor asked supplies for several purposes which the Assembly did not think it reasonable to provide, whereupon he became very indignant and would not carry out the plans upon which there had been an agreement.

The importance of the position at the junction of Fish creek and Hudson river had been appreciated from the earliest times. At this junction was the settlement of Saratoga, many of the families being tenants of Philip Schuyler. In 1745, the fort on the east side was in a dilapidated condition, and the settlement was defenseless, when the French and Indians stealthily crept upon it, on the night of the 28th of November, murdered Mr. Schuyler and a few others, and carried most of the rest away captive. The fort was rebuilt in the spring of 1746, strongly pallisaded and named Fort Clinton. In September, 1747, Colonel Peter Schuyler was in command. On the 9th, the Assembly resolved "that as it appears to the House by several informations that Colonel Peter Schuyler, commander of the New Jersey forces posted at Saraghtoga, will soon be reduced to a necessity of deserting that fort for want of provisions," therefore "His Excellency be humbly addressed, that he will be pleased immediately to give directions for the relief of that garrison;" to which the Governor made no reply. The Assembly accordingly adopted another resolution on the 11th, "that the fort might be preserved in all events, least your Excellency should withdraw that garrison a second time;" and in their address on the 9th of October they said that the troops at Saraghtoga were first withdrawn in 1745, leaving the settlement unprotected, which "hazarded the shedding of that innocent blood and the carrying the poor people there into captivity."

In the same address the Assembly allude to the capricious acts of the Governor in proroguing the Legislature, to his arbitrary refusals of audience to the House, and to their acts of loyalty in support of the war. The colony had been put to an expense of £70,000 since the commencement of the French war, "which is a burden we fear our constituents will be too apt to think too heavy for them to bear," and that while they "would not be too profuse and lavish," neither would they be "too sparing."

Governor Clinton responded on the 13th of October, stating his willingness to relieve Saratoga, but pronouncing it "impracticable" to do so; expressing the opinion that the frontiers could not be secured from that point,¹ and blaming the Assembly for not taking other measures. His complaints were particularly ungenerous. The Assembly, the preceding year, had voted him every thing he asked. Money for block-houses and bounties, for provision and ammunition; invited the Six Nations to meet the Governor and Council; impressed artificers in the public service, and co-operated vigorously with the Governor. To these energetic proceedings, doubtless, is due the fact that no hostilities of importance occurred within the province or on its frontiers, subsequently, during this war.

Governor Clinton took the occasion of this reply to lecture the Assembly. "You have not," he said, "by the Constitution of the government, any share in the execution of military orders. Consider, gentlemen, by what authority you sit and act as the General Assembly of this province! I know of none, but by the authority of the King's commission and instructions to me, which are alterable at His Majesty's pleasure. You seem to place it upon the same foundation with the House of Commons of Great Britain; and if I mistake not, you, by the resolves of the 9th of this month, assume all the privileges and rights of the House of Commons of Great Britain. If so, you assume a right to be a branch of the Legislature of the Kingdom, and deny your dependence and subjection on the Crown and Parliament. If you have not the right of the House of Commons of Great Britain, then the giver of the authority by which you act has or can put bounds and limitations upon your rights and privileges and alter them at pleasure; and has power to restrain you when you endeavor to transgress. And I must now tell you that I have his Majesty's express commands, not to suffer you to bring some matters into your House, or to debate upon them. In short, gentlemen, I must likewise tell you, that every branch of the Legislature of this province, and all of them together, may be criminal in the eye of the law; and there is a power able to punish you, and that will punish you, if you provoke that power to do it by your misbehavior; otherwise you must think yourselves independent of the Crown of Great Britain."

The Governor not only saw clearly that this was a political conflict for practical independency, but he charged the Assembly with assuming greater powers than those possessed by the House of Commons. After recapitulating their proceedings, he continued: "Is this following precedents of the Parliament of Great Britain, which you pretend so much to imitate? No, I'll defy any man to give any precedent of this nature, unless it was in that House of Commons that had resolved to take away the King's life and to overthrow the established government. Nay, I'll defy any man to show that the Council or General Assembly of any nation ever acted in this manner, but where a faction had resolved to usurp the whole authority and power over that nation."

After stating that since he had the administration of the government, above £60,000 had been put into the hands of commissioners named by them, he concluded: "I now tell you that I will not give my assent to any bill in which the issuing or disposition of the public money is directed otherwise than as his Majesty's commissions and instructions to me direct, or which shall lay any limitation or clogs on his Majesty's authority with respect to the disposition or command of the forces, or which in any sense may lessen his Majesty's authority in my hands with respect to military affairs. If you make any thing contrary to his Majesty's commission or instructions a condition of your granting the necessary supplies for the safety of the people of this province, I now tell you it will be trifling with the lives and estates of your constituents, by exposing them in this time of danger without relief."

On the 26th of October, the Speaker informed the House that the Governor had forbidden Parker, the Printer, to publish their remonstrance, which he (the Governor) had refused to receive. The House thereupon resolved "that it was the right of the People to know the proceedings of their representatives, and that any attempt to prevent those proceedings being printed is a violation of that right." Also, "that the Governor's order to forbid the printing it was arbitrary and illegal, in open violation of the privileges of the House and of the liberty of the press," and they sustained the Speaker in ordering it to be printed.

Governor Clinton, in his communication to the Lords of Trade, excused his submission to the encroachments of the Assembly, on the ground that it was time of war, but observed, "upon the approach of peace, that the time was then coming, in which he should be able to recover the executive power of the government and put a stop to the usurpations of the Assembly, which he did by refusing assent to the revenue bill passed 11th November, 1748, since which time every executive part of the government has stood still."¹

The treaty, or rather truce, of Aix-la-Chapelle was concluded in 1748; and in October of that year the Governor made a demand for a five years' grant of the revenue. This was refused, and the usual annual appropriation bill was passed November 11, which he refused to approve. In proroguing the Assembly the following day, he told them, and told them truly, that they "assumed privileges greater than the House of Commons."

Governor Clinton wrote to the Lords of Trade February 24, 1749, that "a violent faction have a bold design of wresting the administration out of the hands of his Majesty's Governor, and to place it in the hands of themselves in such manner as to have the power perpetually to secure the administration in some prevailing faction, during the administrations of all future Governors. This is done by the Assembly's assuming (in effect) all the public moneys into their own hands, and assuming it without warrant from the Governor. Then taking all the warlike stores out of the hands of the Governor, and placing them with persons of their own appointment. Then assuming to themselves the nomination of all officers by their granting the salaries (annually) not to the officer but to the person, by name, in the office." For these reasons, Governor Clinton insisted on appropriations as formerly, which the Assembly absolutely refused, so that the government remained without support. On the 23d of May the Governor said that the Assembly have made such encroachments on his Majesty's prerogative, by their having the power of the House, that they in effect assume the whole executive power into their own hands," including, he said on the 7th of August, "the nomination to all offices."

In their address to the Governor July 5, 1749, the Assembly say that there appears no royal injunction in his instructions requiring a grant of supplies for five years; and "that the faithful representatives of the People would never recede from the method of an annual appropriation." The Governor replied on the 12th, that it is "essential to the British Constitution, as well as the best means to prevent misapplication, that the powers of granting and issuing money should be in different branches of the Legislature; that contrary to the practice in Parliament, they had provided for services which he had never recommended to them, nor even been acquainted with, which was a dangerous invasion of the King's prerogative."

The response of the Assembly, made on the 14th, shows that in departing from the ancient constitution they were doing it for a temporary purpose, and not with deliberate intent to introduce permanently a new system of government. This, however, was its effect, as we shall see. After remarking "that the whole of his speech seemed to mean an indefinite support, if not one for five years, and therefore it was he that endeavored to mislead the People," they said "that they knew it was the custom of Parliament to leave to his Majesty the disposition of money raised for the public service; but that there was great difference between the condition of such subjects and those whose unhappy lot it is to be under the command of the Governors of Provinces. In cases of misapplication the subordinate officers could be punished by Parliament, but that in the colonies the Governors, who are strangers to the people and employ all means to raise estates to themselves, could not be called to account."

The Assembly was dissolved in 1750, and elections were ordered, the new Assembly to meet September 4. This Assembly, in their address, say that "no better rule could be followed, than that given by the King's commission and instructions, and that all deviation from these rules had been attended with bad consequences." The Assembly was prorogued on the 24th of November, after enacting the usual appropriation bills, which "are all passed in the same irregular manner as former acts of the like nature, and are consequently liable to the same objections, the Assembly having thereby assumed to themselves almost the whole of the executive part of government." These bills were approved by the Governor, and on the 2d of De ember he apologized to the Lords of Trade, and stated that "the King must enforce his authority or give it up to the Assembly."

When this record came to be received in Privy Council, the political life of Great Britain was in a torpid condition. Both parties to the war had surrendered their conquests in the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, and the Pelham Ministry was languidly drawing to a close. The report, signed by Dunk Halifax, Granville, Dupplin, Fran: Fane, and Charles Townshend, is remarkable for its impotent assertion of the prerogative, its important concession that its rights cannot be recovered without the consent of the General Assembly, and its impudent proposition that efforts be made to secure the voting of a perpetual revenue. The only valuable thing in it is its surrender; its admission of the sovereignty of the People, which was the only real subject-matter of contention. The incidents which grew out of the maladministration of the Governor would pass away with Clinton; but the sovereignty of the People could only be taken away by conquest. This report is dated "Whitehall, April 2, 1751." We make some extracts: "There is nothing so essentially necessary to the preservation of his Majesty's government in the American provinces, as the careful and strict maintenance of the just prerogative, which is the only means by which those colonies can be kept dependent on the mother country, or the Governors themselves, representing the Crown, maintain any powers over their Assemblies or any agreement with them. No Governor ever departed from the prerogative in one instance, but he raised in the Assembly a confidence to attack it in another, which as constantly brings on contests, which again create animosities, which in the end obstruct all parts of government." They thought a new Governor necessary to the recovery of the prerogative, who might be "able to re-unite the Assembly and prevail upon all men to assist in re-establishing the proper and ancient constitution of government. As this is a work which cannot be performed but by the united consent of the whole Legislature, it probably never can be obtained while the several parts of the Legislature continue at the greatest enmity." It is submitted "whether in the first instance, the executive part of the government, or the common harmony of it, can ever be retrieved, but by re-instating in the Governor his original and necessary powers; whether, in the second place, the Assembly of this province will ever be induced thus to give up all the results of so long contest, and their acquisitions by it, but in a time of general satisfaction * * * * because it cannot be done but by the approbation of the Legislature, which must be greatly reconciled to the government there, before they will concur in such a method of giving it permanent strength and support."

The Council thought it would be an admirable idea to induce the Assembly to pass "a general perpetual revenue act, upon the plan of that which has been passed in Jamaica," when "the salaries of officers, the fund for the payment of them, the maintenance of the fortifications, the trusts and powers reposed in particular officers, the charge of presents to the Indians, the salary of the Governor, in one word every necessary measure of Government would be lastingly provided for, the several points of domestic government now so often disputed would be finally decided by the Legislature, and the several powers legally belonging to the Governor, and requisite for his supporting his character would be, by a law of the province, put out of dispute, and all the claims of present factions against the prerogative of the Crown would be by a perpetual act of the Legislature itself ascertained."

This conclusion of the Privy Council was in effect a recognition of the rights of the People of the province, not only to all the existing privileges of the British Constitution, but to all the power the Assembly could grasp. On the other hand, the rights and liberties of the People were liable to be broken down at any moment, if a subservient Assembly could be secured. The experience of Great Britain at this time gave good reason to believe this could be done. The power of the Crown had been broken, but the power of the People over Parliament had not been established. This freedom from responsibility had bred corruption. Danby, Walpole, Pelham — these names are odorous with the stench of political debauchery, when place and pensions and money were the accepted means of securing votes and influence. It was no unnatural thing, therefore, to suppose that by bribery and blandishment a shrewd Governor could wheedle or buy a perpetual revenue from some pliant Assembly. Against this peril, the People had only to interpose their own virtues and fearlessness.

Here, then, were the defects of organic discord and the dangers of debauchery, with no effective mechanical power in the system of administration to prevent their success. The judicial function was then but an adjunct of the Executive, and not as now an independent department of government. The Executive had but to buy arbitrary power from the Assembly, to place him in absolute control of the rights of liberty and property of the people. There were but two departments of government really, the Executive and the Legislative, and of the latter the Executive possessed two of the three branches. How were the People to get these under their control, and to separate the Judicial from the Executive branch of the government? Or were they, rather, to lose the control, as England was about to do, of their own representatives? Upon the answer to these questions turned the entire solution of the problem of popular government.

Toward the close of the year (November 19, 1751), in a report on Indian affairs, it is said that the "Assembly would not grant Indian appropriations unless the Governor assented to their nominating the commissioners, which he would not do." On the 4th of October, 1752, Governor Clinton reports his complaints of the Assembly, in a letter to the Lords of Trade, and says that "by every act granting money to the King for several years past, the great part of the money is issued without Governor's warrant and sometimes by warrant of the Speaker only. Tho' the Assembly dare not deny the King's authority over the militia, yet an opinion is inculcated among the people that the powers of the militia can only be put in execution by the authority of the Assembly, so far that no penalty can be incurred by disobedience without an act of Assembly for that purpose. Acts in former times were annually passed to lay penalties in certain cases, till within this four years, since which time no militia bill has been brought in. Your Lordships will consider how far it is proper to suffer the King's power over the militia to depend on the pleasure of the Assembly. I am persuaded it is not in the power of the Governor, as things now stand, to put a stop to these perpetual graspings in Assemblies after more power; the remedy must come from a more powerful authority than any in America."

On the 5th of July, 1753, the Lords of Trade informed the King that Governors had been instructed to use their best endeavors to secure a permanent and fixed revenue. Clinton had asked to be relieved, but the Lords of Trade had declined to comply. He had lived a secluded life, and had become so weary of the struggle that he resigned in the fall. Sir Danvers Osborne, brother-in-law of the Earl of Halifax, took the oaths of office on the 10th of October. He had lately lost a beloved wife, and crossed the Atlantic with a heavy heart. The city council, in an address, said, "we are sufficiently assured that your Excellency will be as averse from countenancing as we from provoking any infringements of our inestimable liberties, civil and religious." The next day, he told his Council that his instructions from the King were, to inform the Assembly, that they were required "to recede from all encroachments upon the prerogative," and must afford permanent and indefinite support to the government; while all public money was to be applied by the Governor's warrant with the consent of the Council, and the Assembly was never to be allowed to examine the accounts. He was informed that the Assembly would never comply, when he plaintively inquired, "Then what have I come here for?" and toward morning hung himself on the garden fence. That day, (October 12), the Executive duties devolved upon the leader of the People, Lieutenant-Governor De Lancey; and the popular party came into full possession of all the powers of government.

Lieutenant-Governor De Lancey was now placed in a somewhat embarrassing but very important position. As the temporary custodian of the executive power, he was bound to represent the King; as the leader of the People, he was bound not to forfeit their confidence. If he could secure the proper dignity and independence of the Executive, with the proper control and real sovereignty of the People, the problem which was presented in the province would be solved. When he assumed office, two powers claimed sovereignty, the Crown and the Assembly; but the real authority was back of both, and that authority demanded recognition. There was never any misunderstanding as to the nature of the conflict between these two sovereignties, either in the Board of Trade in England or in this province. De Lancey endeavored to render loyal service to both. One of the complaints made against him by Clinton was, that he talked one way to him and another to the Assembly. But Clinton failed to see, that which the Chief Justice evidently apprehended, that obedience to law and to the people must be reconciled. Soon after De Lancey became Lieutenant-Governor, the Assembly passed the usual bill for paying the salaries of the officers of government, in which they gave him the same salary as had been allowed to Governor Clinton. De Lancey, however, informed the members of the Council that he could not sign the bill, as it was inconsistent with the Royal instructions, and they rejected it. In the instructions to Governor Osborne, the King expressed his disapprobation of the extraordinary conduct and proceedings of the Council and Assembly during Clinton's administration, of their unjustifiable encroachments upon the Royal rights and prerogative, and their illegal attempts to wrest the powers of government out of the hands of the Governor; signifying at the same time his pleasure that the Governor should recommend to them to prepare a proper law, for establishing a lasting and permanent revenue for the support of government, as the only effectual method of restoring peace and tranquillity to the province, and preventing the like disorder and irregularities for the future; and also directed the Governor to remove any member of the Council or other officer appointed by his Majesty who should concur or join in such unwarrantable measures for the future. These instructions were laid before the Council and Assembly by De Lancey, and they doubtless had the effect of making the former body subservient to the Crown instead of obedient to the People. Thus a dual sovereignty divided the Legislature.

The Lieutenant-Governor now addressed himself to the work of reconciling the prerogative with the sovereignty of the People. This could easily be done, if the Governor respected the wishes of the People in the discharge of executive duties, and the just claims of the Assembly were conceded. In a communication to the Lords of Trade January 3, 1754, De Lancey asked instructions with regard to his power to approve a separate bill providing money for Indian presents, which he thought he might do. He said that with respect to the annual appropriations for salaries: "I shall not, on any consideration of advantage to myself, fall in with them in it, without express permission." A bill had been passed granting his Majesty the impost duties, but without appointing any officers, the money being paid into the treasury subject to future acts of appropriation. He had secured the passage of an act to regulate the militia, "though the House was generally averse to it, for the same reasons they would not pass the bill in the latter part of Mr. Clinton's administration, which was that he had made colonels, and other officers in the militia, in most counties, that were generally distasteful to the Assemblymen and to a great majority of the freeholders." The Lieutenant-Governor then proceeded to say, "that Mr. Clinton had dissolved the Assembly several times in order to bring them into the ancient method of supporting the government, * * * * but could not obtain it by the rougher method of dissolution. I have tried the softest methods I could, but to as little purpose. The principal members frankly told me, I might dissolve them as often as I pleased, as long as they were chosen (which I hear most of them would be again if dissolved on that point) they would never give it up. What they would come into was, first not to meddle with the executive part of the government, which I had convinced them was an encroachment on his Majesty's prerogative, the executive power being solely in the Crown; and, secondly, that all moneys should be drawn out of the treasury by warrants signed by the Governor or Commander-in-Chief, with the advice of the Council, excepting only the Agent's salary and their Clerk's and Doorkeeper's allowance. If it should be his Majesty's pleasure that I may pass the act for the payment of the salaries and services of the government in the same form as has been done by Mr. Clarke, Lieutenant-Governor, and since by Mr. Clinton, Governor, I think there will be an end of contention in this province." As this was an advice to the Lords of Trade to surrender, the conclusion was undoubtedly soundly drawn. In the event of such surrender, the Lieutenant-Governor said the Assembly would doubtless provide the necessary fortifications, and "the point of support for an indefinite time may be left open."

The Lieutenant-Governor having transmitted an address of the Assembly to the King, in which they claim to have been falsely and maliciously represented, the Lords of Trade responded that "the Assembly have taken to themselves not only the management and disposal of public money, but have also wrested from your Majesty's Governor the nomination of all officers of government, the custody and direction of all public military stores, the mustering and direction of troops raised for your Majesty's service, and in short almost every other executive part of government, by which unwarrantable encroachments and invasion of your Majesty's just and undoubted authority, order and government was subverted and your Majesty's service obstructed, and the security of the service endangered." Dated Whitehall, April 4, 1754, and signed Dunk Halifax, J. Granville, James Oswald, Andrew Stone. The address of the Assembly, upon the reading of this report thereon, was rejected by the King by order in Council, August 6, 1754. In April, 1754, the Assembly voted £1,000 for subsisting two companies which had been ordered to Virginia, for service in the expedition against the French. The moneys appropriated were made payable on receipts, instead of on the warrant of the Governor. The Council rejected the bill, and the Lieutenant-Governor prorogued the House until the next day, and recommended the providing for services in an unobjectionable manner. "After all my endeavors," he writes, "I could not prevail on them to give a farthing for this service, or to enable me to raise men for the assistance of Virginia. The extreme obstinacy of the Assembly in this instance will point out to your lordships the danger there is of the disappointment of any service, however urgent it may be, as the Assembly on the one hand will not recede, and the Council on the other think themselves not at liberty to give in to the Assembly's method, unless they depart from the Royal instructions. For my own part, as I look upon this service to be distinct from the annual and constant charges of government, I should have made no difficulty in passing the bill rather than to suffer a service of the nature to drop, relying on this that the necessity I was thus laid under would appear to your lordships a sufficient excuse; and I beg your lordships' sentiments for my guide upon such occasions." Secretary Thomas Robinson wrote to De Lancey on the 5th of July expressing "great concern" at the "unwillingness" of the Assembly "to exert themselves in what is now become so essentially the common cause of all the colonies;" the Lords of Trade the same day expressed surprise at their "conduct in so perilous a situation," and of course sustained the Council. It was for no lack of patriotism, however, that the Assembly still insisted upon the control of extraordinary disbursements. They were liable at any moment to have a dissolute and profligate Governor sent out to them, and they were not disposed to relinquish their right to control the expenditure of money by him.

The Lords of Trade clearly saw the issue, and the consequences it involved. They wrote to De Lancey: "We are glad that you have satisfied the principal members of the Assembly, of the unreasonableness of meddling for the future in the executive part of government, * * * but as it is still a point insisted on that the revenue, even for the services of a permanent nature, should notwithstanding be granted only from year to year, we are afraid that either these pretensions, which are so explicitly disavowed in words, are meant to be retained in effect, or that at least the reason of granting the revenue only annually may from time to time revive these very pretensions;" and said that "if they persist by the means of annual grant either to attempt wresting from the Crown the nomination of officers, or any other executive grants of government," though they may succeed at times, "yet those attempts are so unconstitutional, so inconsistent with the interest of the mother country as well as of the Crown, and so little tending to the real benefit of the colony itself, that it will be found they flatter themselves in vain if they can ever give them a stability and permanency."

Meantime, the People of the Province proceeded in patriotic spirit to prepare for war while persisting in the maintenance of their rights. The Assembly, which had adjourned to the 2d Tuesday of March, 1755, was called together on the 4th of February, passed a militia act and an act appropriating £45,000 to war purposes. The moneys appropriated were "to be issued by order of the Commander-in-Chief with the advice of the Council," writes De Lancey, "so that the Assembly have receded from one of their ill-grounded practices;" but the managers (selected by De Lancey) were named in the bill, the Assembly even refusing to insert the words, "whom his Honor has thought proper to appoint."

The war situation had now become so grave that the Lords of Trade deemed it expedient to abandon the struggle. They complimented the Council, expressed the hope that the Assembly would "depart from all unwarrantable and illegal encroachments upon his Majesty's rights and prerogatives," and permitted the Governor to assent to annual appropriation bills. Governor Hardy announced his arrival in the province on the 6th of September, and on the 7th of November the Lords of Trade acknowledged "the zeal and resolution which the Province of New York has shown, in the vigorous measures they have taken for the defense of his Majesty's rights and possessions."

The contest between the People and the Crown, as conducted by the representatives of each, was not so much over the question of annual or permanent appropriations, as of control over the Executive department. The Assembly which met December 2, 1755, in their address to the Governor, expressed concern that they should be required to abandon the system of annual appropriations, while other colonies were left to practice the means denied them. The Lords of Trade, in an address to the King (February 4, 1756), answered this very conclusively. "The late conduct of the Assembly of New York, in making use of this indulgence as an instrument to wrest out of the hands of your Majesty's government almost all the executive parts of government, by an annual nomination of officers, and by their own authority dispensing of the public money granted to your Majesty without a warrant from the Governor and Council, made it necessary that your Majesty should take this proper method of checking such unwarrantable proceedings and restoring the Constitution to its true principles. We are sorry to find that this construction has not had all the good effects which might have been hoped for from it; it is, however, a great satisfaction to us to observe that the present Assembly does not appear to be desirous of reviving the unwarrantable and illegal claims and pretensions of former Assemblies, and have declared that they do not mean to take upon themselves the executive part of government." On the 4th of March, 1756, the Governor was directed not to press the establishment of a permanent revenue for the present, but to consent to temporary bills, "provided they be in all other respects conformable to instructions with regard to the granting and disposing of public money."

The Assembly was again prorogued December 1, 1756. In the appropriation bills, officers appointed by his Majesty or by the Governor were payable by warrant, and officers appointed by the Assembly were paid by order of the House, signed by the Speaker. A stamp act was passed, and an act imposing an excise duty of six pence per pound on tea. Commissioners were named in the bill, as being those "whom his Excellency, the Governor, has been pleased to appoint," by which "the Assembly acknowledge the right of appointment, but appear to have reserved to themselves the power of putting a negative on the Governor's appointment." Here, again, the principle of the sovereignty of the People is insisted upon, and it is still preserved in the practice of requiring confirmation by a legislative body, in the appointment of officers. On the 10th of March, 1757, the Lords of Trade surrendered on this point, also, saying that "although we cannot help expressing our great concern that in the manner of framing the laws for those and other purposes, the Assembly should have again reverted to the claims and pretensions which we had hopes, from former declarations made by them, they were willing to have receded from," yet in the present exigency they would not advise their repeal.

The Assembly continued steadily aggressive. On the 19th of December, 1758, De Lancey was censured for having approved an act relating to his Majesty's Quit Rents, which "so materially relates to and may so affect his Majesty's rights and revenues." The Assembly, the following year, passed an act increasing the powers of Justices' Courts, which was criticised by the Lords of Trade. In response thereto (February 16, 1760) De Lancey made this weighty justification for having given the bill his approval: "Justices are appointed by the Governor with the advice of the Council, therefore the greater their powers are, if they be not oppressive to the people, the greater weight and influence will the Governor have, and be better able to carry on his Majesty's service." On the other hand, there was no danger from erroneous decisions, for there existed the power of removal by certiorari to the Supreme Court.

De Lancey died September 30, 1760, after having directed the development of the civil polity of the province to the end of making it an efficient mechanism for executing the will of the People, without impairing the efficiency of the Executive. Encroachments upon the latter were made for the purpose of public protection, and not in order to bring it in abject subserviency to the Assembly. He was a lawyer of marked ability, had grown up with the province, and was a skillful organizer. He did not manufacture a system; but it grew under his hands. The same year that he died, George III ascended the throne of Great Britain.

Immediately a new conflict was commenced in the province. All commissions terminated on the death of a sovereign. The differences which had always existed with regard to the judicial power now became the prominent issue. The Assembly proposed to pass an act to establish Courts of Judicature by law instead of by prerogative. Judges were to be removed by the Governor on an address from the Assembly, or by the advice of at least seven members of the Council. The Lieutenant-Governor, the obsequious Cadwallader Colden, suggested that the King also be empowered to remove, thus preserving the prerogative of the Crown; and the lawyers of the province engaged in discussions of the distinction between commissions issued by act of Parliament, and those on appointment by the King. An act was passed that judges should hold office during good behavior instead of during the pleasure of the Governor. The Lords of Trade, 21st November, 1761, held that this was "subversive of that policy by which those colonies can be kept in a just dependence upon the government of the mother country." They said that "the change which the tenure of office underwent at the Revolution was in consequence of arbitrary and illegal interposition under the influence of the Crown, upon points of the greatest importance to the Constitution and the liberty and rights of the subject," but salaries were at the same time settled upon them. The same circumstances, it was claimed, did not exist in the American colonies. "It is difficult to conceive a state of government more dangerous to the rights and liberties of the subject, aggravated as the evil would be by making the judges' commissions during good behavior, without rendering them at the same time independent of the factious will and caprice of an Assembly," by providing permanently for their support. In accordance with these views, instructions were issued to Governors on the 2d of December, "that you do not, upon any pretense whatever, upon pain of being removed from your government, give your assent to any act by which the tenure of the commissions to be granted to the chief judge or other justices of the several courts of judicature shall be regulated or ascertained in any manner whatever, and you are to take particular care in all commissions to be by you granted that they be during pleasure only, agreeable to ancient practice and usage."

The records of the General Assembly, on nearly every page, express the regard of the colonists for Law, as well as their devotion to the rights of the People. The lawyers of the province were a unit in their construction of Law. In English political nomenclature, they were all Whigs together. Bench and Bar stood as one in defense of the liberties of the people. So tenacious were they, that Colden, in a letter to the Lords of Trade (January 11, 1762), referring to De Lancey, said that they had not long since "a glaring instance" of the political power of a Chief Justice appointed for life. It was this power which it was determined to secure on the side of Royalty. To do it, it was necessary to import a lawyer. Benjamin Pratt arrived from Boston in October, 1761, and in November he was commissioned Chief Justice "during his Majesty's pleasure." This excited great indignation. The Assembly absolutely refused to grant any salary to the Chief Judge or to any of the Justices unless their commissions were issued during good behavior, and then they would grant the appropriation for one year only. The Council tried to persuade the Assembly to make salaries of Judges continuous with their commissions, but without effect. The Judges presented a memorial to the Lieutenant-Governor reciting that the commissions formerly granted to them by the late Governor were during good behavior, and declined acting unless the new commissions read in the same way. Pratt alone served, and he was compelled to do it at the expense of his private fortune. The Lieutenant-Governor recommended that he be paid out of the quit rents, and Pratt (May 24, 1762) made the same request, stating that his salary had been denied him by three successive sessions of the Assembly, and that he had nothing to hope for from that or any future Assembly. The quit rents, therefore, were set apart, as a fund from which to pay his salary. The Assembly made an appropriation of salaries, on condition that the commissions issue for good behavior; and the Lords of Trade (June 11) censured the Lieutenant-Governor for approving the act, saying that no personal considerations "ought to have induced you to acquiesce in such an unprecedented and unjust attack upon the authority of the Crown." The death of Pratt terminated the controversy, and in March, 1763, Governor Monckton issued new commissions for all the judges.

The Supreme Court, as thus constituted, soon became an invincible bulwark against a monstrous usurpation. In 1764, Thomas Forfay obtained judgment in a case of assault and battery against Waddel Cunningham, and motion for a new trial was denied. Robert Ross Wadel, agent for defendant, then prayed for an appeal for verdict and judgment to Lieutenant-Governor and Council, which was denied on the ground that no such appeal could be had. Colden thereupon directed the Supreme Court to forbear proceeding until the cause and merits were heard by Lieutenant-Governor and Council. On the 14th of November, 1764, Chief Justice Horsmanden stated to the Lieutenant-Governor and Council the reasons why the Supreme Court made no return as commanded, and on the 19th presented the opinion of the Court in writing. The Attorney-General decided that the Council could only correct errors. Other justices read their reasons subsequently. The Council unanimously rendered an opinion, January 11, 1765, that no other than an appeal in error could lay to them. Notwithstanding this, the King issued an order in Privy Council July 26th, allowing appeals to Governor and Council from the verdicts of juries on questions of fact. This order was laid before the Council October 9, by Colden, and on the 15th a writ was issued to the Supreme Court. On the 12th of November the Chief Justice made a return that the Justices of the Supreme Court found it impossible (as the Law knew of no appeal from a verdict) to comply with the command. On the 15th of December, the General Assembly adopted resolutions thanking the Supreme Court and the Council, sustaining their action, condemning the illegal proceedings, affirming the right of trial by jury, and affirming "that an appeal from the verdict of a jury is subversive of that right, and that the Crown cannot legally constitute a Court to take cognizance of any such appeal."

England was now learning, what New York was soon to learn, that Parliaments and Assemblies are not impregnable securities against arbitrary power. The Whig party became disorganized, and a faction, known as "the King's friends," sought by employing the most corrupt means, by promises of place and bribes of money, to control Parliament. The Press now became to England, as it had been to New York, an agency for the protection of the people.

Bute was driven from office in 1763, and Granville took his place. In 1764, oppressive commercial enactments were passed by Parliament, which led to earnest remonstrances by the Colonies. In an address to the Lieutenant Governor (September 11), the Assembly expressed the hope that he would "join with us in an endeavor to secure that great badge of English liberty, of being taxed only with our own consent." The Lords of Trade, in an address to the King December 11, 1764, said that the New York Assembly, in their address to the Lieutenant-Governor, avow powers and make declarations of a dangerous tendency; and they said of a letter from a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature to the Agent of the colony, that "the acts and resolutions of the Legislature of Great Britain are treated with the most indecent respect, and principles of the most dangerous nature and tendency openly avowed." They doubtless regarded the petitions of the Assembly of New York to the King, Lords and Commons, under date of October 18, 1764, as equally "dangerous." To the King the Assembly said, "The subject, by the laws of our happy Constitution, carries with him his allegiance to the most distant corners of the earth; and the protection of his constitutional rights and privileges is the true reason of that allegiance." They claimed to "have the highest reason, from the hitherto uninterrupted enjoyment of their civil rights and liberties as individuals, to consider themselves in a state of perfect equality with their fellow subjects in Great Britain, and as a political body enjoying, like the inhabitants of that country, the exclusive right of taxing themselves; a right which, with the most profound submission be it spoken, whether inherent in the People or sprung from some other cause, has received the Royal sanction, is at the basis of our Colony State, and become venerable by long usage." To the Lords they said: "Ever since the glorious Revolution, in which this Colony displayed the most distinguished zeal and alacrity, we have enjoyed the uninterrupted privilege of being taxed only with our own consent, given by our Representatives in General Assembly. This we have ever considered as the inextinguishable right of British subjects, because it is the natural right of mankind. * * *

The amazing powers vested by some of the late acts of trade in the Judges of the Vice-Admiralty Courts, who do not proceed according to the course of the common law, nor admit of trials by juries, one of the most essential privileges of Englishmen, has so unfavorable an aspect on the property of the subject, that we could not, consistent with our duty, suppress our apprehensions." At the same time, they were careful to remark that "the claim of an exemption from being taxed by the supreme legislative power is far from involving in it the notion of independency." To the House of Commons they said: "An exemption from the burthen of ungranted, involuntary taxes must be the great principle of every free State. * * * The People of this colony, inspired by the Genius of their Mother country, nobly disdain the thought of claiming that exemption as a privilege. They found it on a basis more honorable, solid and stable; they challenge it and glory in it as their right."

AGENT OF THE COLONY.¹

The year 1764 saw the real birth of the American Union, in the first actual initiation² of the movement which had its culmination a few years later, in the first Continental Congress. Just one hundred years before this initial step (in 1664) the Articles of capitulation were signed; and these Articles were regarded by the Dutch subjects of Great Britain as their Magna Charta. When they found their hopes frustrated they appointed the late Director-General their Agent at Court, to enforce their rights, as years before they had sent Agents to the States General. Stuyvesant appeared before the King in October, 1667. The Leisler rebellion³ grew out of a boast by Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson, that the colonists were a conquered people, and were not entitled to the rights of English citizenship. The vehemence of the party which sought to exclude the Dutch residents on the ground of being aliens was so great, that in 1701 an Assembly elected by the Old Burgesses addressed a remonstrance to the King on the subject. Out of this controversy grew the demand for a general naturalization act, which was extorted in 1715, in return for a vote of supplies for five years. An Agent of the Colony was appointed in 1695, by resolution, upon the suggestion of Governor Fletcher. His final accounting took place in 1699. When the controversy over the voting of supplies began, the Assembly undertook to secure the appointment of an Agent, but failed. In 1711, an act for that purpose was vetoed. In 1712, the Assembly urged the subject on the attention of the Governor. An Agent was secured on the termination of the struggle in 1715. Various appointments were made until the beginning of the contest over the acts establishing a monopoly in the Sugar Colonies. The term of Peter Le Heup expired January 1, 1731. On the 30th of September, Samuel Baker, George Straatfield, Samuel Storke, Richard Janeway, Joseph Low and Rodrigo Pacheco were empowered to employ an Agent, but the plan does not appear to have succeeded. The following year, the General Assembly undertook to secure the passage of an act empowering them to make an appointment. In 1741, in answer to Lieutenant-Governor Clarke's appeal to them to provide for the appointment of an Agent, they conceded the advantages, provided he was "depending on and payable by the General Assembly." The contest continued until 1748, when Charles was appointed by a rider to the appropriation bill. In his address to the Legislature in 1769, the Governor urged them to appoint the Agent as in other Colonies, by the Governor, Council and Assembly, instead of by the Assembly alone; but the General Assembly responded in an address written by Philip Schuyler, that "it would be sacrificing the rights and diminishing the liberties of our constituents to adopt any other mode of appointment than that which has been practiced in this Colony for many years past." On the day that Philip Schuyler stood up and voted "NO," alone, on the resolution denouncing the paper which arraigned the Assembly for voting supplies to the soldiers¹ (December 17, 1769) he nominated Edmund Burke as the Agent of the Colonies, but the appointment was not made until a year later.

³ Francis Nicholson was at this time Andros' deputy in New York. The people rose, organized as "Inhabitants-Soldiers," issued a "Declaration" May 31, 1689, and appointed a Committee of Safety [See Legislative Councils, 1689]. The Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson fled from the province. Jacob Leisler seized the Fort June 3, in the name of William and Mary, and was appointed its captain June 8, by the Committee of Safety. On the 16th of August he was appointed Commander-in-Chief, and on the 11th of December he was made Lieutenant-Governor, a Council was appointed, and writs were issued for the election of members of Assembly. At Albany, William and Mary were proclaimed by the municipal authorities, but Leisler was resisted until the Spring of 1690, when Mayor Schuyler yielded, in order to secure united action against the French and Indians, who were seriously threatening the province. In April, of that year, the General Assembly convened, every county being represented except Suffolk. Leisler was tried and executed for treason the following year.

COLONIAL CONFEDERACIES.

The Pequod war, which occurred in 1637, produced a desire for union among the eastern colonies, and this desire led to definite action in 1643. "The united colonies of New England" were then "made all as one." The objects of the confederation were "protection against the encroachments of the Dutch and the French, security against the tribes of savages," and "the liberties of the gospel in purity and peace." This first confederacy formed among the American provinces included "the colonies and separate governments of Massachusetts, Plymouth, Connecticut and New Haven." The plantations of Providence and Rhode Island were not admitted. This may be explained, perhaps, by the reason assigned for not taking in the people beyond the Piscataqua: "They ran a different course, both in their ministry and civil administration." Connecticut demanded for each colony a negative on the acts of the confederation. Massachusetts refused assent to the principle, and Connecticut waived it. Plymouth led the way in determining that the acts of the confederation should have no force until they were "confirmed by a majority of the people."

In 1690, the General Court of Massachusetts issued a call for a Convention to agree upon a plan for the invasion of Canada. This call was not formally acted upon, an invitation from Lieutenant-Governor Leisler being accepted in its place, to meet in the city of New York for the same purpose. Delegates were present from Massachusetts, Plymouth and New York.

In October, 1745, a grand conference with representative Indians was held at Albany, at which Commissioners were present from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

A Convention assembled at Albany June 19, 1754, to renew the treaty with the Six Nations and to unite upon some scheme for the common defense against the French. Delegates were present from

New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Benjamin Franklin, a delegate from Pennsylvania, submitted to the Convention a plan for a union of the colonies. It provided for a President-General, appointed and supported by the Crown, and for a Grand Council elected by the General Assemblies of the respective colonies. It was approved by the Convention, but was rejected by the Colonial Assemblies because it gave too much power to the Crown, and by the Crown because it gave too much power to the people.

William Smith, a member of the Executive Council of New York, who was a member of this Convention, subsequently proposed a plan of Colonial union. It provided for a Lord Lieutenant and Council, to be appointed by the Crown, and for a House of Commons to be chosen by the Provinces. The Crown was to retain its ancient negative, and the British Parliament its legislative supremacy in all cases relative to life, liberty and property, except in the matter of taxation for general aids, or for the immediate support of the American government. This plan was approved by Lord Granville, but was not submitted to Parliament.

The first movement looking toward a Union of the Colonies against the aggressions of the Crown, was made by the New York Assembly October 18, 1764. It adopted resolutions approving the petition of the New York city merchants, relative to the oppressive commercial legislation of Parliament, and directed that the memorial be forwarded to the Agent of the colony at the Court of Great Britain, assuming the expense of urging it upon the attention of the Government. It then "Ordered that the committee appointed to correspond with the said Agent be also a committee during the recess of this House to write to and correspond with the several Assemblies or committees of Assemblies on the subject-matter" of these acts, "and also on the subject of the impending dangers which threaten the colonies, by being taxed by laws to be passed in Great Britain." This Committee of Correspondence was first appointed April 4, 1761, and consisted of the New York members. On the 9th of December, 1762, Robert R. Livingston was added. The Committee was appointed at the first session of the 29th Assembly, and continued throughout all its sessions, until it was dissolved in 1768. The members of the Committee were John Cruger, Philip Livingston, Leonard Lispenard, William Bayard, Robert R.

Livingston. On the 31st of October, 1765, at a meeting of the merchants of the city of New York, a Committee of Correspondence was appointed, consisting of Isaac Sears, John Lamb, Gershom Mott, William Wiley and Thomas Robinson.

In 1765, the General Court of Massachusetts resolved to ask counsel from the other colonies, with respect to the complications with the home government. In a circular, Samuel White, the Speaker, invited the several Colonial Assemblies "to meet in the city of New York, on the first Tuesday in October next, to consult together on the present circumstances of the colonies, and the difficulties to which they are and must be reduced by the operation of the acts of Parliament for levying duties on the colonies." The Conference was held accordingly. Seventy-eight delegates were present, representing Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and South Carolina. The Conference adopted a petition to the King written by Livingston, and another to Parliament, by James Otis, and set forth "a declaration of rights and grievances" to the people of England and America, "claiming the right of taxing themselves, either personally or by representatives of their own choosing, the right of trial by jury, and the right of petition." This declaration was written by Cruger.

NEW YORK DELEGATES TO COLONIAL CONFERENCES.

1745. Admiral George Clinton, Governor . Daniel Horsmanden, } of Council . Joseph Murray,

The New York General Assembly, on the 20th of November, 1765, approved the proceedings of the Colonial Committees, and in December adopted petitions to the King, Lords and Commons, claiming "the exclusive right of giving to the Crown all necessary aids, raised in the Colony either by duties or taxes," which were "free gifts of the people;" but expressing a willingness "to submit in every other respect to the legislative authority of the British Parliament," for the "powers of legislation and taxation are not inseparably connected." Two days after the adoption of these petitions, Colden wrote to Conway that "whatever happens in this place has the greatest influence on the other Colonies. They have their eyes perpetually on it, and they govern themselves accordingly." From this time forward, peculiar means were resorted to, to obtain control of the Assembly of New York.

The stamp act was repealed March 13, 1766. In June, Governor Moore notified the Assembly to make provision for troops, according to the requirements of the Mutiny act. They refused. Twice they were prorogued. In the fall, referring to the specific requisitions of the Governor, they said: "We cannot consent, with our duty to our constituents, to put it in the power of any person (whatever confidence we may have in his prudence and integrity) to lay such burdens on them." Again they were prorogued. Parliament then asserted its sovereignty by suspending the Assembly until it made provision for the troops, and imposed trivial import duties on goods entering American ports. The act of suspension went into effect October 1st, 1767, and was announced to the Assembly November 18th. Meantime, however, it had surrendered. On the 6th of June, it had appropriated £3,000 for troops quartered in the colony, payable to the commander-in-chief, and it now proceeded to appropriate £1,500 payable on the warrant of the Governor and Council. The Lords of Trade gave it as their opinion, May 7, 1768, that the act of Parliament had been complied with, and the King expressed his approval in Council August 12. Henceforward, the Assembly voted money for troops, regularly.

A new Assembly was elected in 1768, and met in October. On the 31st of December, they adopted petitions to the King, Lords and Commons, in which they defined the issues with the ministry in unmistakable terms. To the King they said: The late acts imposing duties on the colonies with the sole view and express purpose of raising a revenue, were utterly subversive of their constitutional rights. The act for suspending the legislative power of the representatives of the colony they consider as still more dangerous and alarming. To the Lords they said that by the late extension of the Admiralty jurisdiction to penalties, forfeitures and even trespass upon the land, we lose the unspeakable advantages of the ancient trial by jury, so deservedly celebrated by Englishmen in all ages as essential to their liberty. To the Commons they stated that they had not the most distant desire of independence of the parent kingdom. It is therefore with the greatest anxiety that we observe the acts of the late Parliament imposing duties on the colonies for the declared purpose of raising a revenue, while we lament as subversive of the natural and constitutional rights of the people we represent, whose property is by these acts granted without their consent. The act of the same Parliament, suspending the legislative power of this colony until they shall have made the provision required for quartering his Majesty's troops, is still more alarming, as destructive of the very end of representation, for the people can derive no advantage from the right of choosing their own representatives, as when chosen they are not permitted to exercise that freedom of judgment inseparable from legislation. The same day they adopted resolutions declaring their rights and privileges greatly abridged and infringed by acts of Parliament, and asserted it to be their right to correspond and consult with other colonies. They also made this bold declaration: "This Colony lawfully and constitutionally has and enjoys an internal Legislature of its own, in which the Crown and the People of this Colony are constitutionally represented, and that the power and authority of the said Legislature cannot lawfully or constitutionally be suspended, abridged, abrogated or annulled by any power, authority or prerogative whatsoever; the prerogative of the Crown ordinarily exercised for prorogations and dissolutions only excepted." There is reason to believe that these petitions and resolutions were written by Phillip Schuyler. They gave such offense to the Governor that he dissolved the Assembly on the 2d of January.

The new Assembly was elected under the cry of, No Lawyers and No Presbyterians. The lawyers were devoted to the vital principles of civil liberty, and the Presbyterians were engaged in efforts to secure religious equality before the law, which was denied by the Government. The Assembly met April 4th, 1769. The fundamental principles held in common by all, under the violations of constitutional law by the Ministry, were to result in the reorganization of parties, and the division of those who had hitherto stood together in defense of constitutional liberty.

There was first the party of independent action, which thought by humble petitions to obtain from the Crown a gracious concession of colonial rights. This party claimed the rights of the English Constitution; but it sacrificed them in obsequious deference to the prerogatives of the Crown. It agreed to a firm address written by Schuyler; and on the 10th of April permitted to pass a resolution offered by Philip Livingston, thanking the non-importers for living up to their agreement, and sustaining them therein, "until such acts of Parliament as the Assembly had declared unconstitutional and subversive of the rights of the people should be repealed." On the 13th, therefore, Governor Moore wrote that the new Assembly is tenacious of its power; and so it seemed to be. But it contained the seeds of disloyalty to liberty, in that it regarded with superior veneration the law of allegiance to a King who was himself a traitor to constitutional liberty. It postponed Livingston's motion to re-adopt the petitions of 1768, and voted appropriations to troops. Parliament rejected the petitions, and the Assembly was prorogued in May.

When the Assembly reconvened in November, Governor Moore (who died September 11) had been succeeded by Lieutenant-Governor Colden. It was known that all duties were to be repealed except upon tea, and the people had resolved to stand by Massachusetts and South Carolina in refusing supplies to troops until Parliament abandoned all pretense of right to tax the colonies. The Colonial party still adhered to the principle that the exclusive right of taxation existed in the Assembly, maintained the right of petition and of trial by jury, and condemned the sending of persons beyond the high seas for trial as "highly derogatory to the British subject." The resolutions adopted by the Virginia House of Burgesses, May 16, were concurred in November 29. But here the Royalists stopped. The bill to furnish supplies to the troops was passed by one majority. A denunciatory circular was thereupon issued, arraigning the Assembly for disloyalty to the People, the strong point of which was that they had deserted the common cause, by voting supplies under the pretense of duty to the Crown, thus condemning all the colonies which were united in refusing to do so.

"The cardinal policy of New York," says Bancroft, "was the security and development of colonial liberty through our American Constitution, based upon the union of the Colonies in one General Congress." The party of the Union felt indignant at the betrayal of the People by the Assembly. A resolution was introduced denouncing the circular as "a false, seditious and infamous libel." It was adopted by the vote of every member present, except that of Philip Schuyler. Its author, Alexander McDougall, was indicted and imprisoned, was arraigned before the Assembly, and was ably defended by George Clinton. His indictment for libel was never brought to trial, and he was released in February, 1771.

The Boston Massacre and the repeal of all duties except upon tea occurred the same day, March 5, 1770. New York alone had been perfectly true to the non-importation agreement, and its imports had fallen off more than five parts in six. It was impatient of a system of voluntary renunciation, which was so unequally kept, and the belief was common that if the others had adhered to it as strictly, all the grievances would have been redressed.¹ It is not strange, therefore, that the Government now gained in strength. Dunmore arrived in October, and assumed the office of Governor. In his address to the Assembly, December 11, he referred to "the salutary reconciliation effected by the people of this province," and the Assembly in response said: "The favorable disposition shown by the inhabitants of this colony to renew the commercial intercourse with the mother country will, we trust, be the means of effecting a cordial reconciliation between Great Britain and the colonies, so necessary at all times for the security and preservation of both; and recommend us to the favor of our most gracious sovereign." An effort was made to strike this out of the address, but the motion was lost, 5 to 11. On the 18th of January, 1771, Dunmore notified the Assembly that he could not accept any salary from them, and Tryon gave the same notification February 13, 1772. While this movement of the Crown was denounced elsewhere, it was passed over in silence by the New York Assembly. Only two votes were cast against the bill providing for troops, February 7, 1771.

The retaliatory measures directed against Boston, in 1774, sharply defined the three parties in New York. There was the Peace party, which controlled the Assembly, and two parties among the people. The mechanics, or "Tribunes," favored the Boston plan of a suspension of trade; while the merchants, discouraged by its failure, and the lawyers and other patriots, termed "Patricians," favored a General Congress in order to secure concert of effort. There were the party of Peace, the party of Action, and the party of Union. On the 19th of January, a new Committee of Correspondence was appointed in the Assembly, consisting of John Cruger, James Jauncey, Benjamin Seaman, Frederick Philipse, Zebulon Seaman, Simon Boerum, James De Lancey, Jacob Walton, Isaac Wilkins, Daniel Kissam, John Rapalje, John De Noyelles and George Clinton. The radical Sons of Liberty had reorganized in 1773, with a vigilance committee, and on the 14th of May, 1774, sent a vigorous letter to Boston urging a General Congress. The conservative merchants thereupon organized another Committee (the Committee of Fifty-One), which urged concert of action, and a General Congress. The result vindicated the wisdom of the New York statesmen. Boston called the Congress; and when concert of action was secured, vigorous measures naturally followed from earnest men. The American Association for commercial non-intercourse was organized; the rights of the colonies set forth in a Declaration of Rights framed by a Committee consisting of John Jay, Philip Livingston and Richard Henry Lee, and in addresses, and it was resolved "that this Congress approve the opposition of the inhabitants of Massachusetts Bay to the execution of the late acts of Parliament, and if the same shall be attempted to be carried into execution by force, in such case all America ought to support them in their opposition." This Union was pronounced by Chatham, in his great speech of January 20, 1775, to be "solid, permanent and effectual," for "its real stamina are to be looked for among the cultivators of the land. * * * These true sons of earth are invincible."

New York was now united. The voice of the People had been harmonized; but the Tories in the Assembly heeded it not. On the 26th of January, a motion to take into consideration the proceedings of the Continental Congress, made by Colonel Ten Broeck, was lost, 11 to 12. On the 1st of February Chatham brought forward in Parliament his plan for "true reconciliation and national accord," and it was defeated on its first reading. On the 9th of February, Parliament presented a sanguinary address to the King, which amounted to a declaration of war. On the 16th of February, the Tory Assembly of New York refused to agree to a motion made by Col. Schuyler, to place on record the correspondence of its own committee with other colonies; on the 17th voted down resolutions of thanks to the delegates to the Continental Congress offered by Colonel Woodhull; on the 21st refused to thank the non-importing merchants, and on the 23d declined to send delegates to the next Continental Congress. The same day, the Committee on Grievances, appointed to "supplicate the throne" for rights which it insolently denied, in pursuance of the Peace policy of Colden in his address of January 10th, submitted a report, which was considered March 24. The Unionists of that day, under the lead of Schuyler, in vain endeavored to strike out its humiliating clauses, and it was adopted on the 25th. The Ministry heard of the action of the 26th of January early in March, and were greatly encouraged by it; Dartmouth saying on the 3d that the Assembly had shown a good disposition toward reconciliation with "the mother country," and New York was the recipient of disgraceful favors in consequence. The petitions, adopted March 25th, were presented by Burke May 15th, and rejected because the right of Parliament to tax America was denied. And still they had the hardihood to think that North's conciliatory resolution "would remove all obstacles to the restoration of public tranquillity," through "the moderation and loyal disposition of the Assembly of New York." That Assembly adjourned April 3d to May 3d. It was prorogued from time to time, and never met again. Thus ingloriously ended a legislative body, which had a most glorious beginning nearly a century before.

The Committee of Fifty-one, having served its purpose of securing united action, was dissolved in November, 1774, and was succeeded by a Committee of Sixty, charged with the duty of "carrying into execution the Association entered into by the Continental Congress." This Executive Committee, the General Assembly having refused to comply with the recommendations of the Continental Congress, to choose deputies to attend another meeting of that body, issued a call, in the month of March, 1775, to the several counties throughout the Province, to elect deputies to a PROVINCIAL CONVENTION, to be held in New York city on the 20th of April, for the purpose of choosing Delegates to represent the Colony in the aforesaid Continental Congress. This Convention met accordingly at the Exchange in New York, on the day appointed.

This Convention elected delegates to the Continental Congress, "to concert and determine upon such measures as shall be judged most effectual for the preservation and re-establishment of American rights and privileges, and for the restoration of harmony between Great Britain and her colonies." Having transacted the only business for which it was called, it dissolved itself April 22d. The next day (Sunday) a rumor reached the city of the battle of Lexington.

4 Member of last General Assembly, but unseated for non-residence in district elected from.

2 Members of the last General Assembly.

The People had already become greatly excited by the warlike news from London and Boston. Two transports at the wharf had been cut loose, and an attempt made to seize the King's magazine, at Turtle Bay. The citizens now burst all restraints; instantly emptied the vessels laden with provisions for Boston; seized five hundred and thirty stand of arms lodged in the city hall; took possession of the powder house; organized military companies, which paraded publicly through the streets, and published a declaration that no vessel should be allowed to clear for Boston or Halifax.

It now became necessary to increase the Executive Committee and to reorganize it as a Provisional War Committee or Committee of Resistance. This was done by the People, at a meeting held on the 1st of May.

This Committee "resolved to stand or fall with the liberty of the Continent," thus indignantly spurning England's bribe to New York to betray her sister colonies. On the 5th, an address was forwarded to the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London, the signatures to which were headed by John Jay. It declared that they "could never submit to slavery. The disposal of their own property with perfect spontaneity is their indefeasible birthright. This they are determined to defend with their blood, and transfer to their posterity. The present machinations of arbitrary power, if unremittedly pursued, will, by a fatal necessity, terminate in the dissolution of the empire. This country will not be deceived by measures conciliatory in appearance. We cheerfully submit to a regulation of commerce by the Legislature of the parent State, excluding in its nature every idea of taxation. * * * All the horrors of civil war will never compel America to submit to taxation by authority of Parliament." This letter was received in London June 24, and was approved and indorsed by the people and local officials; but government was blinded to the situation. The Committee also resolved to withhold supplies, and to repel any attempt to enforce taxation by Parliament; and in consequence of "the sanguinary measures adopted by the British Ministry against our brethren in Massachusetts," circulars were sent to the various counties, inviting them to elect delegates to a PROVINCIAL CONGRESS, to meet in the city of New York on the 22d of May, "to deliberate upon, and from time to time to direct such measures as may be expedient for our common safety." Fourteen members of Assembly, most of them belonging to the Tory majority, appealed to Gen. Gage against the use of force, and the Council sent two agents to London, to inform his Majesty that the Boston army had greatly injured the cause of the King. Indeed, in the words of the Council on this occasion, his Majesty's government in the province was prostrated. The Assembly had adjourned from the 3d of April to the 3d of May. On the 1st of that month it was prorogued to July; but on the 22d the Provincial Congress became, in fact, its successor. The Convention which framed the State Constitution fixed the 19th day of April as the day on which lawful Royal rule in this State ceased, and ordained that the law of the Colony as it existed on that day, with "the resolves or resolutions of the Congresses of the Colony of New York, and of the Convention of the State of New York, now in force, and not repugnant to the government established by this Constitution, shall be considered as making part of the laws of this State." The first Congress ratified the acts of the Provincial Convention. Its action thus became the first act of the State of New York. The Congresses became regular legislative bodies, by constitutional approval, and we therefore include the names of their members under the Legislative Department.

The Continental Congress in May, 1776, adopted a resolution declaring it "necessary that the exercise of every kind of authority under the Crown should be totally suppressed, and all the powers of government exerted under the authority of the People of the Colonies;" and it therefore recommended the various Congresses to consider the propriety of organizing new governments. On the 31st of May, the Provincial Congress of New York adopted a resolution recommending that in consequence of the "dissolution of the former government by the abdication of the late Governor and the exclusion of this Colony from the protection of the King of Great Britain," that deputies be elected "to institute and establish such a government as they shall deem best calculated to secure the rights, liberties and happiness of the good People of this Colony." Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union were adopted by the Continental Congress, November 15, 1777, and ratified by the Legislature of this State, February 6, 1778. Under these Articles, delegates were to be appointed annually by the several State Legislatures, and were liable to be recalled at will. No person could be appointed for more than three years in six, nor hold any other office under government for which he might receive fees or rewards. Delegates were paid by the States they represented, and no State could have less than two nor more than seven delegates. New York sent five, and, on special occasions, a sixth. They were commissioned by the Council of Appointment. Votes in this Congress were given by States, each being entitled to one voice, and the consent of nine States was necessary to complete an act of legislation. The Union was declared perpetual.

CONSTITUTIONS OF THE STATE.

The Constitution of the Colony was substantially perfected in 1664. The sovereignty of the People and the supremacy of the Assembly were virtually recognized, although not securely established. The Executive department of the government was administered with considerable regard for the general welfare, and the Judicial department was practically under the control of the people. The principal object of contention had been the disposition of the revenue. The liberty of the press and religious freedom had been secured, but the equality of churches, before the law, had not been admitted. The Crown had vetoed several acts incorporating churches, and endeavored to secure the establishment of the Church of England. The People then entered upon a struggle to preserve what they had secured, and to surround their natural rights and civil liberties with organic laws in affirmation and protection thereof. They were the leaders in the organization of free institutions among the colonies, and the pioneers in the work of uniting them under one government. Their sagacious perception of the necessity of Union, their implicit reliance upon Law, and their staunch devotion to Liberty, were submitted to crucial tests, and their consecrated energies were as conspicuous as their conservative policy was fruitful of lasting results.

The Fourth Provincial Congress, which met July 9, 1776, assumed the name of the Convention of Representatives' of the State of New York, July 10. The preceding day it had "Resolved, unanimously, that the reasons assigned by the Continental Congress for declaring the United Colonies free and independent States are cogent and conclusive, and that, while we lament the cruel necessity which has rendered that measure unavoidable, we approve the same, and will, at the risk of our lives and fortunes, join with the other Colonies in supporting it." Thus the new STATE OF NEW YORK was formally ushered into existence. On the 1st of August the following Committee, to prepare a form of government, was appointed:

John Jay, John Sloss Hobart, William Smith, William Duer,	Gouverneur Morris, Robert R. Livingston, John Broome,	John Morin Scott, Abraham Yates, Jr., Henry Wisner,	Samuel Townsend, Charles De Witt, Robert Yates.
--	---	---	---

This Committee reported March 12, 1777, which report was discussed until April 20th following, when the First Constitution of the State of New York was adopted.

The preamble, after declaring that "the many tyrannical and oppressive usurpations of the King and Parliament of Great Britain on the rights and liberties of the People of the American Colonies had reduced them to the necessity of introducing a government by congresses and committees, as temporary expedients, and to exist no longer than the grievances of the People should remain without redress," recited the resolution of the Congress of the Colony of New York, adopted May 31 (including the resolution of the Continental Congress), relative to the institution of a new government, and the Declaration of Independence, in order to demonstrate that the Sovereign had not only usurped unconstitutional powers, but had abdicated the lawful powers he possessed in England.

The flight of James was construed as an abdication, but the Convention which deposed him doubted its own powers, and deemed them less than those of a Parliament convened by the King's writ, notwithstanding that, originally, the King derived his authority from the People and not they from him. In New York, the abandonment of the government by the representatives of the Crown was held to be a refusal by the servants of the People to execute their trusts; and, indeed, to have left no one to dispute the sovereignty of the People. Their will was hence first sought by fresh elections, and then was declared to be the sole source of all authority. The preamble of the First Constitution of the State therefore proceeds to say that "by virtue of which several acts, declarations and proceedings mentioned and contained in the aforesaid resolves or resolutions of the General Congress of the United American States and of the Congresses or Conventions of this State, all power whatever therein hath reverted to the People thereof, and this Convention hath by their suffrages and free choice been appointed, and among other things authorized to institute and establish such a government as they shall deem best calculated to secure the rights and liberties of the good People of this State, most conducive to the happiness and liberty of their constituents in particular, and of America in general. This Convention, in the name and by the authority of the good People of this State, doth ordain, determine and declare, that no authority shall, on any pretense whatever, be exercised over the People or members of this State, but such as shall be derived from and granted by them." Here, in emphatic terms, and in marked contrast to that English spirit which deemed a Convention elected by authority of the King more legitimate than one emanating from the People, precisely the reverse was held; and the freedom of every citizen from any interference whatever, except in pursuance of authority conferred by the People, was explicitly affirmed, and the purpose of the State government was declared to be not only the happiness and liberty of the People of the State but of America in general. Union and Liberty were thus held inseparable, as they had been from the first beginnings of the conflict with the Crown in 1764.

The framers of the Constitution, after affirming the sovereignty of the People, sought to secure the supremacy of the Assembly, their immediate representatives. The control of the finances had been the first subject of contention with the Crown; and it was provided that the State Treasurer should be appointed by statute originating with the Assembly. The concurrence of the Senate was thus matter of form, although it provided a check against a dangerous appointment. On the 26th of October, 1778, the Senate unanimously adopted a resolution affirming its equal rights to originate money bills; and on the 4th of November the Assembly adopted a resolution denying it, under the clause of the Constitution which provided that it should "enjoy the same privileges and proceed in doing business in like manner as the Assemblies of the Colony of New York of right formerly did."

The supremacy of the Assembly was secured in the appointment of delegates to the General Congress, by providing for their designation by joint nomination; and that, in the event of disagreement, the two Houses were to meet in joint ballot, where the preponderance of the Assembly enabled it to secure its choice, if united.

The Assembly was given an indirect voice in appointments, by a provision which authorized it to select a Council of Appointment from the Senators, in which Council the Governor was to have "a casting voice, but no other vote." Under this provision, he claimed the right of nomination, but it was taken away from him by a Convention in 1801, which decided that any member of the Council had the right to make nominations. Thus was taken from the Governor powers deemed to belong to the office, or to the Crown, and which the Assembly had encroached upon during the colonial period. So fearful had the People become of an irresponsible Executive, that they, at first, failed to appreciate the nature of the revolution they had wrought by securing a Governor elected by and responsible to them. They knew that they had become sovereign, but they thought that they must exert their sovereignty mainly through the Assembly.

Appointees of this Council (the Chancellor and Judges of the Supreme Court) were associated with the Governor as a Council of Revision, to which was given a qualified veto, in place of the absolute veto formerly held by the Governor and the Crown.

Two of the functions possessed by the Governor and Council under the Colonial Constitution were thus vested in two separate Councils, more or less responsible to the Assembly; and in both those Councils the Governor could be entirely neutralized. He was part of the Legislative Department under the colonial system. The Legislature now consisted of two instead of three departments. Whereas, it formerly consisted of the Governor, Council and Assembly, sitting separately, it was now expressly declared to consist only of the Senate and Assembly; while the Council of Revision was instituted simply to prevent "laws inconsistent with the spirit of this Constitution or with the public good" from being "hastily and unadvisedly passed." To this end, the Judiciary was made supreme in the law-making power, unless overruled by two-thirds of both branches of the Legislature.

The legislative and judicial functions of the old Council were conferred upon the Senate; and the Governor was entirely stripped of the Judicial power he possessed under the Colonial Constitution. With the Senate, however, the Chancellor and Judges of the Supreme Court were associated as a Court for the Trial of Impeachments and the Correction of Errors.

The primacy of the Judiciary is as conspicuous a feature of this Constitution as the supremacy of the Assembly and the subordination of the Governor. The latter was simply an executive agent, to see that the declared will of the people was carried into effect; and was no longer a dictator asserting the will of his sovereign. The Chancellor and Judges of the Supreme Court were eligible to no other office, except that of Delegate to the General Congress on special occasions; and the First Judges of County Courts could hold no other office, except Senator or Delegate. These exceptions were for the express purpose of preserving the equal balance of the Law, which had been so serviceable in all emergencies.

No new courts could be constituted, except such as proceeded according to the common law; the right of trial by jury was declared inviolate, and liberty of conscience was guaranteed.

Thus the framers of the Constitution wrote in the organic law the principles for which the People had been contending for over a century. At the same time, their efforts to provide a mechanism for the preservation of the liberties they had secured were crude and imperfect.

FEDERAL UNION.

The Articles of Confederation provided that "the Union shall be perpetual." They were ratified by the Legislature February 6, 1778; but some of the other States proceeded more slowly. Dissatisfied with the weakness of the Confederacy, agitation began for an increase of power in the General Government. At a Convention held in Boston in August, in 1780, relative to the currency, at which New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut were represented, it was declared to be essential to the power and prosperity of the country, "that the Union of these States be fixed in a more solid and permanent manner; that the powers of Congress be more clearly ascertained and defined; and that the important national concerns of the United States be under the superintending and direction of one supreme head." In his speech at the opening of the fourth session of the Legislature of New York, Governor Clinton expressed his hearty concurrence and dwelt upon "the defect of power in those who ought to exercise supreme direction." Both Houses, in their addresses in response, united in the same opinion. On the 23d it was decided to send delegates to a Convention to be held at Hartford the second Wednesday in November, "to give a vigor to the governing powers equal to the present crisis;" and on the 25th, Philip Schuyler, John Sloss Hobart and Egbert Benson were appointed the Commissioners. On the 10th of October, it was "resolved, unanimously, that the delegates from this State be instructed to declare in Congress that it is the earnest wish of the State that Congress should, during the war, or until a perfected Confederation shall be completed, exercise every power which they may deem necessary for an effectual prosecution of the war; and that, whenever it shall appear to them that any State shall be deficient in furnishing the quota of men, money, provisions or other supplies required of such State, that Congress direct the Commander-in-Chief, without delay, to march the army or such part of it as may be requisite, into such State, and by a military force compel it to furnish its deficiency." A second resolution directed the Commissioners to the Hartford Convention to propose that Congress be explicitly authorized and empowered thus to do. The Convention did not accomplish any thing; but the ratification of all the Articles by all the States followed, and was announced to the Legislature in a special message, March 19, 1781. In July, 1782, a resolution was adopted setting forth the weakness of the Confederation, and recommending that "a General Convention of the States, especially authorized to revise and amend the Confederation," be called. On the 10th of March, 1783, Ezra L'Hommedieu, Ephraim Paine and John Lansing were named by resolution, as Commissioners to a Conference at Hartford. In 1785, General Washington suggested the holding of a Commercial Convention. In February, 1786, the Governor of Virginia addressed a letter on the subject, and on the 3d of March Congress adopted a resolution relative thereto, what was transmitted to the Legislature of New York by the Governor March 26. This Convention was called for the purpose of considering the trade and commerce of the United States, and how far the common interest and permanent harmony might be promoted by a uniform system in their commercial intercourse, and was to report to the several States an act to enable Congress to secure the desired result. Egbert Benson, James Duane, Leonard Gansevoort, Alexander Hamilton, Robert C. Livingston and Robert R. Livingston were named as such Commissioners from New York, in an act passed May 6, 1786; but Messrs. Benson and Hamilton only attended. The Convention was held at Annapolis, Md., September 11-14, 1786, and strongly recommended that a General Convention be held in the ensuing May, for the purpose of framing a more efficient union, and conferring enlarged powers on the Federal Congress. On the 17th of February, 1787, the Assembly of New York adopted a joint resolution instructing the Delegates of the State in Congress to move that a Convention be held for the purpose of so amending the Articles of Confederation as "to render them adequate to the preservation and support of the Union." There does not appear to have been any division in the House thereon, but in the Senate the resolution was agreed to (February 20) by a vote of 10 to 9. An Assembly resolution providing for the appointment of delegates by this State came up in the Senate

February 28, when Senator Yates moved to amend by providing that the new amendments should "not be repugnant to or inconsistent with the Constitution of this State." The vote on this amendment stood 9 to 9, and the Lieutenant-Governor voted in the negative. The resolution was then adopted, and on the 6th of March Robert Yates, John Lansing, Jr., and Alexander Hamilton were appointed delegates "for the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation, and reporting to Congress and the several Legislatures such alterations and provisions therein as shall, when agreed to in Congress and confirmed by the several States, render the Federal Constitution adequate to the exigencies of government and the preservation of the Union."

The Federal Constitutional Convention met in Philadelphia, on the second Monday in May, 1787, and on the 17th of September concluded its work. Alexander Hamilton was the only delegate from this State who signed the new Constitution. The Convention adopted a resolution recommending to Congress that it be submitted to Conventions in each State, chosen by the People thereof, called by the respective Legislatures. The Constitution was transmitted to Congress by George Washington, President of the Convention, with a letter commending the same. Congress adopted a resolution, September 28, referring the new Constitution to the various Legislatures for submission to the People of the respective States. On the 31st of January, 1788, the Assembly of New York adopted a joint resolution providing for a State Convention. Mr. Schoonmaker moved to amend the preamble, by including a more comprehensive statement of facts, and by reciting that the proposed organic law does "materially alter the Constitution and Government of this State, and greatly affects the rights and privileges of the People thereof;" which motion was lost, 25 to 27. The resolution as it passed the House was concurred in by the Senate, February 1, 10 to 8. The Convention met at Poughkeepsie, June 17, and adjourned July 26.

The adoption of the Federal Constitution did, indeed, work great changes in the structure of the government of the State. Revenue laws had already been passed, and customs officers appointed; the Admiralty Court was still in existence, and Commissioners of Indian Affairs continued to regulate the relations with the native tribes. All these were to be superseded by Federal officials. After debate in the Convention, it was proposed to ratify the Constitution "on condition" that certain propositions be submitted to a General Convention; but these words were changed to an expression of "full confidence" that the suggestions of the Convention would be complied with. A motion was lost, reserving to New York the right to withdraw its ratification unless its recommendation of a General Convention was adopted. The Constitution was ratified July 26, by a vote of 30 to 27—seven not voting.

In his address to the Legislature in December, Governor Clinton said: "A declaration of rights with certain explanations are inserted, in order to remove doubtful constructions, and to guard against an undue and improper administration, and that it was assented to in the express confidence that the exercise of different powers would be suspended until it [the Constitution] should undergo a revision by a General Convention of the States * * * nothing short of the fullest confidence of obtaining such revision could have prevailed upon a sufficient number to have ratified it without stipulating for previous amendments." At the first session of the first Congress, amendments were proposed substantially attaining the objects sought by New York, the preamble reciting that, "the Convention of a number of the States having at the time of their adopting the Constitution expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory or restrictive clauses should be added." Ten of these amendments were ratified by the Legislature, March 27, 1790, and another, September 21, 1791. Thus the influence of New York secured, first, a better organized government, and then limited it strictly to the purposes for which it was established.

CONVENTION OF 1801.

This convention was held at Albany, October 13-27, 1801, pursuant to an act passed April 6 of that year, to settle the controversy which had arisen regarding the relative powers of the Governor and Council of Appointment respecting nominations for office, and to consider the expediency of altering the Constitution in regard to the number of Senators and Assemblymen, with power to reduce and limit the same. The Convention unanimously decided that the Council of Appointment had equal powers of nomination with the Governor; fixed the number of Senators at 32 and the Assemblymen at 100, to be increased after each census, at the rate of two yearly, until they reached the number of 150.

CONVENTION OF 1821.

The Constitution did not meet the expectations of its framers. The cumbrous machinery by which it was sought to insure the control of the People, through the supremacy of the Assembly, had only resulted in fortifying power practically beyond their reach.

The Council of Revision was objected to because it had exercised the veto power contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, which was in harmony with the traditions of the Colony from the earliest conflict with the Executive power; and because the officers who thus interposed their objections to the will of the Legislature, holding office for good behavior (except the Governor), were beyond the reach of the People. It was seen that this power was a dangerous one, in a Council so constituted; but it was thought that it could be safely intrusted to the Governor alone, as he was directly responsible to the People. The Council of Appointment, although not vested with any judicial authority, and in fact disclaiming it, nevertheless at an early day summoned its appointees before it, for the purpose of hearing accusations against them, and proving their truth or falsity. At a later day, more summary proceedings were resorted to. The office thus became very unpopular. Nearly every civil, military, and judicial officer of the commonwealth was appointed by this Council. In 1821, 8,287 military and 6,663 civil officers held their commissions from it, and this vast system of centralized power was naturally very obnoxious.

The Legislature, in 1820, passed "an act recommending a Convention of the People of this State," which came up for action in the Council of Revision, on November 20th of the same year; present, Governor Clinton, Chancellor Kent, Chief Justice Spencer, and Justices Yates and Woodworth, on which day the Council, by the casting vote of the Governor, adopted two objections to it; first, because it did not provide for taking the sense of the People on the question; and second, because it submitted the new Constitution to the People in toto, instead of by sections.¹ These objections were referred to a select committee, Michael Ulshoeffer, chairman, who submitted their report January 9, 1821, in opposition to the opinion of the Council, which was adopted by the Assembly.² The bill, however, failed to pass, not receiving a two-third vote. Immediately thereupon a committee was appointed to draft a new bill. The Committee subsequently introduced a bill for submitting the question to the people, which passed both Houses; received the sanction of the Council of Revision on the 13th of March, and was subsequently amended, the amendments receiving the sanction of the Council on the third of April.¹ The popular vote on holding the Convention was had in April, and resulted as follows:

"For Convention," 109,346. "For No Convention," 34,901.

The Convention assembled in Albany, August 28, and adjourned November 10, 1821. The Council of Revision was abolished, and its powers transferred to the Governor. The Council of Appointment was abolished without a dissenting voice. The principal department officers were directed to be appointed on an open separate nomination by the two Houses, and subsequent joint ballot. Of the remaining officers, not made elective, the power of appointment was conferred upon the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. In 1846, two hundred and eighty-nine offices were thus filled. The elective franchise was extended.¹

The Constitution was adopted at an election held in February, 1822, by the following vote :

Constitution—For.....	74,732	Against.....	41,402
-----------------------	--------	--------------	--------

Under this and the preceding Constitutions, the civil and political year commenced on the first day of July.

Thus civil liberty emerged from the ancient chrysalis in which it had been preparing a new organism, adapted to its better growth. The People took to themselves a large portion of the power they had felt it necessary, in the exercise of a natural conservatism, to intrust to the Assembly. They had learned that an elective Governor and an elective Senate are equally their agents, and interests which they thought ought to be conserved, they intrusted to them, subject to their responsibility to the People. The entire Senate were substituted in the place of the members who chanced to be the favorites with a majority in the Assembly, as a Council to the Governor, and thus the People of all the State were given a voice in appointments. The Supreme Judicial Tribunal remained the same. The direct sovereignty of the People was thus rendered far more effective, and popular government took the place of parliamentary administration.

The following questions were submitted to the People during the prevalence of the Constitution of 1821 :

The submission of this act to the People was afterward declared unconstitutional by the courts.

CONVENTION OF 1846.

The Constitution of 1821 grew in disfavor with the growth of the State. There was a demand for stability in the conduct of the great interests of the commonwealth, and a feeling that the power in the hands of the Governor and Senate had become too great. The question of ordering a Convention to be held for the purpose of proposing a new Constitution was submitted to the people, November 4, 1845, with the following result :

"For a Convention,".....	213,257	"No Convention,".....	33,860
--------------------------	---------	-----------------------	--------

Agreeably to this expression of the popular will an act was passed May 13, 1845, calling the Convention at Albany June 1, following, which met accordingly on that day, and adjourned October 9, 1846.

The new Constitution now limited the discretion of the Legislature in regard to some of the great concerns of the State, extended the elective franchise, gave the People the selection of most of the general and local officers which had been appointed by the Legislature, or by the Governor and Senate, and erected an independent Court of Appeals. This last change did away with the sole remaining relic of the Colonial period. The reverence for Law resulted in separating its adjudication entirely from the purely political department of the government. Nowhere else can there be found such implicit regard for Law, such careful securities for its purity and independence

The principle is coeval with the colony; the organism is the growth of our own soil.

CONVENTION OF 1867.

In compliance with the provisions of the Constitution (art. 13, § 2), the question, “Shall there be a Convention to revise the Constitution, and amend the same?” was submitted to the electors of the State, at the general election held in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six. The vote was officially declared as follows :

For.....	352,854	Against.....	256,364
----------	---------	--------------	---------

Being thus directed by the Constitution, and the will of the People, the Legislature, in 1867, provided for the election of Delegates to revise the organic law of the State, which was held April 23, of that year. Thirty-two Delegates at large were chosen, electors being restricted to sixteen names upon their ballots, thus securing equal representation, so far as these Delegates were concerned, to the two political parties of the day. The Convention met in the Assembly Chamber, June 4, 1867, and adjourned sine die, February 28, 1868. In the meantime, an adjournment had been had from September 24 to November 12, 1867. The meetings of the Convention which were had contemporaneous with the sessions of the Legislature were held in the Chamber of the Common Council of the city of Albany, through the courtesy of the members of that body.

† Including 3,735 informal votes.

As directed by the Constitution, and the will of the people, the Legislature of eighteen hundred and eighty-seven provided for the election of delegates to a convention to revise the Constitution. The bill failed to become a law, owing to the veto of the Governor.

CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION.

The Constitution, framed by the Convention of 1867, contained several provisions, the essential principles of which were felt to be desirable in the organic law. Among these, we may mention, the clause forbidding the Legislature to audit claims, and the sections relative to the Public Works and Prisons. Governor Hoffman, therefore, in his annual message to the Legislature of 1872, recommended that a commission of thirty-two eminent citizens, to be made up by selection of an equal number from each of the two great political parties, be created, for the purpose of effecting a thorough revision of the Constitution. The Legislature (Laws 1872, ch. 884) acted upon the suggestion, by empowering "the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to designate thirty-two persons, four from each judicial district, who shall constitute a Commission for the purpose of proposing to the Legislature, at its next session, amendments to the Constitution; provided that no amendments shall be proposed to the sixth article thereof." Vacancies were to be filled by the Governor and Secretary of State. Salary, ten dollars a day, for not exceeding fifty days.

The Commissioners assembled in the Common Council Chamber of the city of Albany December 4, 1872, and adjourned sine die March 15, 1873. The results of their deliberations were submitted to the Legislature of 1873, by which (after some modifications) the proposed amendments were referred to the Legislature of 1874, pursuant to the Constitution (art. xiii, § 1), which Legislature submitted to the people at the general election to be held in 1874 (Laws 1874, ch. 330) the amendments agreed to by it. the Governor and Senate, of Secretary of State, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, Superintendent of Public Works and Superintendent of Prisons; and for the election of State Treasurer by the Legislature, with other changes. This article was not approved by the Legislature, and was not submitted to the people. The disagreement in the Legislature upon this article resulted in the postponement of the important amendments relating to the Superintendent of Public Works and Superintendent of Prisons and providing for their appointment by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. These amendments were submitted to the people in 1876, and were adopted by them. The votes in 1874 and 1876 were as follows:

THE MATURED CONSTITUTIONAL SYSTEM.

We have now completed our sketch of the evolution of the New York system of administration. The vital principle has been, from the first, a government by the People, through their own chosen agencies, regulated by law. One form of organism after another has contributed to the more perfect working of this principle. Written Constitutions define and limit the powers of the various departments, and direct the general policy of the State. The powers of the Governor have been settled with the view of rendering him an efficient agency in securing the public welfare, without investing him with autocratic powers. The Legislative department has not the supremacy once claimed for it, but it is theoretically so constituted as to represent all the varied interests of the State. The general administrative officers are chosen by the People, and the heads of departments mainly appointed by the Governor and Senate. The Judiciary, as the interpreters of constitutional as well as statutory law, derive their authority direct from the people. Thus the system of government in this State is a popular system, as distinguished alike from Parliamentary government and Executive government. The development of this system will be traced, in each department.

THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

The Charter of Liberties, passed in 1691, provided that "every freeholder within this province, and free man in any corporation, shall have a free choice and vote in the electing of the Representative," and that "by freeholder is to be understood every one who shall have forty shillings per annum in freehold." The veto of this act in 1697 was followed by the passage of an act relative to the election of Representatives, at the first session of the Seventh Assembly. Electors were required to be residents of the electoral district for at least three months prior to the issue of the writ, and to be possessed of a freehold worth £40. Catholics were not permitted to vote, nor to be elected to office, and Quakers and Moravians were virtually subject to the like disqualification at first, and until they were allowed to affirm. The elections were held by the Sheriff at one place in each county, and voting was viva voce. Minor local officers were the only ones chosen, except Representatives in General Assembly.

The framers of the First Constitution adopted a clause that "whereas we are required by the benevolent principles of rational liberty, not only to expel civil tyranny, but also to guard against that spiritual oppression and intolerance wherewith the bigotry and ambition of weak and wicked priests and princes have scourged mankind," therefore, "the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever hereafter be allowed within this State, to all mankind. Provided that the liberty of conscience hereby granted shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State." The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Senators were chosen by freeholders, being actual residents, and possessed of freeholds of the value of £100, over and above all debts charged thereon. Male inhabitants who had resided within one of the counties of the State for six months preceding the election, were entitled to vote for Members of Assembly, provided they owned, within the county, a freehold of £20, or paid a yearly rent of forty shillings, and were rated and actually paid taxes. By an act passed April 9, 1811, these values were changed to corresponding sums in the Federal currency, viz.: $250, $50 and $5. This was an extension of the elective franchise, as liberal as conservative men could be expected to make, in a day of great and important experiments in government. No discriminations were made against blacks and mulattoes, except that they were required to produce authenticated certificates of freemen.¹ In accordance with the provisions of Article VII of the Constitution, persons who were freemen of the city of Albany at the time of its adoption, or who were freemen of the city of New York, October 14, 1775, were entitled to vote for Assemblymen without the property qualification.² Elective officers were limited to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Senators and Assemblymen, and the town clerks, supervisors, assessors, constables and collectors, and all other officers theretofore eligible. Loan officers, county treasurers, and clerks of boards of supervisors, were to be appointed as directed by the Legislature. All other civil and military officers were to be appointed by the Council of Appointment, unless otherwise designated in the Constitution.

The Constitution of 1821 (Article 2, § 1) extended the elective franchise, conferring it on every male citizen of the age of twenty-one years, who had resided in the State one year preceding any election, and in the town or county where he offered to vote six months, provided he had paid taxes within the year, or was exempt from taxation, or had performed military duty, or was a fireman; and also upon every such citizen who had been a resident of the State three years, and town or county one year, and had performed highway labor within the year, or paid an equivalent therefor. Colored persons were not allowed to vote unless they had been citizens of the State three years, and were possessed of a freehold of the value of $250 over and above all debts and incumbrances thereon, and had paid a tax on that amount. Persons convicted of infamous crimes were not allowed to vote unless pardoned.

The Constitution of 1846 (art. 2, § 1) still further extended the right of suffrage by providing that every white male citizen of twenty-one years of age, who shall have been a citizen for ten days, who had resided in the State one year, the county four months and in the district thirty days, and had made no bet or wager on the result of the election, should be entitled to vote, provided he had not been convicted of an infamous crime; or, if convicted, had been pardoned therefor, and restored to all the rights of a citizen. The Constitution was amended in 1874 so as to disqualify any "person who shall receive, expect or offer to receive, or pay, offer or promise to pay, contribute, offer or promise to contribute to another, to be paid or used, any money or other valuable thing as a compensation or reward for the giving or withholding a vote at an election, or who shall make any promise to influence the giving or withholding any such vote." The same amendment provided the right to challenge, and prescribed an oath to be taken in such case. By an amendment of the Constitution, adopted March 8, 1864, no elector loses his right to vote by reason of absence in the military service of the United States. An amendment to the Federal Constitution¹ removed the restriction of color.

² See also the act of 1813.

Previous to the adoption of the original State Constitution, voting at elections was viva voce. The framers of that Constitution hesitated to change the system, but inasmuch as many of the citizens of the State had long been of opinion that voting by ballot would tend more to preserve the liberty and equal freedom of the people, they authorized an "experiment" to be made as soon as peace should be declared, permitting the Legislature to then pass an act for that purpose, and if the "experiment" failed, to return to the viva voce system provided two-thirds of the members of both houses concurred therein.² In pursuance of this provision, a law was passed March 27, 1778, authorizing the use of the ballot in elections for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, but retaining the viva voce system for members of the Legislature; but this also was done away with by an act passed February 13, 1787.

Under the law of 1787, elections were held in every borough, town, district, precinct or ward, under the supervision of inspectors chosen for that purpose. When the balloting system was first introduced, the boxes containing the ballots were directed to be returned by the sheriffs to the Secretary of State, in order that they might be canvassed by a Joint Committee of the Legislature. This was done away with by an act passed March 27, 1799, and local boards instituted, who were required to inspect and canvass the ballots, the result to be recorded by the town clerk, who was to return it to the county clerk for the same purpose, by whom it was to be transmitted to the Secretary of State, to be by him also recorded. A Board of State Canvassers was created, consisting of the Secretary of State, Comptroller and Treasurer, who were required to canvass the votes on or before the 8th day of June, and publish the result. By the act of 1787, general elections were held on the last Tuesday of April, and might be held for five days.

The manner of holding elections was somewhat altered by the provisions of an act passed April 17, 1822. A Board of County Canvassers was instituted, consisting of one inspector of elections from each town. The Attorney-General and Surveyor-General were added to the Board of State Canvassers. The general election day was changed to the first Monday in November; each town and ward formed one election district, and the polls were opened, by adjournment, from place to place, for three successive days. An act was passed April 5, 1842, directing the elections to be held in one day, on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November, and providing for the divisions of towns and wards into a convenient number of election districts. The law required the division to be made by the common councils of cities, and the supervisors, assessors and clerks of towns, in all cases where the population exceeded five hundred, and allowed them to do it, if the population was less than that number, if in their judgment advisable. By the act of 1842, the several supervisors of counties were constituted boards of county canvassers.

The general law relative to the registration of voters is applicable to incorporated villages containing over seven thousand inhabitants, and to cities, except as hereafter stated. It provides that inspectors of election shall meet as registrars on Tuesday five weeks before a general election; a second meeting is to be held on the Tuesday preceding election. The first meeting must be held from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.; the second, from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. In cities having a population of sixteen thousand inhabitants and upwards (except New York and Brooklyn), the inspectors meet as registrars on Tuesday three weeks before election, at 9 A. M. A second meeting is required to be held on Friday before election. At the first meeting, registrars may sit two days, in districts containing over four hundred voters. No name can be added at the second meeting, unless the elector appears in person. Names of electors proven to be non-residents must be erased. No person can vote whose name is not on the registry; but any elector may require his name to be entered by appearing before the board at its last meeting.¹ The Supreme Court may compel boards to meet and perform acts willfully omitted.

In the city of New York it is the duty of the Board of Police to establish a bureau of elections and to appoint a Chief of the Bureau of Elections, who shall hold office for three years, and receive a salary of $5,000. The Board of Police is required to divide each assembly district into election districts of not more than two hundred and fifty voters each, to designate the places for holding the polls, and to appoint four inspectors of election for each district, two inspectors to be selected from each political party. These inspectors act as registrars of elections, and hold sessions on Tuesday of the fourth week, Wednesday of the third week, and Friday and Saturday of the second week preceeding the general election in each year, the sessions to continue from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. The registrars are to receive the applications of electors who personally present themselves, and such only, and before registering any such person shall administer to them a prescribed oath. The street, number and (when a tenement house), the number of room or of story must in all cases be entered; and the names of all persons residing in one dwelling must follow each other. Certificates of removal are also provided, in case of change from one dwelling or district to another dwelling or district. Each inspector of election is to be provided with a copy of the registry, and no vote is to be received which is not found on at least three of such registers. The Chief of the Bureau of Elections is required to keep a record of the deaths of deceased persons, and to furnish a copy to each inspector. He is also required to keep a record of persons convicted of crime. The Board of Police likewise designate the places for holding the polls and of registry. The inspectors act as canvassers ¹

In Brooklyn, a Board of Elections is designated by the Mayor, Comptroller and Auditor, to consist of three persons, the Mayor designating one and the Comptroller and Auditor two members of the Board. Said Board is required to meet on or before the 15th of September in each year, for the appointment of inspectors and registrars of elections, the member so named by the Mayor to appoint one in each district, and the other two members to designate two. Canvassers are required to be appointed in the same manner as inspectors, on or before the fifteenth day of October. The registrars are required to meet on the last Tuesday of September and the first Tuesday of October, from 7 to 10 A. M. and from 3 to 10 P. M., and on the Monday occurring fifteen days prior to election, for the purpose of registering such persons as may appear personally and ask to be registered. The Board of Elections fix the boundaries of election districts, and the places for holding the polls. No election district shall contain more than four hundred voters.¹

Unless otherwise provided, the duty of dividing the wards of cities into election districts is devolved by general law upon the respective common councils, which also designate the places for holding the polls. Towns are divided into election districts by the supervisors, assessors and clerk of each town, respectively. When said division is made, the same authorities designate the place for holding the polls, unless other provision is made. Wards must be divided and polling places designated on or before the first Monday in September.²

General elections are held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November of each year, and the officers thus chosen usually enter upon their terms on the first day of January next succeeding. By act, chapter 544, Laws of 1872, election day was made a public holiday.

Unless otherwise provided, inspectors of election are chosen by ballot, each elector voting for two. The two receiving the greatest number of votes being elected, the third inspector is appointed from the two receiving the next greatest number of votes to those elected.

The inspectors, chosen or appointed as above (except in Brooklyn), act as canvassers. In New York the canvassers make triplicate statements of the results, and seal them, one for the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, one for the County Clerk, and one for the Chief of the Bureau of Elections. The Clerk of the Board of Supervisors presents his envelope, which must remain sealed, to the county canvassers, for their action. The County Clerk must retain his sealed, until the Board of Supervisors or other competent authority requires it to be opened. The statements of the canvassers of elections in Brooklyn are also required to be made in triplicate, one to be deposited with the Board of Elections, one with the County Clerk, and one with the Police Department, by whom it shall be at once opened, and its contents publicly announced on a bulletin board. In the remainder of the State, the canvassers certify the result to the supervisor, or, in his absence, to one of the assessors of the town or ward, when such an officer exists. These statements are filed with the County Clerk. The various Boards of Supervisors in the State are required to meet as a Board of County Canvassers, at the County Clerk's office, on the Tuesday following the election, before 1 P. M. In the county of Hamilton the Board meets on the first Friday following the election. The County Clerk is Secretary of the Board, and is required to send certified statements of the canvass to the Governor, Secretary of State, and the Comptroller, within five days after the adjournment of the Board. Certified copies must also be furnished the successful candidates. Lists of the Members of Assembly and county officers elect, with their residences, must be furnished within twenty days after a general, and ten days after a special election.

The Board of State Canvassers consists of the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, and Treasurer, any three of whom form a quorum. The Secretary of State is required to convene the Board at his office, or that of the Treasurer or Comptroller, on or before the fifteenth of December after a general election, and within forty days after a special election. If a majority of the Board are unable to attend, the Secretary of State is directed to notify the Mayor and Recorder of Albany of the fact, and require their attendance.

In order to carry into effect the amendment of the Constitution, ratified by the people March 8, 1864, to allow electors absent in the military service of the United States, in the army or navy thereof, to vote, a law was passed April 27, 1865 (ch. 570), repealing the law of 1864 (which allowed them to vote by sending their ballots to a friend, with power of attorney attached to the envelope), and providing for the holding of elections in camp, to be held by inspectors duly authorized and qualified, the result to be returned to the Secretary of State. This law has been repealed.

The Legislature, by an act passed March 11, 1880 (ch. 56), provided that no person shall be eligible to the office of inspector of election or clerk of the poll, or be qualified to act as such, unless he can read and write the English language. The same act also provided that every political organization, which shall present a candidate or candidates at any election, shall have the right to appoint watchers at the poll, and conferred on them certain privileges to enable them to vigilantly scrutinize the deposit and canvassing of votes. The same Legislature also passed an act to secure uniformity of ballots (ch. 366), which required them to be printed on plain white paper.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 2, 1887 (ch. 265), relating to primaries, provides that every political primary election held by any political party, organization or association, for the purpose of choosing candidates for office or the election of delegates to conventions, or for the purpose of electing officers of any political party, organization or association, shall be presided over and conducted by inspectors to be selected in the manner prescribed by the rules or regulations of the associations holding the primary, and such primary elections shall be public to watchers, provided for in the act, from its commencement to the close of the canvass. At such primary elections no person is entitled to vote unless of the age of twenty-one years, a citizen of the United States, and a resident for ten days of the ward or district in and for which the primary election is held. The provisions of the act are applicable only to cities of the State in which, as appears by the last census of the United States, there was a population of over ten thousand inhabitants. Illegal voting at such primary elections is a misdemeanor, and is punishable by either fine or imprisonment, or both.

ARMS AND SEALS.

The Arms on the first public Seal of the province are thus described: Argent, a Beaver, proper; Crest, a Coronet; Legend, "SIGILLVM. NOVI. BELGH." This Seal is shown on Plate A. It is copied from an impression in the office of the Secretary of State.¹

In a paper by Adriaen Van der Donck,² written when he was acting as an agent of the inhabitants of New Netherland to the States General, it is stated that New Netherland was called a province because it was invested by their High Mightinesses with the Arms of an Earl.

The Royal Arms of the House of Stuart constituted the second Seal of the Province under the Duke of York, which he was directed to use by a Royal warrant dated February 9, 1662. Burke³ thus describes the Arms: Quarterly, first and fourth, France and England quarterly; second, or, a lion rampant, within a double tressure, flory counter flory gu. Scotland; third az. a harp, or, stringed, ar. Ireland. Motto, "HONI. SOIT. QUI. MAL. Y PENSE." Legend, SIGILL. PROVINC. NOVI. EBORAC. Crest, a coronet composed of crosses and fleurs de lis. There are several impressions of this Seal in the first volume of Land Papers, in the office of the Secretary of State. They are incumbent; but those to the Patent of Rensselaerwyck (1685) and to the charter of the city of Albany (1686) are pendant. The latter is shown on Plate B.

The device on the third Seal was that of James II, the warrant for which bears date August 14th, 1687. It is described therein as having "on the one side our Royal effigies on horseback in arms over a landskip of land and sea, with a rising sun, and a scroll containing this motto, ALIUSQ. ET IDEM, and our titles round the circumference of the said Seal; there being also engraven on the other side our Royal arms with the Garter, Crown, Supporters and Motto, with this inscription round y^e circumference SIGILLVM PROVINCE NOSTRÆ NOVI EBORACI, ETC., IN AMERICA." There is no impression of this Seal extant.

The fourth Seal was that of New England, ordered for Governor General Andros in September, 1686. By command of James II, it was in force also in the Province of New York and East and West Jersey from August, 1688, though its use was continued no longer than April, 1689, in consequence of the Revolution of 1688. On one side of the Seal was the King's Arms, with the inscription, SIGILLVM NOVÆ ANGLIÆ IN AMERICA; on the reverse was the effigy of the King standing, his right hand extended to an Englishman and an Indian, both of whom are kneeling; above their heads is a chernub with a scroll and motto from Claudian, NUNQUAM LIBERTAS GRATIOR EXTAT. The legend on the circumference had His Majesty's titles. A copy of this Seal presented to the Library of the New York Historical Society is said to be unique. A fac simile is shown on Plate C.

The warrant for the fifth Seal bears date May 31, 1690. The fourth Seal served as a model, in most particulars, for this and all subsequent Seals in use in the Province, down to the Revolution; with the exception that the Englishman kneeling was changed to an Indian woman in a similar attitude, and both Indians are offering presents before the effigies of the King and Queen. On the other side of the Seal are the Royal Arms with the Garter, Crown, Supporters and Motto, and this inscription: SIGILLVM. PROVINC. NOSTR. NOV. EBOR., ETC., IN AMERICA. They are the same as those on the Stuart Seal, with the addition of an escutcheon of pretense, containing a Lion rampant, for the Arms of Nassau, of which house King William was a member. A copy of this Seal, taken from the commission of Johannes Abeel, Mayor of Albany, 1694, in the Albany Institute, and the Seal attached to the original charter of Trinity Church, New York, 1697, is shown on Plate D.

The sixth Seal of the Province was that of Queen Anne. On the one side are the Queen's effigy, the Indians offering their tokens of submission as before, and the Royal titles. On the reverse are the Stuart Arms, the escutcheon of Nassau having been removed, with the same emblems and inscriptions, and the Motto, SEMPER EADEM.

The seventh Seal was rendered necessary by the union between England and Scotland, in 1706. The colonial side of the Seal remained the same. On the reverse, the Royal Arms were changed in consequence of the union. On the first and fourth quarters, England empales Scotland; on the second are the lilies of France; on the third the Harp, for Ireland. The inscription and motto are the same as before.

The eighth Seal was ordered October 8th, 1717, and received July 1st, 1718. The Indian figures were changed somewhat, and were of inferior merit ; otherwise the colonial side of the Seal remained the same. This being the Seal of George I, the escutcheon on the reverse was changed, representing England, Scotland, France, Ireland, Brunswick, Lunenburgh, Saxony and Charlemagne. The inscription remained the same, but the Motto was changed to DIEU ET MON DROIT.

The Seal of George II was a great improvement on the last, as a work of art. The kneeling squaw is introduced, nude, and the inscriptions of the two sides of the Seal were properly changed, the words "SIGILLVM PROVINCE NOSTRÆ NOVI EBORACI. IN. AMERICA," being placed on the colonial Seal, and the Royal titles on the same Seal with the Royal Arms.

The Seal of George III was substantially the same, but was still further improved. A copy of the Seal is shown on Plate E.

Since the Revolution and the organization of New York as a State, the appointment by the Legislature of various commissions authorized to prepare devices for the Great Seal of the State has resulted in five marked modifications or variations from the Arms as adopted in 1778. The first was the Great Seal of 1777, impressed upon wax, which was devised by a committee¹ appointed by the Convention, April 15, 1777, consisting of Messrs. Morris, Jay and Hobart, and was to be used for all the purposes for which the Crown Seal was used under the Colony. It is thus described : "A rising sun ; motto, EXCELSIOR ; legend, THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK. On the reverse a rock in the ocean ; legend FRUSTRA." This Seal is shown on Plate F.

The second form was the Arms and Seal complete ; embracing the Seal of 1777, and crest of the eagle on a demi-globe of the Privy Seal, with the supporters Justice and Liberty, which as combined by the new committee in 1778, consisting of Gov. George Clinton and Chancellor Livingston, gives practically what is reproduced in the fifth form of the Arms and Seals as established by the Law of 1882.

The third Seal was devised pursuant to the provisions of an act passed January 26, 1798, authorizing the Comptroller, Attorney-General and Surveyor-General to repair the old Seal, or cause a new one to be made. The commission decided to make a new one, and recorded a description of it January 22, 1799, as follows: "The Arms of the State complete, with supporters, crest and motto; around the same, THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK. On the reverse a rock and waves beating against it; motto FRUSTRA above; 1798 below." This Seal is shown on Plate G.

The Legislature, in 1809 (March 27), passed an act authorizing the Governor to prepare a new Seal. This, the fourth Great Seal, was first used November 28, of the same year. It is thus described: "Argent; a rising sun proper; crest in a wreath; a demi-globe, and an eagle passant, regardant, all proper; supporters, the figure of Justice on the dexter, and Liberty on the sinister side; motto, EXCELSIOR; legend, THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK." The design of this Seal is shown on Plate L, No. 3. The same act authorized the Secretary of State to prepare a Seal to be used for the purpose of authenticating copies of official records.

The act of 1778 approved a design for a Privy Seal which had been devised by the Commission of 1777, and directed that it be used for military commissions, and purposes for which the Seal at Arms of the Governor or Commander-in-Chief was used during the Colonial period. The device of this Seal is the crest of the State Arms, and the motto, EXCELSIOR. Three or four different dies have been used, one of which is shown on Plate L, No. 1. By an act passed in 1827, the Seal of the Adjutant-General was directed to be used on military commissions. This first Seal is shown on Plate L, No. 4, and the Military Seal on Plate L, No. 5. The Privy Seal of the Governor is shown on Plate L, No. 2.

The act of 1778 approved distinct designs for the Arms of the State, the Great Seal and the Privy Seal. The commission of 1777 adopted for the Great Seal, the shield of the Arms of the State. The commission of 1798 adopted the complete Arms of the State, with the necessary legend as the Seal; it had no authority to change the Arms; the supporters, however, were reversed, the scales and the bandage from the eyes of Justice omitted, and the drapery¹ changed. While artistic license with drapery is allowable in heraldry, there is nevertheless historic significance in the Dutch costume, in connection with Liberty and Justice, which we may appreciate, even as against the classic grace of the Grecian.

The Legislature of 1801 (March 20) passed an act providing that the Arms of the State, the Great Seal and the Privy Seal should remain as described in the records in the office of the Secretary of State, thus maintaining the distinction between the three. The Great Seal authorized by the act of 1809 did not affect the Arms of the State. The Legislature in 1813 (February 25) again enacted that the Arms and Seals should remain as described in the records. From the earliest period, the Colonial and State Arms were published on the title pages of the Laws. In the third Great Seal the figures appear seated. See Plate L. In the vignette of the State Arms, as published in the Session Laws from year to year, Justice first appears seated in 1815 and Liberty in 1819. These changes were without authority of law.

The fifth and last form given to the Arms, on the Seals of the State, was in 1882. In the year 1875 the attention of the Legislature was directed to the question of what constituted the correct Arms of the State on account of the desirableness of sending a copy of the same to the Centennial Exhibition held at Philadelphia in 1876, to be exhibited with those of the original thirteen States. A painting was prepared and sent, but soon afterward two drawings of the Arms were discovered which were of eight years earlier date than either of those used as guides for the Philadelphia painting. Investigation also disclosed the fact that during the thirty years preceding, the office of the Secretary of State had not contained a written description of the Arms, and that the three early specimens did not in all respects agree with each other. A resolution was adopted by the Senate, May 21, 1880, appointing a commission composed of Governor Cornell, Secretary of State Carr and Comptroller Wadsworth to ascertain, by examination and comparison of the earliest specimens in existence, what in their judgment was an exact description of the original Arms of the State and to report the same to the Legislature, together with the measures by them deemed necessary to perpetuate the use of the Arms without alteration on the Seals in the public offices of the State. The specimens used by the Commissioners as the basis of their investigations were first, the Arms as shown in the initial letter T of a military commission of June, 1778, a copy of which is shown on Plate I. Second, the flag borne by the Third New York Regiment when commanded by Col. Peter Gansevoort, Jr., during the Revolutionary War, this device is shown on Plate H; and third, the painting suspended in 1785 over the pew of Gov. George Clinton in St. Paul's chapel,

New York city, a fac simile of which is shown on Plate J. The Great Seal and the Privy Seal of 1777, which were the foundation of these three, also furnished the commissioners with important information. In their report made to the Legislature of 1881, they say, "We have pursued the investigation of the topics assigned to us with growing convictions of the importance and suitability of perpetuating with correctness and without variation that device by which the State in her authority and honor is to be recognized, by her own people, by the people of the United States, and by the world. Every reasonable effort should be made that the citizens of the State who are proud of her position and history should also delight in her insignia.

"The device of Arms of this State is so perfect¹ in its conception that our aim is mainly how we can best restore the original. We ought not to favor attempts to alter it for the better. It is characteristic of the geographical and commercial relations of the State, and symbolizes ideas which are in accordance with the loftiest patriotism. By the extensive exhibition of this beautiful emblem, not only upon our seals and military standards, but on our public buildings and on banners at our festivals, we display a most inspiring representation of the authority of the five millions of people of the State, operating through the law at the hands of its administrators."

In 1882, the Arms as approved by the commission were adopted by the Legislature (chap. 190) in an act entitled "An act to re-establish the original Arms of the State of New York and to provide for the use thereof on the public Seals." By this law the Arms are declared to be correctly described as follows, viz.:

CHARGE. Azure, in a landscape, the sun in fess, rising in splendor, or, behind a range of three mountains, the middle one the highest, in base, a ship and sloop under sail, passing and about to meet on a river, bordered below by a grassy shore fringed with shrubs, all proper.

CREST. On a wreath, azure and or, an American eagle, proper, rising to the dexter, from a two-thirds of a globe terrestrial showing the North Atlantic ocean with outlines of its shores.

SUPPORTERS. On a quasi compartment formed by the extension of the scroll.

¹ More full information relative to the history of the establishment and the significance of the State Arms may be found in the Report of the Commissioners on the Correct Arms of the State, in the Senate documents of 1881, and in the first and second papers on the same subject, by Dr. Henry A. Holmes, State Librarian, published in the transactions of the Albany Institute, Vol. 10. A copy of the engraved military commission of 1778, and copies on canvas, in oil colors by Miss Wrightson, of the Colonel Gausevoort flag painting of 1778, the original of which is in the possession of Mrs. A. Lansing, and of the chapel painting of 1785, and specimens also of the wax Great Seal of 1777 may be seen at the State Library.

Dexter. The figure of Liberty proper, her hair disheveled and decorated with pearls, vested azure, sandaled gules, about the waist a cincture or, fringed gules, a mantle of the last depending from the shoulders behind to the feet, in the dexter hand a staff ensigned with a Phrygian cap or, the sinister arm embowed, the hand supporting the shield at the dexter chief point, a royal crown by her sinister foot dejected.

Sinister. The figure of Justice proper, her hair disheveled and decorated with pearls, vested or, sandaled, cinctured and mantled as Liberty, bound about the eyes with a fillet proper, in the dexter hand a straight sword hilted or, erect, resting on the sinister chief point of the shield the sinister arm embowed, holding before her her scales proper.

Motto. On a scroll below the shield argent, in sable, EXCELSIOR.

The device of the re-established Arms is shown on Plate K.

The act re-establishing the Arms required that the Secretary of State should cause to be engraved upon metal two and one-half inches in diameter, the device of Arms of the State accurately conformed to the description of the same given above, and the Arms so engraved surrounded with the legend: The Great Seal of the State of New York; and it alone be used as the Great Seal of the State. He was also directed to cause to be engraved on metal, the Privy Seal for the office of the Governor, and Seals for the Court of Appeals, the Secretary of State, the Comptroller, the Treasurer, the State Engineer and Surveyor and the Adjutant-General, which were to be two inches and a quarter in diameter and to contain the same device of Arms; and each of said Seals was to have an inscription on its face surrounding the Arms containing severally the name and title of the office.

The Seals of all State officers, other than those named, which are authorized by statute to use a Seal, were required to conform to the device described. The diameter of each to be one inch and three-quarters, and to be surrounded with the appropriate name of the office.

The law also further directed that from and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the new Seals only should be used for all the requisite purposes of those offices. The old Seals of the several offices were required to be delivered to the Secretary of State, to be by him defaced with a suitable mark and deposited with the ancient Seals in the State Library.

The device of Arms of the State corresponding to the blazon given was directed to be painted in colors upon wood or canvas, and hung upon the walls of the Executive Chamber, the Court of Appeals, the office of the Secretary of State and of the Senate and Assembly Chambers

The law prohibited pictorial devices other than the Arms of the State from being used in the public offices at the capital for letter headings and envelopes used for official business, and required that when persons printing and circulating public documents under the authority of the State, use a vignette, they shall place upon the title pages of the documents the standard device of the State Arms without alterations or additions. During the hours when the Legislature is in session, the State flag bearing the Arms of the State is required to be displayed from the Capitol together with the flag of the United States.

FINANCES.

At the close of the revolutionary war, New York found itself possessed of an immense extent of unimproved lands lying within its boundaries, which had been the "crown lands," owned by the mother country. There were also quit-rents, which had been reserved on extensive patents granted by the sovereign, which reverted to the State. Chiefly from this source and from the proceeds of the sale of the lands a general fund was made up, the annual revenues of which were intended to defray the expenses of the government and relieve the people from taxation. At that period it was actually a fund, the proceeds of which discharged the State expenses.

From the lands described, the State appropriated liberal bounties to its soldiers, and with the proceeds of one-half million acres constituted a school fund, which was, however, for a time diverted from that use and loaned to individuals and corporations. By failures resulting from these loans, $161,000 was thrown upon the general fund, in accordance with an act passed in 1819 for that purpose. The school fund was in the same year increased by the quit-rents transferred to it from the general fund, and in 1821 the new Constitution transferred all the lands, amounting to 991,659 acres, from the general to the school fund. In the year 1827 a further transfer of $133,616 in stock was made, and in the following year the premium on a sale of State stock, amounting to $46,551.75, was added to the capital of the school fund, notwithstanding which appropriations a deficit of $81,853, in the amount required to make dividends was, up to 1830, supplied from the general fund.

The history of the school fund for the first forty years of its existence was, in brief, this: Its capital, after deducting losses from bad investments, was $2,031,059, and it had distributed to school districts in dividends extending over a period of thirty years the sum of $2,780,560.

In the years 1786, 1792 and 1808 the State had contracted debts chargeable upon the general fund. In 1814, notwithstanding the operation of the school fund, the capital of the general fund amounted to $4,396,943, and the State debt to the sum of $1,503,681, leaving $2,893,259 as surplus, out of which the State paid the direct tax levied by the general government for war purposes. On the restoration of peace it imposed a tax to replenish the general fund, which tax ceased in 1826.

In entering upon its system of internal improvements, in 1817, a clear and well-defined policy was adopted. When the construction of the Erie canal was begun it was determined to constitute a fund which should, without possibility of failure, meet the interest on the loans which were required to construct it. To this end certain revenues were taken from the general fund and constituted a canal fund, under the charge of commissioners, whose duty it was to limit the loans to an amount the annual interest on which should fall within the sum of these revenues. Under their management the loan was disposed of at a premium of $663,623, realized on a total of $7,737,777, borrowed up to the date of the completion of the work, in 1826.

The Constitution of 1821 set apart the tolls on the canal, together with the salt and the auction duties, as a sinking fund for the extinguishment of the canal debt. So well had the policy been observed of placing beyond contingency the payment of the canal debt, that all of it which fell due in 1836 was paid, and a fund of $3,931,132 accumulated to meet the remainder, amounting to $3,762,256, due in 1845, for which the commissioners offered premiums of nine, eighteen and even twenty-four per cent, without inducing the holders to surrender it. In 1836, the money to discharge the debt having been realized from the sinking fund, an amendment to the Constitution restored to the general fund the salt and the auction duties which had been diverted from it, and also appropriated to it two hundred thousand dollars annually from the canal revenues. The total yield of these duties to the canal fund from 1817 to 1836 had been $5,647,497, being $2,055,458 from salt and $3,592,039 from auction duties, which, with an amount of $73,500 derived from steamboat tax, had been expended upon the canal and had reduced by that amount the debt which would otherwise have been contracted in its construction. These duties, aided by the canal revenues, finally discharged the debt.

In 1825 the construction of lateral canals was undertaken without specifically providing by taxation for the interest, reliance being placed solely upon the prospective revenues of the works to discharge the indebtedness incurred in their construction. In that year a bill was passed to borrow money for the construction of the Cayuga and Seneca canal, which loan was to constitute part of the canal debt to be paid out of the canal fund.

Laws for the construction of other lateral canals followed, which works, proving to be profitless undertakings, threw an additional debt of nearly ten millions of dollars on the canal fund without any provision being made to increase the means to meet it. The enlargement of the Erie canal was advocated at about the same time, and $721,441 from the surplus revenues of the canal fund was expended for that purpose prior to 1838, in which year a law was passed authorizing a loan of four millions of dollars to carry out the work more speedily. The existing debt of the canal fund at that date was given at $10,801,839 and its increase to twenty-one millions of dollars was contemplated in adopting a policy of extensive construction, based upon prospective revenues to be derived from completed works. Under this policy the actual funded debt in 1841 amounted to $17,561,567, while the amount required to finish works in progress was $24,590,026, and at the same time works had been surveyed to complete which would require $26,648,111, making the debt, actual and prospective, at that date $68,799,704.

In accordance with the policy of loaning the State credit entered upon in 1827, stock to the amount of $5,228,700 was loaned to ten companies, chiefly railroads. Four of these subsequently failed, and the general fund became burdened with their indebtedness, amounting to $3,665,700, of which sum three millions of dollars became chargeable on the failure of the Erie railroad in 1842. This fund, already exhausted by the payment of one million five hundred thousand dollars of old debt prior to 1825, and the transfer of its revenues to the school and canal funds, had also contracted debts which amounted, in 1842, to the sum of $1,948,000; so that when, in 1840, it was called upon to restore an amount borrowed from the bank safety fund it was found necessary to have recourse to a loan, and three hundred and forty-eight thousand dollars in five per cent stock was issued. The current revenues had been barely adequate to meet the annual expenses of the government, and the interest on the stock issued to the defaulting railroads.

In this condition of affairs the solvency of the State was put in great jeopardy, and but one course was, by general consent, to be adopted. This was to stop all expenditures upon the public works, to issue stock in order to pay outstanding indebtedness to contractors and preserve the credit of the State, and to impose a tax to make good the deficiency for the support of the government and for interest on the state debt. This course was adopted by an act passed in 1842. At the date of its passage the canal debt amounted to $18,056,000, and to pay arrearages to contractors, an additional sum of $3,175,000, was borrowed in a seven per cent bond. The act established a sinking fund, which was to extinguish the whole debt in about twenty-two years, requiring at that time to meet, in principal and interest, a sum of more than forty millions of dollars or nearly two millions of dollars per annum over and above the State expenses.

The stocks which had been issued by the State up to the year 1845 may be summed up as follows :

PURPOSE OF ISSUE.	ISSUED.	REDEEMED.	OUTSTANDING.
Erie and Champlain Canal.....	$7,737,771	$7,737,771
Other canal issues (profitless)	14,472,257	2,949,531	$11,522,726
Preserving the State credit.....	5,422,136	346,006	5,076,130
General fund.....	909,500		909,500
Bankrupt companies	3,665,700		3,665,700
Solvent companies	1,563,000	500,000	1,063,000
Total	$33,770,264	$11,533,308	$22,237,056

Such was the condition of the State debt in 1845. A constitutional convention was held at Albany, and a new Constitution adopted October 9, 1846. The first section of the seventh article of the Constitution which was then formed established the canal debt sinking fund to be constituted of the sum of one million three hundred thousand dollars taken annually from the revenues of the canal until 1855, and one million seven hundred thousand dollars annually after that period to pay the interest and redeem the principal of that part of the State debt called the canal debt, until the same should be wholly paid. The second provision of this article authorized what was called the general-fund-debt sinking fund, consisting of the sum of $350,000, to be annually appropriated and set apart from the revenues of the canals, to pay the interest and redeem the principal of that part of the State debt called the general fund debt, including the debt for loans of the State credit to railroad companies which had failed to pay the interest thereon, and also the contingent debt on State stocks loaned to incorporated companies which had hitherto paid the interest thereon, whenever and so far as any part thereof might become a charge on the treasury or the general fund, until the same should be wholly paid. In case, however, the amount taken first to be added to the canal debt sinking fund should absorb too large a part of the canal revenues to enable this payment to be made, then the sum so deferred should be paid, with quarterly interest, to the general-fund-debt sinking fund as soon as it could be done consistently with the just rights of the creditors holding the canal debt. It was also provided that when the canal indebtedness should have been liquidated, the amount to be paid annually into the sinking fund should be increased to one million five hundred thousand dollars. It was further provided that the sum of two hundred thousand dollars should be paid out of the surplus canal revenues into the general fund for the purpose of defraying the current expenses of the State government, and that whatever amount might remain over should be applied by the Legislature to the completion of the Erie canal enlargement and the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals.

After 1854 the sum of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars was authorized to be thus paid into the general fund. These provisions amounted practically at the time to an entire suspension of the public works for an indefinite period. An attempt was made in 1851 to correct this difficulty, and after a remarkable contest in the Legislature, a bill was passed appropriating nine millions of dollars for the completion of the canals, under provisions which were subsequently declared by the Court of Appeals to be unconstitutional. The result was a controversy, to reconcile which the Constitution was so amended in 1854 as to authorize the creation of a new debt for the enlargement and completion of the canals, and of a sinking fund, to be constituted of a sum to be set apart annually, "sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due and extinguish the principal in eighteen years." It was further provided that "the rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canals should not be reduced below those of the year 1852, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the Legislature." In 1882 the Constitution was so amended as to abolish tolls imposed on persons and property transported on the canals, and the expenses of their maintenance and repairs was provided for by taxation. In case the sinking funds, or either of them, proved insufficient to enable the State to meet its obligations to its creditors the Legislature was required to levy equitable taxes, that it might so "increase the revenues of these funds as to make them, respectively sufficient to preserve the public faith." The Constitution also guards explicitly against the creation or further indebtedness, except in the matter of loans of less than one million of dollars to meet casual deficits or failures in revenues, or for expenses not provided for, or debts which may be contracted to repel invasion, suppress insurrection or defend the State in war. All propositions to create such indebtedness must be authorized by a law having a specific object, which law must impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax sufficient to pay the interest and liquidate the principal within the period of eighteen years. The bill must afterward be submitted to the people at a general election, or an election at which proposed amendments to the Constitution shall have been submitted and receive a majority of votes in its favor. Under this provision of the Constitution the law creating the bounty State debt (chap. 325, Laws of 1865) was enacted. It authorized the creation of a debt not exceeding thirty millions of dollars, and levied a direct annual tax to pay the interest on the debt as it should fall due, and sufficient to pay the whole principal of the debt within the period of twelve years.

The debt of New York probably reached its maximum in 1865-'66, at which time the canal debt was about nineteen million five hundred thousand dollars the general fund debt six millions of dollars and the bounty debt $27,644,000, making a total of $53,144,000. Since then it has gradually decreased. In 1870, the debt was $32,409,144. In 1880 the bonded debt of the State was $8,988,360. The financial history of New York affords a striking example of the beneficent effect of the aid of the Constitutional legislation in the liquidation of the State debt. The general fund State debt and the bounty debt are to-day all paid, and a large balance in the canal sinking fund leaves the amount of that debt unprovided for on September 30, 1887, the sum of $2,583,121.16, which with $122,694.87 of general fund for payment of Indian annuities and eight hundred thousand dollars of Niagara Reservation bonds, makes the total State indebtedness unprovided for at the above date $3,505,816.03.

The treasury accounts of New York are at present divided into five principal heads. First the general fund, which represents the regular and direct finances of the government; second, the common school fund; third, the literature fund; fourth, the canal fund; fifth, the United States deposit fund, the latter being the amount of three installments received in 1837 from the Federal Government under the act for distributing the surplus revenue fund. Efforts had been periodically made subsequent to 1830 to induce the government to distribute the land revenue or surplus revenue, or to assume the stocks of indebted States and to distribute an equal portion of credit to non indebted States. In 1837 a distribution of the surplus revenues of the United States among the several States, provided for by an act passed in 1836, actually took place. The fund originally proposed to be distributed among the States was thirty-six millions of dollars, and $28,101,644.91 was in fact distributed, in three quarterly installments, the first amount transferred being under date of February, 1837, the second amount in April, and the third in July of the same year; the fourth and last installment, however, was not paid. Of the moneys so distributed, the State of New York received the sum of $4,014,520.71. A series of disasters, culminating in the panic of 1837, so disordered the finances of the general government before the distribution had been completed that it became necessary to have recourse to a new act of Congress, which was passed on the second of October, to direct the postponement of the transfer of the remaining fourth until the 1st of January, 1839. A subsequent act was passed, postponing the payment indefinitely. This last law further provided that the amount deposited should remain with the several States until otherwise directed by Congress. Here the matter has rested for the past fifty years.

Besides those above enumerated there are several other funds of minor importance of which the State is a trustee, and many of the complications in its finances arise on account of transferring securities from one fund to another during important exigencies in the affairs of the treasury. The Constitution provides that the capital of the common school fund, the capital of the literature fund, and the capital of the United States deposit fund, shall be respectively preserved inviolate. The revenue of the common school fund is required to be applied to the support of common schools; the revenue of the literature fund to the support of academies, and the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars of the revenues of the United States deposit fund is each year appropriated to and made part of the capital of the common school fund.

Under the present Constitution, the State Treasurer receives the public funds, and pays drafts upon the warrants of the Comptroller and Superintendent of Public Instruction. Section eight of article seven of the Constitution provides that no money shall ever be paid out of the treasury of the State, or any of the funds under its management, except in pursuance of an appropriation by law ; unless such payment be made within two years next after the passage of such appropriation act; and every law making a new appropriation, or continuing or reviving an appropriation is required to distinctly specify the sum appropriated, and the object to which it is to be applied, and it is not sufficient that such law refer to any other law to fix such sum. A further provision of the Constitution is that the credit of the State shall not, in any manner, be given or loaned to, or in aid of any individual, association, corporation or private undertaking. This restriction does not, however, prevent the Legislature from making such provision for the education and support of the blind, the deaf and dumb, and juvenile delinquents, as to it may seem proper, nor does it apply to any fund or property now held, or which may hereafter be held by the State for educational purposes.

THE EXECUTIVE.

The Governor was, in the beginning, not only the Chief Executive, but the Chief Judge. The history of the Colony is a history of constant aggressions upon his powers and prerogatives. We have traced the history of these aggressions, and the process by which the present conception of the jurisdiction of the Executive Department has been reached. It remains only to record the changes which have occurred more in detail, and to trace the development of the various administrative bureaus.

The Director-General appointed by the Dutch West India Company had associated with him a Council, but it exercised no control, and rendered no independent decisions. Such executive officers as he needed to see that his will was obeyed were appointed, and some inferior courts were established. The Director and Council possessed supreme judicial powers.

The title of the Chief Executive, under the English government, was, Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over the Province of New York and Territories depending thereon in America. He was also Vice-Admiral of New York and Connecticut, and keeper of the Great Seal of the Province. His commission was under the Sign Manual and Great Seal of the Realm, and he held his office during pleasure. With his commission, he received also instructions explanatory of the patent, and these together embodied the powers with which he was invested for the administration of the government. He was thereby authorized to suspend members of the Council, for cause, or in case of vacancy, and to nominate others in their stead, provided the number did not exceed seven; to summons, prorogue and dissolve the General Assembly, and with their consent to make laws, which were to be transmitted within three months, for the royal approval or disallowance; but all bills affecting the prerogative or private property must have the royal assent before they could become law. In the enactment of all laws the Governor had a negative voice. With the consent of the Council, he could erect and establish courts of justice, and them invest with all reasonable and necessary powers, fees and privileges thereunto belonging, but he could not erect any court not before constituted, nor dissolve any court already established; also, with like consent, he appointed judges, justices of the peace, and other officers necessary for the administration of justice; could pardon all offenses, treason and willful murder excepted; and, in these cases, grant reprieves until the king's pleasure became known. He was empowered to collate to churches and ecclesiastical benefices, liberty of conscience having been allowed to all persons except Catholics; to grant marriage licenses and probate of wills, and license school-masters and printers; call out the militia and appoint officers thereof; erect forts, cities, boroughs and towns, and establish fairs and markets; sign warrants for the issue and payment of public moneys, and, with the consent of the Council, grant patents for lands, ferries, ports, harbors and manors. Finally, he was instructed to give due encouragement to the Royal African Company of England, in order that the province may have a constant and sufficient supply of merchantable negroes at moderate prices. The salary of the Governor, at the time of the Revolution, was £2,000 sterling, and £400 currency, additional, for fuel and candles. This allowance, however, was exclusive of fees, the amount of which, on land patents, alone, after the close of the French war, must have been very large. In case of the Governor's death, or of his absence from the province, the Lieutenant-Governor administered the government; but if no such officer existed, then the eldest councillor resident within the province took upon himself the administration of the government as President of the Council.

PLATE G

The independent government of New York really began April 19, 1775, and the Presidents of the various Conventions, Congresses and Councils were the Chief Executives of the State. They possessed no powers, except such as were conferred by resolution.

Under the First State Constitution the Governor was chosen triennially, a plurality being sufficient to elect; was general and commander-in-chief of all the militia, and admiral of the navy; had power to convene the Legislature on extraordinary occasions; to prorogue them from time to time, provided such prorogations did not exceed sixty days in any one year;¹ to grant reprieves and pardons to persons convicted of crimes other than treason or murder, in which cases he might suspend the execution of the sentence until reported to the Legislature at their subsequent meeting, when they were either to pardon, direct the execution of the criminal, or grant a further reprieve. It was also the duty of the Governor to inform the Legislature, at every session, of the condition of the State, so far as respected his department; to recommend such matters to their consideration as appeared to him to concern its good government, welfare and prosperity; to correspond with the Continental Congress, and other States; to transact all necessary business with the officers of government, civil and military; to take care that the laws were faithfully executed, to the best of his ability, and to expedite all such measures as might be resolved upon by the Legislature. He was a member of the Council of Appointment, and President of the Council of Revision.

The Constitution of 1821 changed the term of office of the Governor from three to two years. No person was eligible to the office who was not a native citizen of the United States, a freeholder of the age of thirty years, and a resident of the State five years, unless absent from it on public business. A plurality of votes was sufficient to elect. In case of a tie, the choice devolved on the Legislature in joint ballot. The power to prorogue the Legislature was not conferred. The power to grant pardon for murder was conferred. The power of appointment of officers not made elective was conferred on the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Council of Revision was abolished, and the power to veto all bills passed by the Legislature conferred on the Governor, when a vote of two-thirds of all the members present would be necessary to its passage by the Legislature. The Constitution of 1846 greatly reduced the number of officers appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; but, in other respects, the powers and duties of the Governor remained the same until the adoption of the amendments to the Constitution in 1874. No person is eligible to the office of Governor who is not at least thirty years of age, and five years a resident of the State. As new offices are created from time to time, the power of appointment is usually conferred on the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and besides the other offices named in this work, he appoints Notaries Public and Commissioners of Deeds in other States and foreign countries, etc. Most of the vacancies occurring in office (except Members of the Legislature and Congressmen) are filled by him until the next general election, and he likewise possesses the power of suspension or removal, under certain restrictions prescribed by statute. He is, ex-officio, a Trustee of the finished portions of the Capitol, and of several of the other public buildings of the State. By amendments adopted in 1874, the term of office was extended to three years; the salary increased from $4,000 to $10,000, and an executive residence directed to be provided. The Governor may veto specific items in any bill appropriating money; and no bill can become a law after the final adjournment of the Legislature, unless approved within thirty days thereafter.

The Privy Seal¹ in use prior to 1883 is shown on Plate L, No. 2. The Seal now in use is the Arms of the State as described in Chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription "State of New York — Executive Privy Seal."

1 A fragment of the canvass of 1777 (Miscellaneous Papers 37, Secretary's office), shows the returns from Albany, Cumberland, Dutchess, Tryon, Ulster, Westchester, as follows: George Clinton, 865; John Morin Scott, 386; Philip Schuyler, 1,012; John Jay, 367; Philip Livingston, 5; Robert R. Livingston, 7. The votes from Orange and other southern counties gave the election to Clinton. The returns were made to the Council of Safety, July 9, and the Governor was sworn in on the 30th, at Kingston. He was then in active command of the Militia, and did not quit the field until after Burgoyne's surrender.

2 We are not aware that the results of these elections are preserved. Clinton's majority in 1780 was 3,261.

3 Ten precincts gave in their ballots contrary to the forms of law, and were rejected by the Inspectors. The majority for Clinton in those precincts were proportionate to the above numbers.

4 The votes of Clinton, Otsego and Tioga counties were not canvassed. The reason of this is recorded in the Secretary's office. Deeds, xxiv, p. 249.

5 Acted as Governor from February 24 to July 1, 1817, in place of Tompkins elected Vice-President.

6 Acted as Governor from the death of Clinton, February 11, 1828, till the expiration of the term.

7 Resigned March 12, 1829, on being appointed Secretary of State under Jackson.

8 Acted as Governor during remainder of Van Buren's term.

9 Originally certified as 239,736, and afterward corrected as above.

10 Resigned January 6, 1885, having been elected President.

PRIVATE SECRETARY.

By chapter 5 of the Revised Laws, passed December 3, 1827 (to take effect January 1, 1830), the Governor was authorized to appoint a Private Secretary and Doorkeeper of the Executive Chamber, to hold their offices during his pleasure. The office of Private Secretary, however, existed before that date, and is referred to in acts passed in the year 1793 (chapter 93), in 1801 (chapter 173), and in the Revised Laws of 1813. Under the provisions of an act passed April 1, 1858 (chapter 64), the Revised Statutes were so amended concerning the powers and duties of the Governor, as to make the Executive Chamber, to a limited degree, an office of Record. This act authorized the Governor to appoint the necessary clerks and messengers, and continue the office of Private Secretary.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

The office of Lieutenant-Governor, which had existed under the Crown at irregular periods, was established permanently by the first State Constitution. The Lieutenant-Governor must have the same qualifications, and is elected in the same manner and for the same term as the Governor, whose duties he discharges in case of vacancy in that office. He is, ex officio, President of the Senate, a Commissioner of the Canal Fund and of the Land Office, a member of the Canal Board, a Trustee of the Idiot Asylum and of Union College, a Regent of the University, a Trustee of the finished portions of the new Capitol, and also Trustee of several of the other public buildings of the State, and a member of the State Board of Charities, and of the State Board of Equalization of Assessments. Prior to the adoption of the amendments to the Constitution in 1874, he received a salary of six dollars per day, for each day's attendance in the performance of his duties, and mileage; by those amendments his salary is fixed at $5,000 per annum, without other compensation, fee or perquisite for any service he may be required to perform.

¹ The list is incomplete. The names of those only in office since the passage of the act of 1858 are given.

STAFF OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

The Governor, by virtue of his office, is commander-in-chief of the militia of the State. Under the First Constitution, the officers of the staff of the commander-in-chief derived their commissions from the Council of Appointment, and under the Second Constitution direct from the Governor, except the Commissary-General, who was appointed in the same manner as Senators in Congress.

An Adjutant-General is required to be appointed in each State, by an act of Congress passed May 8, 1793; but the office has existed in New York from the time of its organization as a State. The Adjutant-General is Chief of Staff and ranks as Major-General. The remaining members of the Staff (except Aides-de-Camp and Military Secretary) rank as Brigadier-General. The Privy Seal was originally used on military commissions;¹ but by an act passed April 16, 1827, the Adjutant-General was directed to prepare a seal for that purpose, and his office was made an office of record in 1831. The original seal is shown on Plate L, No. 4, and the seal in use until 1883 on Plate L, No. 5. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Adjutant-General."

The title of the office of Commissary of Military Stores was changed to that of Commissary-General in 1815, and to that of Commissary-General and Chief of Ordnance in 1870. He is appointed by the Governor and Senate for two years. His office is in New York city. The office of Commissary-General of Subsistence was created by the Militia Law of 1862.

The Adjutant-General, Inspector-General and Commissary-General are constantly on duty and are allowed Assistants, who rank as Colonel. The Adjutant-General receives a salary of $4,000; Assistant Adjutant-General, $2,500. The salary of the Chief of Ordnance is $2,500; of his Assistant, $2,300; of General Inspector of Rifle Practice, $2,000. The Inspector-General receives $6 per day of actual service, and his Assistant is allowed $2,000 and expenses.

The Military Code of 1883 provides that the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, when upon actual duty under the provisions of the Code, either at drills, parades, encampments, lake or seacoast defense duty, or otherwise, shall be paid such reasonable and just compensation, not exceeding the full pay and allowances of officers of the same rank in the army of the United States, as the Commander-in-Chief shall deem proper. In no event shall such compensation exceed $2,500 per annum, together with necessary expenses.

The Bureau of Military Statistics was created by an act passed April 8, 1863 (ch. 113). It was conducted under the management of a Chief until 1868 (ch. 717), when it was made a bureau in the office of the Adjutant-General.

lature, with fees, which were very considerable. The duties of the office were performed most of the time by deputy.

The Secretary of State under the First Constitution derived his office from the Council of Appointment, of which he was, ex officio, Clerk. He was also a Commissioner of the Land Office,¹ and of the Canal Board.² The Secretary was paid by fees until March 10, 1795, when he received a salary of £600, and £500 for clerk hire. By an act passed March 27, 1809, he was directed to procure a seal, for the authentication of copies of records, an engraving of which is given on Plate M, No. 1. The duties of the office were materially enlarged under the Second Constitution, the Secretary being made Superintendent of Common Schools, a Regent of the University,³ a member of the Canal Board,⁴ and of the Board of State Canvassers.⁵ He was appointed for a term of three years by an open separate nomination, and subsequent joint ballot of the Senate and Assembly.⁶ His salary was $2,500 until the adoption of the constitutional amendments in 1874.

The Secretary of State is not only keeper of the State archives; but he is also charged with numerous specific duties. He superintends the publication and distribution of the Laws, and issues patents for lands, commissions, pardons and licenses, and notices for elections. In his office are filed applications from companies formed under general laws, except banking institutions and insurance companies. He reports annually to the Legislature the statistics of pauperism and crime received from the several counties, and upon such other subjects as may be required by law or by a resolution of either branch of the Legislature. At the opening of each session, he administers the oath of office to each member of Assembly. He is, ex officio, a Regent of the University, a Commissioner of the Land Office and of the Canal Fund, a member of the Canal Board and of the State Board of Equalization of Assessments and Board of State Canvassers, a Trustee of the Idiot Asylum and of Union University, and a member of the State Board of Charities. He is elected (each odd year) for a term of two years, and receives a salary of $5,000. The fees of the office go into the Treasury. He appoints a deputy (who is ex officio clerk of the Commissioners of the Land Office), and the necessary clerks. The seal of this office in use prior to 1883 is shown on Plate M, No. 2. The seal now in use is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Secretary of State."

COMPTROLLER.

The Director-General and two of the Council, whereof the Receiver-General was to be one, were designated a Board of Audit under the government of the Province of New Netherland, May 25, 1658. Under the government of the Colony of New York the auditing power was vested in an Auditor-General of the Plantations, and of Deputy Auditor-General for the Colony. Joint commissioners to examine accounts were appointed by the Council and Assembly in 1701 and 1702, and in some subsequent years. Later, the General Assembly as a body were constituted Commissioners of Accounts by statute. An Auditor-General was appointed by the Provincial Convention in 1776, who held office until 1782, when the Governor and Senate were authorized to appoint an Auditor for two years. The office was continued by several acts until 1797, when it was abolished, and that of Comptroller substituted in its place, by an act passed February 17, 1797, which was continued by repeated extensions of two and three years, until February 28, 1812, when it was permanently organized. He was a Commissioner of the Land Office and of the Canal Fund. The Comptroller's Seal adopted on the organization of the office, in 1797 (and in use until 1883), is given on Plate M, No. 3. The Comptroller, in addition to his duties as chief financial officer of the State, under the Second Constitution, was also a member of the same Boards as the Secretary of State. Salary, $2,500.

The Comptroller is now the auditor of public accounts, excepting of those payable from the Free School Fund and manages the funds of the State; loans its moneys; superintends the collection of its taxes, and the payment of current expenses of the State. Chapter 69, Laws of 1883, also devolves upon him the duties previously performed by the Auditor of the Canal Department, and establishes in his office a Bureau of Canal Affairs. He is, ex officio, a Commissioner of the Land Office and of the Canal Fund, a member of the Canal Board and of the Board of State Canvassers, a Trustee of the Idiot Asylum and of Union University, and a member of the State Board of Charities and of the State Board of Equalization of Assessments. He is elected biennially (each odd year), receives a salary of $6,000, and is allowed a deputy, an accountant and clerks. The seal now in use is the Arms of the State, as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Comptroller."

The Treasurer received and disbursed the taxes levied by the General Assembly, or raised under their order, notwithstanding the Crown had appointed an officer for the same purpose. His salary was £300, currency. The Provincial Congress continued the office, and the First State Constitution directed the appointment to be made by an act of the Legislature, to originate with the Assembly, no member of either branch of the Legislature being eligible. The Treasurer, under the First Constitution, was also Commissioner of the Canal Fund and the Land Office, and under the Second Constitution he was a member of the same Boards as the Secretary of State, and was appointed in the same manner. Salary, $2,500.

Under the present Constitution, the State Treasurer receives the public funds, and pays drafts upon the warrants of the Comptroller, and Superintendent of Public Instruction. ATTORNEYS-GENERAL.

The principal law officer of the Province of New Netherland was termed the Schout-Fiscal. He acted in a double capacity—as Attorney-General and Sheriff. He arrested, examined and afterward prosecuted all law breakers. In grave cases, where there existed just suspicion, but no direct evidence of the prisoner's guilt, he had the latter subjected to torture, which was done in his presence and that of a magistrate, in order to elicit confession ; but in case the prisoner did not then confess his guilt, he could not be again subjected to that ordeal. It was also his duty to prevent all detriment to the public fisc, or treasury, by smuggling or fraud, and to enter suits for the recovery of quit rents or other revenue. In his capacity of Sheriff, he executed the judgments of the Supreme Court both in civil and criminal cases, and then was allowed deputies. He had a voice in the enactment of all laws and ordinances, and a seat in the Council, except when he officiated as prosecuting officer.

The Attorney-General of the Colony of New York, besides the ordinary duties of public attorney, was charged with the preparation of letters-patent for corporations, grants of land, etc., the fees from which were highly lucrative. He received his appointment from the Governor until 1702, after which he was commissioned by the Crown, and held the office during its pleasure. In 1693 the salary was fixed at £50 per annum. In 1700 the office of Advocate-General, previously the title of the public attorney of the Admiralty Court, was consolidated with that of Attorney-General. In 1702 the salary was £150 ; in 1729, £100 ; in 1765, for extra services, £150 ; in 1774, £350 sterling from the Crown, and £150 New York currency, from the Province, for extra services.

The duties of the Attorney-General, as law officer of the State, have always been substantially the same. Under the First Constitution he received his commission from the Council of Appointment. The Attorney-General was also a Commissioner of the Canal Fund and of the Land Office. Under the Second Constitution he was a member of the same Boards as the Secretary of State, and received his appointment in the same manner. Salary, $1,000.

The Attorney-General is now, ex officio, Commissioner of the Land Office and of the Canal Fund, a member of the Canal Board, the Board of State Canvassers, the State Board of Health, the State Board of Equalization of Assessments, and the State Board of Charities and a Trustee of the Union University and the New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home. He is required to attend each meeting of the State Board of Claims for the purpose of protecting the interests of the State. He is elected biennially (each odd year), receives a salary of $5,000, and is allowed three deputies and several clerks. The seal of the office authorized by the Legislature of 1878, and in use until January 1, 1883, is shown on Plate M, No. 5. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Attorney-General."

STATE ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR.

The office of Surveyor-General existed under the government of the Province of New Netherland and was continued throughout the colonial period. The Surveyor-General became a Commissioner of the Land Office, July 20, 1708. The office of the Surveyor of the King's Woods existed during the colonial period.

1 Queen Anne, by letters mandatory, dated June 18, 1705, directed Lord Cornbury to constitute Sampson Broughton Attorney-General, in place of his father, S. S. Broughton, deceased, but he did not comply, on the plea that it was necessary that the acting Attorney-General (Bickley) should have the management of certain important trials then at hand. Broughton never was commissioned.

2 Appointed to act during Rayner's absence in England.

3 On the decease of Rayner, Mr. Jamison was regularly appointed Attorney-General, January 22, 1720.

4 Re-appointed October 23, 1723.

5 Re-appointed October 30, 1761.

6 Appointed in 1767 to act as King's attorney, during the absence of Kempe.

7 Appointed by an ordinance of the Convention; commissioned January 15, 1778.

8 Resigned November 23, 1853.

9 Appointed vice Chatfield, resigned.

* Re-elected.

SURVEYORS OF THE KING'S WOODS.

John Bridges..... 1698 | John Wentworth..... 1767 | Adolphus Benzel 1777

The office of Surveyor-General was renewed under the State government, by an act passed March 20, 1781, for raising two regiments for the defense of the State, the recruits for which were to be allowed bounties of unappropriated lands. The Surveyor-General under the first Constitution was appointed by the Council of Appointment. He was a Commissioner of the Canal Fund and of the Land Office; and under the second Constitution, of the Board of State Canvassers. He had numerous special duties imposed upon him, relative to the sale and settlement of lands, the adjustment of Indian titles, and other internal land matters. Salary, $800.

The Constitution of 1846 abolished the office of Surveyor-General and instituted in its place that of State Engineer and Surveyor, possessing all the powers of the former except that of Commissioner of the Canal Fund. In addition, he has general duties relative to the canals not required of the former officer. [Previous to 1883 he also had general duties relative to the railroads of the State which were transferred to the Board of Railroad Commissioners (chapter 353, Laws of 1882)]. He is, ex officio, a Trustee of the Union University, a Commissioner of the Land Office, and a member of the Canal Board and Board of State Canvassers. He is elected biennially (each odd year); receives a salary of $5,000; has a deputy and necessary clerks. The Canal Engineering Department is under the supervision of the State Engineer and Surveyor. Three Division Engineers and three Resident Engineers are appointed by him. The seal of the office in use prior to 1883 is shown on Plate M, No. 6. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription "State of New York — State Engineer and Surveyor."

CUSTOMS.

The Receiver-General under the governments of the province of New Netherland and the colony of New York was the Collector of the Port, there was also a Surveyor and Searcher of the Port and other officers. The Collector was appointed by the Commissioners of the Customs in London, by virtue of a warrant of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and received a salary of £55 sterling; the Comptroller, appointed by the same authority, received the same salary; the Surveyor and Searcher, £60 sterling; the Land Waiter, £50 sterling; the Tide Surveyor, £60 sterling; three Tide Waiters, £30 sterling each; the Naval Officer appointed by the Crown, no salary. Most of these officers were recipients of a large amount of fees.

Besides these, the Governor appointed two Gaugers of Liquors subject to provincial duty, and two provincial Land and Tide Waiters, the former receiving a salary of £30 and the latter £50 New York currency.

On the institution of the State government, the Legislature provided for a Collector of Customs, and voted large sums to the Continental Congress from the revenues. On the adoption of the Federal Constitution, State officers of customs were abolished. We present the entire list here.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Director-General and Council of the Province of New Netherland were charged with the details of Indian affairs, under the Dutch Government. Relations with the tribes grew more complex after the English conquest, and the Governor's residence at New York rendered it necessary that some persons at Albany should be commissioned to receive intelligence from the Indians, and treat with them upon emergencies. This was the origin of this department. It was managed at first by the magistrates of that place.¹ A distinct Board was subsequently established, which transacted all business intrusted to the Governor. They received no salaries, but considerable sums were deposited in their hands for occasional presents; and being, for the most part, themselves engaged in the Indian trade, the office of Commissioner became a source of great importance and profit. They kept records of all their proceedings, which, however, are now missing. The Board was eventually abolished, in 1755, when the Crown assumed the exclusive control of Indian affairs, dividing the Colonies, for that purpose, into a Northern and Southern department. New York was included in the former.

The diplomacy, statesmanship and good faith exhibited in the earliest management of Indian affairs reflect the highest credit on those charged therewith, and laid the territorial foundations of the commonwealth on the secure basis of honorable treaties honorably kept.² The inspiration and guidance in these relations came largely from the Schuylers, under whom Sir William Johnson was trained. The rupture between Clinton and Delancey³ led to the appointment of Johnson as Sole Commissary, the Indian Commissioners being opposed to the Governor. General Philip Schuyler was intimately associated with Johnson.

1 The relations with the Five Nations were, from the beginning, under the immediate supervision of Albanians; but were at first principally in charge of Philip Pieterse Schuyler, who came from Amsterdam, Holland, and settled in Albany, then Beverwyck. December, 1650, he married Margritta Van Slichtenhorst, by whom he had ten children. He was a trader, or merchant, and in his business transactions had much to do with the Indians, whom he always treated fairly and honorably. They became much attached to him, the chiefs visiting him socially at his house in the city and on his farm four miles north of Albany. Near his residence in the city he built a house especially for their entertainment. In 1655 he attended a convention held with the Mohawks as a delegate from Albany, after which time he had much to do with the varied and frequent negotiations with the Indians of the Five Nations. He assisted in inaugurating the Indian policy which in time became the settled policy of the province, to treat them as friends and allies, a policy pursued by his son, the celebrated Peter Schuyler. He was appointed a magistrate of Albany in 1656, a position he held, with an interval of four years, until 1679. At that time this was a high office, bestowed only upon citizens of the highest character. This brought him in contact with the Governor and his Council with whom he corresponded. He accumulated a large landed estate lying in and about Albany and in the city of New York. He died in May, 1683, leaving a will now on file in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals. He had ten children, eight of whom survived him (two, the eldest born son and a daughter having died in infancy or youth), five sons and three daughters. David Schuyler, from Amsterdam, who resided in Albany from about 1650 to 1688, is supposed to have been a brother of Philip Schuyler the Hollander. He married Catalyn Verplanck, in New York, October 13, 1657. He made his will May, 1688, and died soon after, leaving five sons and three daughters, four of whom were under age at the date of his will. He was a merchant, attended to his business quietly, and was very little in public life. He was a Commissioner or Magistrate one term only.

2 See English Jurisdiction, page 64, and Boundaries.

3 See page 85. Two Philip Schuylers are there mentioned; the Indian Commissioner and the one whose residence at Saratoga was burned in 1745. The latter was a son of Johannis Schuyler. Colonel Peter Schuyler, there mentioned, was a son of Arent Schuyler, third son of Philip Pieterse Schuyler.

PUBLIC WORKS.

The practicability and expediency of constructing canals to connect the headwaters of the Hudson river with the Erie and Champlain lakes were early discussed, and by an act of March 30, 1792, Commissioners were appointed to take subscriptions and issue stock in the Western and Northern Inland Navigation Companies. The following Commissioners were named in the act: Samuel Jones, David Gelston, Comfort Sands, Melancton Smith and Nicholas Hoffman in New York, and Abraham Ten Broeck, John Tayler, Philip S. Van Rensselaer, Cornelius Glen and John Ten Broeck, in Albany. The Legislature, by joint resolution of March 15, 1810, appointed Gouverneur Morris, Stephen Van Rensselaer, De Witt Clinton, Simeon De Witt, William North, Thomas Eddy and Peter B. Porter, a commission to explore a route for a canal to Lake Erie, who were directed to report to the Legislature as soon as practicable. On the 8th of April, 1811, Robert R. Livingston and Robert Fulton were added to the Commission, and they were directed to consider all subjects relating to canals, to petition Congress to engage in the enterprise, and were authorized to adopt all measures deemed expedient for promoting the improvement. By an act of June 19, 1812, they were empowered to purchase the rights, interests and estate of the Western Inland Lock Navigation Company, and by a law passed April 15th, 1817, the Supreme Court was empowered to appoint a Commission to appraise its property. In pursuance of this authority, Richard Varick, Nathaniel W. Howell, William W. Woolsey, Obadiah German and Elisha Jenkins were named as such Commission. The amount paid was $152,718.52.

Several important alterations in the manner of managing the Canals of the State were introduced during the prevalence of the Second Constitution, chief among which were the institution of a Canal Board and a Board of Canal Appraisers. The Canal Commissioners and Commissioners of the Canal Fund were continued.

The method of managing the canals of the State has varied materially under the present Constitution.¹

The Commissioners of the Canal Fund remained the same, and the Board of Canal Appraisers continued as finally constituted under the Constitution of 1821.

By the amendments to the Constitution, adopted in 1882 (art. 7, § 3), it is provided that, certain conditions having been complied with, no tolls shall thereafter be imposed on persons or property transported on the canals. The Erie, Oswego, Champlain, Cayuga and Seneca or Black River canal are the only canals the Legislature is prohibited from selling. Funds derived from the sale of any canal are to be applied in payment of the canal debt.

The Legislature of 1875, upon the recommendation of Governor Tilden communicated in a special message, adopted a concurrent resolution March 25, providing for a commission to investigate the management of the canals, to be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Commission was constituted as follows: John Bigelow, of Orange; Daniel Magone, Jr., of St. Lawrence; Alexander E. Orr, of Kings; John D. Van Buren, Jr., of New York. The Commission was confirmed April 8, and submitted reports from time to time to the Governor. The same Legislature authorized the Governor, in his discretion (ch. 227), to appoint an Inspector of Public Works, with an annual salary of $5,000. The power has not been exercised.

THE CANAL FUND.

This Fund was created by an act passed April 15, 1817, and the Lieutenant-Governor, Comptroller, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Secretary of State and Treasurer, were intrusted with its management, as Commissioners of the Canal Fund. The Commissioners of the Canal Fund now consist of the Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer and Attorney-General.

CANAL BOARD.

The Canal Board was created by an act passed April 18, 1826, and consisted of the Canal Commissioners and Commissioners of the Canal Fund. The Canal Board was invested with the full care and responsibility of and for the canals, by an act passed in 1870 (ch. 55). The low toll system was then adopted with the concurrence of the Legislature, and continued to be the policy of the State until tolls were abolished by the constitutional amendment of 1882. The Board now consists of the Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, State Engineer and Surveyor, and Superintendent of Public Works, the latter taking the place of the Canal Commissioners in the Board.

CANAL COMMISSIONERS.

The first Canal Commissioners were appointed by an act passed April 17, 1816. Their duties were to construct canals from the Hudson river to lakes Erie and Champlain. Vacancies were to be filled in the same manner as Senators in Congress were appointed. Under the Second Constitution the number of Commissioners varied at different periods, until May 6, 1844, when an act was passed reducing their number to four, and making the office elective, the term being four years, except two of the first four chosen, who served two years. Salary, $1,500. The Constitution of 1846 provided for three Canal Commissioners to be elected for a term of three years, so classified that one was to be elected each year. The canals were divided into three divisions,—eastern, middle and western—each Commissioner having charge of one division. The annual salary of the Commissioners was fixed at $2,000, but was increased, in 1875, to $4,000.¹ Canal Commissioners were formerly vested with ample powers, and, for a time, the repairs were carried on under what was termed the Superintendent system. This was finally abandoned, and contracts were made by sections for keeping the canals in repair. A Canal Contracting Board, consisting of the Canal Commissioners and Auditor of the Canal Department, was organized in 1854, modified in 1857 and abolished in 1870. The Constitution of 1846 included the State Engineer and Surveyor, with the other State officers, as a member of the Canal Board. The Board appointed superintendents, patrolmen and collectors of tolls, and fixed their salaries. The Constitutional Convention of 1867 proposed an amendment providing for the appointment of a Superintendent of Public Works, but it was defeated with the Constitution. The same amendment was recommended by the Constitutional Commission in 1874, and adopted by the Legislature in 1875. The Legislature of 1870² provided for the surrender or cancellation of contracts. Eighteen contracts were thus abrogated during the year, and the Superintendent system restored upon such sections, leaving ten contracts still in force. The same act placed the Canals under the full care and responsibility of the Canal Board, except that it was prohibited from entering into new contracts for repairs. This continued to be the method for the conduct of the canals, until the inauguration of the new system directed by an amendment to the Constitution adopted in 1876.³

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

The Legislature of 1875 agreed to an amendment to the Constitution, as recommended by the Constitutional Commission, abolishing the office of Canal Commissioner and creating the office of Superintendent of Public Works. 24 Elected at general election 1875; appointed by Governor December 2, 1875, vice Stroud, deceased.

The amendment to the Constitution provides that a Superintendent of Public Works shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and hold his office until the end of the term of the Governor by whom he is nominated, and until his successor is appointed and qualified. He is charged with the execution of all laws relating to the repair and navigation of the canals, and also of those relating to the construction and improvement of the canals, except so far as the execution of the laws relating to such construction or improvement shall be confided to the State Engineer and Surveyor. He makes the rules and regulations for the navigation or use of the canals, subject to the control of the Legislature. The office of Canal Commissioner was abolished from and after the appointment and qualification of the Superintendent of Public Works, who was thereupon to perform all the duties of the Canal Commissioners and the Board of Canal Commissioners, until otherwise provided by the Legislature. The Superintendent may be removed from office by the Governor whenever, in his judgment, the public interest shall so require. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, fills vacancies; if a vacancy occurs when the Senate is not in session, the Governor may issue a commission which shall expire at the end of the next succeeding session of the Senate. The Superintendent¹ receives an annual salary of $6,000; is a member of the Canal Board, and appoints not more than three Assistant Superintendents, whose duties are prescribed by him, subject to modification by the Legislature. They each receive an annual salary of $3,000,¹ and hold office for three years, subject to suspension or removal by the Superintendent, who fills all vacancies. An act passed April 9, 1887 (ch. 123), provides for the appointment of a deputy. All other persons employed in the care and management of the canals, except those in the department of the State Engineer and Surveyor, are appointed by the Superintendent of Public Works, and subject to suspension or removal by him. He provides all necessary tools, materials and labor on the canals; subdivides them, and makes the rules for their navigation, protection and maintenance, and for the government of employees.² The seal of the office in use prior to 1883 is shown on Plate N, No. 2. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Superintendent of Public Works."

AUDITOR OF THE CANAL DEPARTMENT.

A Second Deputy Comptroller was directed to be appointed by an act passed March 11, 1833. He was authorized to perform any of the duties of Comptroller relative to the canals, except those devolving on that officer as Commissioner of the Canal Fund. This office was abolished May 13, 1840, and the Commissioners of the Canal Fund were directed to appoint a Chief Clerk, on whom should devolve the duties of the former officer, and who should likewise act as Clerk of the Canal Board. This office was abolished April 3, 1848, and the office of Auditor of the Canal Department was created by the same act. In this office were vested all the powers and duties of the Chief Clerk and of the Comptroller, except as a Commissioner of the Canal Fund. He was also Clerk of the Commissioners of the Canal Fund, and of the Canal Board, and was a member of the Contracting Board during its existence. He was also the chief financial officer of the canals, instructing, disbursing and collecting agents, issued warrants for payments out of the Canal Fund, and reported annually to the Commissioners of the Fund the receipts and payments on account of the canals and canal debt. He was designated a Commissioner of the New Capitol in 1875.² His term of office was three years, and he received his appointment from the Governor and Senate. Salary, $5,000. He was allowed a deputy.³ The seal of this office ordered by the act of April 3, 1848, is shown on Plate N, No. 1. The office was abolished by an act of the Legislature passed March 1, 1883. Its duties were, by the same act, devolved upon the Comptroller, in whose office there was established a Bureau of Canal Affairs, to which the archives of the former office were transferred.

CANAL APPRAISERS.

By an act passed February 9, 1821, the Legislature was authorized to appoint, by concurrent resolution, three Canal Appraisers for each the western and eastern sections of the Erie canal, and three for the Champlain canal. The journals of the Legislature do not show any appointments under this law. The act was superseded by one passed April 20, 1825, directing the Governor and Senate to appoint two freeholders, to act with any one of the Canal Commissioners as Appraisers. By an act passed May 10, 1836, three Appraisers were to be appointed by the Governor and Senate, for a term of two years, who were to receive a per diem allowance of $4 for the time employed, and five cents per mile as mileage. The Board remained as thus constituted until April 15, 1857, when an act was passed providing for their appointment by the Governor and Senate for a term of three years. Their duties were the appraisal of damage to individuals growing out of the construction of the canals. Salary, $2,000, increased to $5,000 in 1872, and $500 for traveling expenses, at three cents per mile. They were allowed necessary clerks. By an act passed April 7, 1883, the office was abolished and its records were directed to be transferred, on the 31st day of May following, to the Board of Claims, created by the same act.

STATE PRISONS.

The Legislature by a law passed March 26, 1796, provided for the erection of two State Prisons, one to be located in New York and the other in Albany. The act provided that the Governor and Council were to appoint a Board of Inspectors for each prison, to consist of not more than seven persons. Their duties were, to statedly visit the prisons; purchase clothing, bedding, raw material for manufacturing purposes, etc., and to keep an account of the expenses and earnings of each prisoner, giving him the surplus earnings when discharged. The law also directed the Governor and Council to appoint a Keeper, who was to be of some mechanical profession. The power of appointing this officer was transferred to the Board of Inspectors, by an act passed March 30, 1798.

Philip Schuyler, Abraham Ten Broeck, David Hale, Jeremiah Van Rensselaer and Tunis T. Van Veghten were named as Commissioners to build the Albany prison, but their powers were suspended February 3, 1797.

The Commissioners to build the New York prison were: John Watts, Matthew Clarkson, Isaac Stoutenbergh, Thomas Eddy and John Murray. The powers were transferred to Inspectors February 15, 1799. The New York prison was known as Newgate, and was opened for inmates November 25, 1797.

The Legislature, by a law passed April 12, 1815, authorized the building of a State prison at Auburn, and Elijah Miller, James Glover and John H. Beach were appointed Commissioners for that purpose. By an act passed April 2, 1819, the Governor and Council of Appointment were directed to appoint five Inspectors for the prison. The power of appointment was conferred on the Governor and Senate, April 19, 1823.

Newgate being found inadequate to accommodate the convicts in the eastern section of the State, it was determined to sell it, and build a new prison; and on the 7th of March, 1825, George Tibbits, Stephen Allen and Samuel M. Hopkins were named Commissioners for that purpose. The site was to be selected within the first or second senatorial districts. Sing Sing was chosen chiefly because of an extensive quarry of marble on the premises, which would afford employment to the convicts. Upon its completion three Inspectors were directed to be appointed by the Governor and Senate.

The prison in the town of Dannemora, Clinton county, was erected in consequence of the assertion by artisans that the pursuit of mechanical employments by convicts was prejudicial to their interests, which led to the passage of a law, May 1, 1844, directing the Governor and Senate to appoint an agent to build a prison in Clinton county, to be erected for the purpose of mining and working iron. Under this law, Ransom Cook, of Saratoga Springs, was appointed May 7, 1844. The Governor, Attorney-General, and Comptroller were directed to appoint three Inspectors on its completion, but the law was superseded by the provisions of the new Constitution.

INSPECTION OF PRISONS.

The Constitution of 1846 provided for the election of three Inspectors of State Prisons by the people, who held office for three years, and were so classified that one was elected annually. Vacancies were filled by the Governor until the next election. The Inspectors had the entire regulation and supervision of the prisons, and appointed the keepers, wardens, and other officers. It was their duty, jointly, to visit each prison at least four times each year, At the beginning of every quarter, a prison was assigned to each Inspector, over which he had the immediate charge for that period, and at which he was required to attend at least one week in each month. They reported annually to the Legislature. Salary, $1,000, until 1875,¹ when it was fixed at $2,000.

SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE PRISONS.

Three prisons are now in operation — Auburn, Clinton and Sing Sing. To the latter are sent the male convicts in the first and second judicial districts. The male prisoners in the third and fourth districts are sent to Clinton prison, and the remainder to Auburn. An act passed April 24, 1877, directed the removal of the female convicts then at Sing Sing prison, to penitentiaries to be designated by the Superintendent of Prisons, and the same law required that the courts of the State should after that date sentence convicts of the female sex to the various penitentiaries of the State.

by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, in pursuance of an amendment to the Constitution approved and ratified by the people at the general election held November 7, 1876. He holds his office for five years, unless sooner removed, which may be done by the Governor for cause at any time on giving the Superintendent a copy of the charges against him, and an opportunity to be heard in his defense. He has the superintendence, management and control of State prisons, and of the convicts therein, and the discipline, police, contracts and penal concerns thereof, subject to existing laws. He has all powers and performs the duties, not inconsistent with the Constitution, which were possessed by the Inspectors of State Prisons, and appoints the agents and wardens, physicians and chaplains of the prisons, makes rules and regulations for the government of prisons, and has general supervisory power over their affairs. Prior to the passage of chapter 21 of the Laws of 1884, the Superintendent was authorized to let the labor of convicts by contract, or to employ them in work by the State, either or both, in his discretion. The law referred to prohibited him or any other authority whatsoever, from renewing or extending any existing or pending contract, or from making any new contract for the employment of convicts in any of the prisons, penitentiaries or reformatories within the State. Excepting where there are unexpired contracts in force, prisoners are employed on what is known as the State account system, though with the approval of the Governor idle convicts may be employed on the piece price system of labor.

The Comptroller appoints the clerks of the prisons. All other officers, except those above-named, are appointed by the Agent and Warden of each prison. The salary of the Superintendent is $6,000 ; of the Agents and Wardens, $3,500. The seal of the office in use to January 1, 1883, is shown on Plate N, No. 3. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, " State of New York — Superintendent of State Prisons."

A State Agent, for Discharged Convicts, is appointed by the Superintendent of Prisons (Laws 1877, ch. 424), whose duty it is to visit the various penal institutions and reformatories at least once in each month, to confer with convicts whose term of imprisonment is soon to expire, for the purpose of inducing them to proceed immediately to suitable homes and places where employment will be secured to them, and to furnish them with transportation, food, clothing and any necessary tools and advice. He holds office during the pleasure of the Superintendent and receives an annual salary of $2,500.

PRISON LABOR COMMISSION.

Chapter 12 of the Laws of 1884, passed February 9, authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint within ten days after the passage of the act five citizens of the State who should constitute a board of Commissioners under the name of the "Prison Labor Commission." The term of office of the Commissioners was limited to March 1, 1884, and their compensation fixed at ten dollars per day each. The Commission was charged with the duty of examining into the practical operation of the contract system for the employment of convicts in the State prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories of the State and particularly as to the effect of such employment upon prison management and discipline, upon prisoners, and upon the community at large. For the purpose of making the required examination the Commissioners were authorized to enter any and all such institutions at will, and they were required to report their conclusions to the Legislature not later than March 1, 1884, with such recommendations as might by them be deemed proper, as to the best method of employing such convict labor; they were also required to prepare a bill to be submitted with their report. February 20, 1884, the Commissioners submitted a preliminary report to the Legislature in which they stated that the time allowed for the investigation was insufficient for the proper performance of the duties assigned to them and recommended that all renewals, extensions or making of new contracts should be suspended until the presentation of their full report. An act of the Legislature (chap. 21), passed March 3, 1884, prohibited the Superintendent of State Prisons, or any other authority whatsoever, from renewing or extending any existing or pending contract or from making any new contract for the employment of any convicts in any of the prisons, penitentiaries or reformatories within the State. Chapter 504 of the Laws of 1885, passed June 13, authorized the Governor to appoint a delegate to represent the State of New York in the International Prison Congress, to be held at Rome, Italy, during October, 1885. The Governor declined to designate a person to act as delegate under the provisions of the act referred to.

PRISON LABOR REFORM COMMISSION.

An act of the Legislature passed May 20, 1886 (chap. 432) required the Governor to appoint by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, three citizens of the State, commissioners, to be known and designated as the "Prison Labor Reform Commission," such Commissioners to hold office until June 1, 1887. The Commission was authorized and directed to investigate and report to the Legislature of 1887, by bill or otherwise, upon each of the following subjects, viz.: The various systems of employing convicts, and especially the reformatory feature, which involves the convict's best interests and the self sustaining principle of maintaining convicts without cost to the State. The introduction of a system of employing convicts in the prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories other than the contract system as it has heretofore obtained in the State, and upon what articles of manufacture prison labor can best be employed with a view of diminishing to the minimum the competition which now exists between prison labor and free labor. What experiments should be made in the employment of convicts upon any new industry, and in which of the prisons, penitentiaries or reformatories the same should be tested and under whose direction. Also the best method by which can be established a graded system in the commitment, custody and employment of all convicts in the State, with a view of classifying and separating the depraved and vicious from those possessing a type of character susceptible of higher moral improvement; and what abuses, if any, obtain in the management and discipline of the convicts in the several prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories of the State, and what new method, change, modification or improvement should be adopted in this behalf.

To carry out the purpose for which the commission was established the Commissioners were given full authority to enter any of the prisons, penitentiaries or reformatories of the State at all times, and they have power to examine witnesses, and send for and examine books and papers. And until the report of the Commissioners shall be made to the Legislature and until June 1, 1887, the act provided that the system of labor in the State prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories of the State shall be the public account system, excepting where there are existing contracts in force, and it further provided that the idle or unemployed convicts or inmates in such institutions may with the approval of the Governor be employed on what is known as the piece price system of labor. The compensation of the Commissioners was fixed by the act at $3,000 each, payable quarterly.

BANKING.

Bills of credit were issued by authority of the Colonial Legislature from time to time, and Loan Commissioners appointed for their supervision. Controversies occurred with the home government relative thereto. An act passed April 11, 1782, prohibited any other bank within the limits of the State than the Bank of North America, but subsequently State Banks were chartered by the Legislature from time to time. An act passed April 2, 1829, creating a Safety Fund, directed the appointment of three Bank Commissioners, whose duty it should be to visit the Banks of the State, examine their condition, and report annually to the Legislature the result of their investigations. The Governor and Senate were to appoint one of the Commissioners; the Banks located in the First, Second and Third Senate Districts, another; and those in the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth, the other. Term of office, two years; salary, $1,500, payable out of the Bank Fund. The Banks continued to make their reports to the Comptroller until 1851, when a law was passed (April 12) creating the office of Superintendent of the Banking Department, from the Comptroller's office. He is vested with the general supervision of the banks operated under State laws, they report to him quarterly, and when issuing circulating notes, deposit security for their redemption. The act of March 20, 1857, placed the Savings Banks of the State under his supervision. Trust, loan, mortgage, guaranty and indemnity companies or associations were required to report to him semi-annually by chapter 324 of the Laws of 1874. By an act passed June 21, 1875, corporations for the safe-keeping and guarantying personal property were also placed under his supervision. Excepting banks, the institutions over which he has supervisory powers are regularly examined. The Superintendent gives a bond of $50,000 for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office and is prohibited from being interested in any bank, banking association or as an individual banker. He makes digests of the reports of the various institutions, which are incorporated in his annual report to the Legislature. The expenses of the Department are paid by the institutions under its supervision. He receives his appointment from the Governor and Senate; holds office for three years; has an annual salary of $5,000, and is allowed a deputy and necessary clerks and examiners.

Upon organizing the Department a seal was prepared, which was approved by the Governor May 27, 1851. This seal, which is given on Plate N, No. 5, continued in use until 1883. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Superintendent of the Banking Department."

INSURANCE.

The Insurance Department was created by an act passed April 15, 1859, to take effect January 1, 1860. The powers and duties in relation to insurance companies, previously exercised by the Comptroller, together with the books, documents, securities and papers in his office and also those in the office of the Secretary of State were transferred and delivered to the Superintendent of the Insurance Department upon his appointment January 12, 1860.

The Superintendent under the provisions of the several general insurance acts known as the Marine Act, chapter 308, Laws of 1849; the Life and Casualty Act, chapter 463, Laws of 1853; the Fire and Inland Navigation Act, chapter 466, Laws of 1853; and the Co-operative Life Insurance Acts, chapter 256, Laws of 1881, and chapter 175, Laws of 1883, has entire control and supervision over such companies and associations. Life and casualty companies of the State and those of other countries, and fire and marine insurance companies of foreign governments are required to deposit securities with the Superintendent for the protection of policy-holders residing in the United States. The amount required to be deposited by life companies is $100,000, and by fire companies $200,000.

Insurance companies organized under the laws of other States or countries are required to obtain renewals of their authority from the Superintendent each year. He is authorized to refuse admission to any company, corporation or association applying for permission to transact insurance business in the State, whenever, upon examination, the capital stock of the same is found to be impaired and also whenever such refusal to admit shall best promote the interests of the people of the State. By an act passed May 23, 1884 (chap. 346), such companies are prohibited from transacting business in this State until they first, have in writing, appointed the Superintendent to be the attorney for the company in and for this State, upon whom process in any action or proceeding may be served.

The companies, corporations and associations under the supervision of the Superintendent are subject to visitation and examination by him or such persons as he may designate. Their condition and transactions are reported to him under oath at regular intervals, abstracts of which are made and transmitted to the Legislature in his annual report to that body. The Superintendent is required to give a bond of $25,000 for the faithful discharge of his official duties and is prohibited from being directly or indirectly interested in any insurance company. He is appointed by the Governor and Senate and holds office for three years, his salary is fixed at $7,000 per year by chapter 593, Laws of 1873. He is allowed a deputy and necessary clerks to discharge the duties of the office. The entire expenses of the Department are paid by the corporations under its supervision. The seal of the Department adopted February 6, 1860, and in use until January 1, 1883, is shown on Plate N, No. 4. The present Seal is the Arms of the State, as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Superintendent of the Insurance Department."

PUBLIC EDUCATION.

The importance of education was fully appreciated by the earliest inhabitants of the colony, but the embarrassments arising out of the attempt to maintain secular instruction under sectarian control were great. The Assembly, however, passed special acts favoring the establishment of schools. The organization of a State government at once removed the sectarian obstacle to common school instruction, and the policy of the State was soon settled. The system of management, however, has varied. The office of Superintendent of Common Schools was created June 19, 1812, and continued until April 3, 1821, when it was abolished by a clause in the appropriation bill, and its duties vested in the Secretary of State. In 1841, the appointment of Deputy Superintendent of Common Schools was authorized, and Mr. Randall, who had discharged the clerical duties of the department for some years under the Secretary of State, was intrusted with its supervision.

REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

The University of the State of New York was established by an act of the Legislature passed May 1, 1784. Its governing body was a Board of Regents, of whom twenty-four were citizen members named in the act and seven were members ex-officio. By a subsequent act passed in November of the same year, the number of citizen members was increased by thirty-three, making with the ex-officio members a Board of sixty-four. This Board was empowered to found colleges and academies in any part of the State, which in their collected and affiliated capacity were to constitute the University of the State. It proved, however, an unwieldy body, and by an act passed in 1787 it was re-organized upon the present system.

The Board as at present constituted consists of nineteen Regents, besides the ex-officio members. The Governor and Lieutenant-Governor have been ex-officio members from the organization of the Board. The Secretary of State was added by the Constitution of 1 Acted as Superintendent from the resignation of H. Van Dyck, until V. M. Rice was elected.

2 Re-elected April 3, 1877, and April 6, 1880.

3 Acting Superintendent until April 7, 1886 vice Ruggles, resigned.

4 Elected March 10, 1886, term of office to commence April 7 following, chapter 75, Laws of 1883.

1846, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction by the act creating that department. The Regents are chosen by the Legislature in the same manner as Senators in Congress, and hold their offices for life, unless vacated by resignation, removal from the State, neglect to attend at least one meeting of the Board in a year, or acceptance of some office inconsistent with its tenure. They receive no salaries. The officers of the Board consist of a Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, Secretary and Assistant Secretary. The Regents are authorized to incorporate colleges and academies, and have established uniform conditions on which such incorporation is granted. They inspect the academies of the State, prescribe rules for rendering their returns, apportion the moneys annually distributed among them, and report to the Legislature the statistical returns of Colleges and Academies, with such other information and recommendations as they may deem proper. By an act passed May 4, 1844, they were made Trustees, ex-officio, of the State Library, and an act passed May 10, 1845, made them Trustees, ex-officio, of the State Museum of Natural History. They appoint the Librarians and assistants of the State Library, and the staff of the Museum. They appoint the Executive Committee of the State Normal School at Albany, in concurrence with the Superintendent of Public Instruction who is chairman by virtue of his office. They are authorized to confer annually the degree of M. D. upon four persons nominated by each of the State Medical Societies, and may confer any degree above that of A. M., at their discretion. They are also authorized to appoint boards of medical examiners, and on their recommendation to confer the degree of M. D. Under the rules for admission to the bar they hold examinations and give certificates on subjects required, as preliminary to legal studies. By a law enacted in 1875, they were authorized to re-examine the boundaries of the State, and by a subsequent law passed in 1880, they were required to designate three members of their body as commissioners to act in connection with Commissioners of the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey in restoring and re-marking the partition lines between New York and those States respectively. An annual meeting of the Board is held the second Thursday of January, and adjourned meetings during the session of the Legislature. Special meetings may be called by the Chancellor. A semi-annual meeting is held on the first Tuesday of July, except when the 4th of July falls on that day, in which case it is held on the second Tuesday. The University Convocation assembles the same day. This is an annual gathering of the Regents and the officers of Colleges and Academies subject to their visitation, for the consideration of subjects relating to the educational interests of the State. The first Convocation was held August 4-5, 1863. The Seal of the Regents in use prior to 1883 is shown on Plate L, No. 3. The present Seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription "State of New York—The Regents of the University."

STATE LIBRARY.

The State Library was founded by an act of the Legislature passed April 21, 1818. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Chancellor and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court were constituted a Board of Trustees, and by the act, authorized to cause to be fitted up in the Capitol, some proper room for the purpose of keeping a public library for the use of the Government and people of the State. A law passed in 1824 added the Secretary of State, Attorney-General and Comptroller to the Board of Trustees. By a subsequent act passed May 4, 1844, the Regents of the University of the State of New York were constituted, ex officio, the Trustees of the Library. It is at the present time divided into two departments, viz. : the Law and the General Library, the former of which is probably the most complete of its kind in America, while the latter is particularly rich in American historical works. Besides the one hundred and thirty-one thousand volumes contained in the Library, there are deposited in it many historical relics of great value. It is open daily, and the public may read and consult the books, upon the premises, at pleasure. The expense of its maintenance is provided for by legislative appropriations.

STATE MUSEUM.

The State Museum grew out of the State Geological Survey, the collections of which were arranged and deposited in the old State Hall. By a law passed in 1845, these collections then known as the State Cabinet of Natural History were placed in charge of the Regents of the University, who were authorized to appoint a Curator. In 1870 by legislative enactment the name was changed to the New York State Museum of Natural History, and the Regents were designated its custodians. By an act passed in 1883, the State Hall at Albany is set apart for the use of the Museum, and the Regents as Trustees are authorized to cause the removal of the collection to that building, and to appoint a scientific staff, to consist of a Director and three assistants, a State Geologist, a State Entomologist and a Botanist, and it is further provided that all of the collections made by members of the staff, during their terms of service, shall belong to and form a part of the collections of the Museum. The expenses of the Museum are provided for by legislative appropriations. It is open to the public daily.

REVISION AND CODIFICATION OF THE LAWS.¹

An act of the Legislature, passed April 8, 1801, appointed James Kent and Jacob Radcliff to prepare for press and cause to be printed in as many volumes and under such heads or divisions as they might think proper, all of the acts and parts of acts of the Legislature of the State, then in force. In the preparation of the work they were required, as far as possible, to comprise in one volume all permanent acts of a public nature, affecting the community at large, and "if in their opinion it should be practicable and expedient, such acts of incorporation or of a local nature as were most useful to be known." The first volume was also to contain the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of New York. The compensation of the revisers was fixed at $850 each. The result of their labors was the Revised Laws of 1802, commonly known as Kent and Radcliff's Revision.

William P. Van Ness and John Woodworth were appointed by chapter 150 of the Laws of 1811, to collect and reduce into proper form, under certain titles of acts, all of the public acts of the Legislature then in force, reducing into one act all acts or parts of acts relating to the same subject or place, which in their judgment would be most useful and render such acts more plain and easy to be understood. The work when completed to be reported to the Legislature for re-enactment. Two years was allowed for the completion of the duties assigned to the revisers, whose compensation was fixed at $1,000 each. The result of their labors was the Revised Laws of 1813, the publication of which was directed by chapter 195 of the Laws of that year.

An act of the Legislature passed November 27, 1824, appointed James Kent, Erastus Root and Benjamin F. Butler with substantially the same powers as the revisers of 1811. Their labors were required to be completed within two years, the compensation of the revisers was fixed at $1,000 each. Annual reports of the condition of the work were to be made to the Legislature. The act further directed that the Secretary of State should cause the work to be copyrighted according to law, for the benefit of the people of the State. Chapter 324 of the Laws of 1825 repealed the act of 1824, and appointed John Duer, Benjamin F. Butler and Henry Wheaton as revisers, with the same powers, duties and compensation as their predecessors. The time for the completion of the work was limited to two years. In 1827, parts one and two of the Revised Statutes were submitted to and adopted by the Legislature, and the time for completing the work extended one year. In 1828, parts three and four were submitted to and adopted by the Legislature of that year. The labors of the revisers terminated with the enactment of the Revised Statutes.

Articles 1 and 6 of the Constitution of 1846 directed the appointment of two Commissioners for the revision and codification of the statutes, and required the Legislature to pass the necessary acts for the purpose. In conformity therewith, by chapter 59 of the Laws of 1847, Reuben H. Walworth,¹ Alvah Worden and John A. Collier,² were appointed Commissioners to reduce into a written and systematic code the whole body of the law of the State, or so much thereof as they might deem practicable and expedient, and to present the same to the Legislature for adoption. April 10, 1849, a new act³ was passed, appointing John C. Spencer, Alvah Worden and Seth C. Hawley, "Commissioners of the Code," to hold office for two years. The compensation allowed the Commissioners was $2,000 per annum each. The office was abolished by chapter 281, Laws of 1850.

The Commission required by article 6 of the Constitution was provided for by an act⁴ passed in 1847, appointing Arphaxed Loomis, Nicholas Hill, Jr.,⁵ and David Graham, "Commissioners on Practice and Pleadings," to revise, reform, simplify and abridge the rules, practice, pleadings, forms and proceedings of the courts of record of the State. The result of their labors to be reported to the Legislature. The term of office of the Commissioners was limited to February 1, 1849, and their compensation fixed at $2,000 per annum. The Commissioners submitted a draft of an act to the Legislature of 1848, which on April 12 of that year was enacted into law; a later act designated it the "Code of Procedure." The statute subsequently known by that name, however, is a substitute consisting of the Code of Procedure of 1848 with additions and amendments, prepared anew by the Commissioners on Practice and Pleadings and submitted to and enacted into law by the Legislature of 1849. An act⁶ of the same year extended the terms of office of the Commissioners until April 1, 1849. The same Commissioners were, by chapter 312 of the Laws of 1849, appointed to further revise, reform, simplify and abridge the rules and practice, pleadings, forms and proceedings of the courts of record, and report thereon to the next Legislature; at the session of 1850 the Commissioners reported the "Code of Civil Procedure," and the "Code of Criminal Procedure," neither of which were acted upon by the Legislature. David Dudley Field, William Curtiss Noyes⁷ and Alexander W. Bradford were appointed Commissioners to reduce into a systematic code the whole body of the law of the State, excepting those portions previously reported upon by the Commissioners of Practice and Pleadings; by an act of the Legislature passed April 6, 1857. The term of office of the Commissioners was fixed at five years, but was extended to April 1, 1865, by an act⁸ passed April 23, 1862. No compensation was allowed to the Commissioners for their services. In 1860, the Political Code was submitted to the Legislature, and in 1865 the Civil Code and the Penal Code, neither of which were adopted.

By chapter 33 of the Laws of 1870, the Governor was authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, three persons learned in the law to act as Commissioners to revise, simplify, arrange and consolidate all statutes of the State, general and permanent in their nature (omitting redundant and obsolete enactments), and make the necessary alterations, to reconcile contradictions, supply omissions and amend imperfections in the original text. The statutes as revised and consolidated to be submitted to the Legislature for its action. The time for the completion of the work was limited to three years. The salary of the Commissioners was fixed at $5,000 per annum each. Vacancies in the Commission were to be filled by the Governor and Senate. Chapter 541 of the Laws of 1872 extended the time for the completion of the work two years. By an act passed May 9, 1873, the Commissioners were authorized to incorporate into and make part of the revision the Political Code, the Penal Code, Code of Civil Procedure and Code of Criminal Procedure reported to the Legislature pursuant to chapter 266 of the Laws of 1857. In 1874 (ch. 213) the term of office of the Commissioners was again extended two years. An act passed June 7, 1875, authorized the Commissioners to include the Civil Code in the revision.

The terms of office of the Commissioners expired by limitation September 30, 1877. The result of their labors was the enactment into law of the "Code of Civil Procedure." In 1881 the Legislature adopted (ch. 442) the Code of Criminal Procedure, and (ch. 676) the Penal Code.

COMMISSIONERS TO REVISE BANKING LAWS.

Chapter 170 of the Laws of 1880, passed May 5, authorized the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint three persons as commissioners to compile and revise all statutes of the State of New York then in force affecting banks, banking and trust companies. The Commissioners received no compensation for their services. The result of their labors was reported to the Legislature of 1882, and on July 1 of that year was enacted into statutory law as chapter 409 of Laws of 1882, a repealing act accompanying such report was also adopted, which repealed all prior laws relating to banks, banking and trust companies.

QUARANTINE.

As early as 1647 the Council, by public acts, adopted measures to prevent the introduction of epidemic diseases in New York. An order of His Majesty's Council was issued in the year 1714 directing that vessels from Jamaica should be quarantined at Staten Island, and in 1716, this order was extended to all vessels from the West Indies. The Colonial Legislature of the State enacted the first quarantine law for the harbor of New York in 1758. It was entitled "An act to prevent the bringing in and spreading of infectious distempers in the Colony," and stipulated that vessels having small-pox, yellow fever, or other contagious diseases aboard, should stop on their way to the city at Bedloe's Island, and there be quarantined, under heavy penalties for disobedience. In 1784, the State Legislature re-enacted this law, substantially. In 1794, it authorized the Governor of the State to appropriate Governor's Island for quarantine purposes, erecting hospitals, reception buildings, etc. Five years later Staten Island, six miles down the bay, was designated by the Legislature, instead of Governor's island, as the place for quarantine, and full authority was given for securing anchorage grounds and erecting a hospital upon the shore, to be known as the Marine hospital.

In the year 1801, the quarantine establishment, such as it was, was fully located at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, where it remained for more than sixty years, subject, during the latter part of that period, to the control of the Board of Health Commissioners. With the increase of population in the vicinity, a bitter hostility developed toward the quarantine institution; which became so intense upon Staten Island, that the Legislature, in 1857, authorized the appointment of three Commissioners to select a site elsewhere, and erect the necessary docks, buildings, etc. The Governor appointed George Hall, Egbert Benson and Obadiah Bowne, who were the first Quarantine Commissioners, they selected Sandy Hook, as the point for the new boarding station, but were unable to effect a purchase from New Jersey. They then selected Seguin's Point, on the south shore of Staten Island, and proceeded to erect a pier, buildings, etc. The people in the vicinity, however, turned out in a body on the night of May 6, 1857, and burned everything connected with the new station. Another application to obtain Sandy Hook also failed, and the old station at Tompkinsville was continued in use. Incensed at their failure to procure a removal, the surrounding population invaded the quarantine inclosure on the night of September first and second and destroyed all the buildings and other property, for which the county subsequently paid the State, in accordance with the law making any county, within which property is destroyed by a mob, liable for the loss. Following this destruction of property, the commissioners decided to construct a floating hospital. They, however, subsequently reconsidered such determination, and December 21, 1858, recommended the construction of five acres of land on "Old Orchard Shoals, in Raritan bay, to form a site on which to erect the buildings necessary for a new quarantine station for the port of New York, and to which, when constructed, an entire removal of the quarantine establishment should be made." This plan, however, was not carried out, and in 1859 another Commission was appointed, consisting of Horatio Seymour, John C. Green and ex-Governor Patterson, who adopted the plan for a floating hospital, and purchased the steamship Falcon for that purpose. The steamers Illinois and Empire City were afterward loaned to the Commissioners by the general government. Ship-fever patients were sent to Ward's Island, small-pox patients to Blackwell's Island, and yellow fever was treated on the floating hospital.

April 23, 1863, what is now known as the general quarantine act was passed, defining the quarantine establishment, authorizing its construction, creating the permanent office of Quarantine Commissioners, defining the duties and powers of the commissioners and Health Officer, and establishing a general system of quarantine for the port. Additional powers were conferred by amendments made to this general act in each of the four following years, under which two small steamers were purchased, the property at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, known as the Marine hospital grounds, was sold, and the construction of artificial islands in the lower bay was undertaken and afterward completed—Swinburne's island in 1870, and Hoffman's island in 1873. The mayors of New York and Brooklyn, by the law of 1866, were associated with the Commissioners of Quarantine in the construction of these islands. In 1873, by a clause in the supply bill, their powers were transferred to the Health Officer.

The residences of the Health Officer and his two deputies are located at Clifton, on the south shore of Staten Island, above and near the Narrows and Fort Richmond; a short distance below the Narrows is Hoffman island, with its extensive brick buildings. Three-fourths of a mile further down the bay is Swinburne island, which encounters "the steady roll of the Atlantic" and the full force of the winds and storms. The row of long, white hospital wards unmistakably indicate its character. Far away to the right, eight miles distant, at Seguin's Point, on Staten Island shore, is the quarantine burying ground. Three miles and a half from Swinburne island, in a nearly direct course toward Sandy Hook, is anchored, during the quarantine season, the hospital or boarding ship Illinois; her huge, dismantled hulk can be seen for a great distance. The boarding officer for the lower bay resides upon this ship. All vessels arriving from the West Indies, South American ports, and from the west coast of Africa, are required to come to anchor here while the boarding officer inspects them. All other vessels proceed up through the Narrows and are boarded in the upper bay, opposite the Health Officer's residence, by the deputies who are provided with a steamer for the purpose.

The object in boarding from both the upper and lower bay, is to keep vessels coming from infected ports, or likely to be infected with cholera or yellow fever, as far away from the city as possible. As vessels come to anchor near the Illinois, the boarding officer leaves the latter in a small boat and visits them. If there has been cholera or yellow fever aboard, the vessel is fumigated; and after being detained twenty-four hours or more, as may be required, she is permitted to proceed through the Narrows to the upper bay, anchoring not far from New York, between Robbin's Reef light-house and Bedloe's island; her cargo is here discharged into lighters, then the vessel is cleansed, her hold washed out, pratique granted, and she is permitted to proceed on up to her wharf.

When the boarding officer from the Illinois discovers yellow fever or cholera patients on the incoming vessels, a signal is set and one of the steamers belonging to the quarantine service bears away the sufferers to Swinburne island; immediately upon reaching there they are stripped of their clothing, which is at once burned in a furnace constructed for that purpose, and the patients are placed in the sick wards. If recovering they are removed to the convalescent wards, where they are permitted to take daily exercise on the walks surrounding the wards, or to recline upon the grass plats in front of the Superintendent's residence, where they are protected from the sun's rays by a heavy canvas. This change to out-door life rapidly hastens recovery. In fact, the whole surroundings of the hospital are so conducive to health that nearly all of the patients taken there are in time restored to health; yellow fever has no terrors for the persons and employees on the island, but one of whom has ever contracted the disease. When sufficiently recovered, the convalescents are taken to Brooklyn or Staten island to proceed to New York and rejoin their vessel. In case of death, the bodies are placed in plain coffins and carried in small boats across the bay to the burying ground at Seguin's point. A complete record is kept of each patient and of all facts that can be gleaned from them upon reaching the hospital. When buried, a board slab is placed at the head of the grave, containing a number which corresponds with the hospital record. The Commissioners are frequently called upon by friends or relatives for bodies, five, ten and even twenty years after their burial.

Residing upon the Illinois with the boarding officer, from April 1 to November 1, are a ship-keeper, cook and servants. Every appliance is kept aboard for removing patients, including chairs in which they are strapped during heavy weather and lowered down from vessels into the quarantine boats, which convey them to Swinburne island hospital; transfer clothing is also provided on the Illinois for yellow fever patients to take with them to the hospital. There are very commodious apartments on the Illinois, including a cabinet, reception, sitting and dining-rooms, kitchen, dormitories, etc., therefore, the old hospital hulk is by no means as dismal and gloomy as those infer who see her from the decks of passing ships.

As previously stated, all vessels not boarded from the Illinois are boarded by the Health Officer's deputy above the narrows, the deputy usually goes aboard of the larger steamers. In the case of smaller vessels, however, particularly those coming from points north of Cape Henry, the boarding consists merely in the deputy running alongside inquiring if all are well, giving pratique and receiving the boarding fee; vessels boarded in upper quarantine, having no sickness on board, are permitted to proceed directly to the city; if small-pox prevails, all the well passengers are vaccinated, and the patients are conveyed by one of the quarantine steamers to the small-pox ward on Blackwell's island; if ship-fever prevails, the sufferers are transported to Ward's island. Any person dissatisfied with the detention of his vessel or with any other act of the Health Officer, deputy, superintendent, or other of the employees, may apply to the Commissioners, and their decision, which is required to be given at once, is final in the matter.

The boarding fees accruing to the Health Officer are the same now, as when they were fixed by the Legislature more than half a century ago. Foreign vessels, all of which are boarded, pay a fee of $6.50, each time they come into port, which at the present time is paid into the Custom House, to be paid over to the Health Officer once a month. Coast-wise vessels of over 160 tons pay $3, between 100 and 160 tons $2, and those of less than 100 tons $1. The coasting fees are collected by the deputies from the vessels when they board them at the narrows, to grant a permit to proceed to the city. Boarding ceases, by law at sunset, though vessels arriving after can be boarded upon the payment of an extra fee to the Health Officer. Ship owners and agents are charged $1 per day for care and treatment of their sick at Swinburne island; formerly the charge was $2. This money does not accrue to the Health Officer, but is collected by the Quarantine Superintendent and is paid into the hospital subsistence fund.

So far as preventing the introduction of disease from abroad is concerned, our quarantine establishment may be regarded as nearly perfect, and it only needs the enlightened and vigilant application of sanitary measures to our cities and large towns to insure them comparative immunity from yellow fever, cholera and other epidemic or infectious diseases. The increased feeling of security noticeable, year after year, among the large population centered around New York harbor since the completion of the present quarantine establishment, is one of the best testimonials to its efficiency. Formerly it was deemed imprudent, if not dangerous, to permit the facts regarding quarantine to be made known, lest a panic might ensue. All arrivals of infected vessels and deaths at the quarantine hospital were carefully concealed from the public. This policy has been gradually changed until now no concealment whatever is attempted.

COMMISSIONERS OF QUARANTINE.

Previous to the year 1857, the Commissioners of Emigration were custodians of State property used for quarantine purposes. In that year they were succeeded by three Commissioners of Quarantine, appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Such Commissioners were each required to give bonds in the sum of $30,000, for the faithful discharge of their duties, and were allowed $5 for each day's actual service, and their necessary official expenses; they were authorized to procure by purchase or otherwise a suitable site for a new quarantine station, and provide for the erection of necessary wharves and buildings. The Commissioners selected the present location at Seguin's point, at the south end of Staten island, for the purpose.

April 29, 1863, an act was passed (chapter 358) defining the qualifications, duties and powers of the Commissioners of Quarantine; by that act they were constituted the custodians of the quarantine establishment of the harbor and port of New York, to be by them held in trust for the people of the State, for the purposes and subject to the provisions specified in the act. The fee for disinfecting vessels is the only one which has been fixed by the Commissioners; with the exception of "boarding fees," fixed by statute in 1860, those now collected are such as have been mutually agreed upon between shipping merchants and the Health Officer. The Commissioners make the rules and regulations for the government of quarantine, and they and the Health Officer constitute a Board for granting licenses to lightermen and stevedores working on quarantine ground; the Commissioners act as a board of appeal for the adjustment of all disputes or disagreements arising between merchants or ship owners and the Health Officer, and their decision is final.

The act of 1863 fixed the term of office of the Commissioners at three years, and required that vacancies should be filled by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The same act fixed their compensation at $2,500 each, per annum. Residents of the metropolitan police district alone, are eligible for appointment. The Health Officer makes annual reports to the Commissioners, on or before the first day of February, of the general condition of the quarantine establishment, with the statistics of the institution in detail, and such other information and suggestions in regard to the same as he may deem advisable. The Commissioners are required to hold daily meetings, Sundays and holidays excepted, from the first day of May until the first day of November, in each year, and as often in the other months as in their judgment may be necessary. They annually present a report of their proceedings, and the condition of the quarantine establishment to the Legislature at the opening of the session thereof.

HEALTH OFFICER OF THE PORT OF NEW YORK.

An act of the Legislature, passed in 1784, authorized the Governor to appoint a physician with prescribed powers, having for their purpose the enforcement of certain quarantine regulations specified in the act. Such officer has come to be known as "Health Officer of the Port of New York." The original statute authorizing the appointment has in effect continued in force to the present time. In the year 1801 an act was passed constituting the Health Officer the physician of the Marine Hospital, and the Health Commissioners a Board of Health for the city of New York. The Health Officer of the port continues to be, ex officio, a member of that board. In other respects the composition of the board is entirely changed. April 29, 1863, an act was passed by the Legislature defining the qualifications, duties and powers of the Health Officer for the harbor and port of New York, which provided that such officer shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him with the consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of two years and until his successor shall have qualified. No person is eligible for appointment except a doctor of medicine, of good standing, and of at least ten years' experience in the practice of his profession, who is required to be practically familiar with the diseases subject by the act, to quarantine. The only diseases against which quarantine shall apply are defined as yellow fever, cholera, typhus or ship-fever and small-pox, and any new disease not then known, being of a contagious, infectious, or pestilential nature. The Governor has no power to appoint a Health Officer during the recess of the Senate, except in case of a vacancy by death or resignation.

The Health Officer is required to reside at such convenient place for the boarding of vessels as the Commissioners of Quarantine may determine, and has the general superintendence and control of the quarantine establishment, and the care and treatment of the sick. He is authorized to select, appoint and dismiss at pleasure, two assistant or deputy Health Officers, for whose conduct he is responsible; such deputies may perform, subject to his direction, all of the duties required of the Health Officer. He also appoints and dismisses at pleasure, nurses, boatmen and other employees, and in conjunction with the Quarantine Commissioners, licenses lightermen, stevedores, laborers and other employees.

The Health Officer or his deputies board and examine all vessels subject to quarantine as soon after arrival as practicable, between the hours of sunrise and sunset. The powers conferred upon the Health Officer are of an autocratic character, though persons aggrieved by any decision or direction of his may appeal therefrom to the Commissioners of Quarantine, who constitute a board of appeal; the said board has power to affirm, reverse or modify the decision, order or direction appealed from, and the decision of the board thereon is final. He is required to present to the Commissioners of Quarantine, annually, on or before the first day of February, a report of the general condition of the quarantine establishment, with the statistics of the institution in detail, and such other information and suggestions in regard to the same as he may deem advisable; he is also directed to furnish to the Board of Health of the cities of New York and Brooklyn, and to the Commissioners of Quarantine, whenever required by them to do so, an official return of the numbers and diseases of the patients in the floating hospital. He receives fees fixed by law for his services, out of which he is required to pay all the salaries and wages of the deputy Health Officers, and such bargemen, nurses and stewards and other employees as may be necessary for the performance of the duties imposed upon him, and for the carrying on of the quarantine establishment, except the salaries of the Commissioners of Quarantine. He is further required to pay the current expenses of running a steamboat for the transportation of persons to and from the establishment, and for visitations and for burying the dead.

Any person who shall obstruct the Health Officer or his deputies in performing the duties required of them by law, or shall go on board of, or have any communication, intercourse or dealing with, any vessel under quarantine, or with any of her crew or passengers, without his permission; or who shall, without such permission, invade any portion of the quarantine establishment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine or imprisonment, or both. Exclusive jurisdiction of offenses against quarantine regulations is given to the Courts of General and Special Sessions of the peace of the city of New York, and General Sessions of the county of Kings; and it is made the duty of the District Attorneys of the city and county of New York and county of Kings, respectively, to prosecute all persons guilty of such offenses, in preference to any indictment then in their offices, and either of said courts are required to hear and try the offenses against the quarantine act, in preference to all other cases pending before them; and whenever any person shall be convicted on trial for such offense, the court is required to forthwith proceed to pronounce judgment upon him according to the terms prescribed in the quarantine act.

PORT WARDENS.

An act of the Legislature (chapter 31) passed April 14, 1784, authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Council of Appointment, to appoint as often, and from time to time, as to such Council should seem necessary, one fit and proper person to be Master, and three or more fit and proper persons to be Wardens of the port of New York, to be known as the "Master and Wardens of the Port of New York." The same act provided for the appointment of branch pilots for that port, who were subject to examination by the Master and Wardens, and received their certificate of qualifications from them. The Master and Wardens were authorized, by and with the consent and approbation of the Governor, to make and establish such prudential regulations and orders for the government of pilots as they might judge to be useful and necessary, and they were prohibited from being directly or indirectly concerned in any pilot boat.

The Master and Wardens were by the same act appointed surveyors for the surveying of damaged goods brought into the port of New York in ships or vessels, and with the assistance of one or more skillful carpenters they were authorized to act as surveyors of any vessel deemed or thought unfit to proceed to sea. They were required to give certificates under their hands and seals, as to how the goods or vessels surveyed appeared to them, and a record thereof was to be kept in their office in the city of New York. The same act exempted them from jury duty and allowed them compensation at the rate of twenty shillings per day. An act passed April 9, 1811 (chapter 198) required pilots to report to the Master and Wardens within twenty-four hours, the arrival of vessels piloted by them, and the same act directed that damaged goods arriving by vessel, when necessary to be sold, should be so sold under the inspection of the Master and Wardens; the fees which they should receive for services rendered, which were fixed by the act, were required to be divided equally among the Master and Wardens, except that the Master was entitled to receive $250, annually, more than the Wardens. Chapter 18 of the Laws of 1819 passed February 19, increased the number of the Board to one Master and five Wardens, and provided that all fees received should be equally divided between the Master, Wardens and clerk. An act passed March 30, 1831 (chapter 93), increased the number of Wardens to six, and provided for the appointment of two special Wardens, who were required to reside at the quarantine grounds, in the county of Richmond, and were charged with the duty of acting as Wardens only in regard to vessels and goods subject to quarantine at that place. They were authorized to receive the same fees as allowed to wardens of the port for similar services. The duties previously devolved upon the Master and Wardens in reference to pilots and pilotage at the port of New York, by an act of the Legislature, passed June 28, 1853 (chapter 467), were conferred upon "The Board of Commissioners of Pilots" in the city of New York, established by the act.

Chapter 405 of the Laws of 1857, passed April 14, entitled "An act to reorganize the Warden's office of the port of New York," authorized the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint nine persons who should constitute "The Port Wardens of the Port of New York." One of the persons appointed was to be a resident of the city of Brooklyn, and three were required to be nautical men. Of those first appointed, the term of office of three was to expire in three years, three in two years, and the remaining three in one year; thereafter appointments were to be made for the term of three years. Members of the board are subject to removal by the Governor for misconduct or neglect of duty. The board was authorized to appoint a Secretary, whose compensation is paid out of the receipts of the office. A majority of the Wardens are required to give attendance at their office in the city of New York daily.

Port Wardens are charged with the duty of boarding vessels for the purpose of examining the condition and stowage of cargo, and in case there be goods damaged on board, they examine to ascertain the cause of the damage. The board are constituted exclusive surveyors of vessels which may have suffered wreck or damage, or which shall be deemed unfit to proceed to sea. The Wardens specify the amount of damage which has occurred, and they are the judges of the repairs necessary to render such vessels again seaworthy, or of the safety of the vessel and cargo on the intended voyage; they also have exclusive cognizance of all matters relating to the surveys of vessels and their cargoes arriving at the port of New York in distress, or damaged in that port, and are the judges of the fitness of the cargo to be reshipped to its port of destination, or whether it shall be sold for the benefit of whom it may concern. If called upon so to do, the Wardens are required to estimate the value or measurement of vessels when the same is in dispute or libeled; when requested to, it is their duty to examine merchandise, vessels' materials or other property said to have been damaged on board of any vessel, and ascertain the cause of damage, the examination to be made at the place where the same may be located; in warehouses, stores, or dwellings or in the public streets.

The act of 1857 fixed the fees Wardens were authorized to receive for services rendered by them, which when collected were directed to be divided equally among the nine Wardens comprising the board. The same act authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint two special Wardens to act only in regard to vessels and goods that are actually under and subject to quarantine detention, the term of office of the special Wardens was fixed at three years, and they were required to make returns in detail to the Warden's office in the city of New York, within forty-eight hours, of all surveys made by them and of all other duties by them performed. The fees received were directed to be divided equally between the two special Wardens. A subsequent act, chapter 543 of the Laws of 1867, authorized the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint but one special Port Warden, and limited the term of office to two years, and further required that he should report his proceedings within twenty-four hours, to the office of Wardens.

The Board of Port Wardens are required to keep a full and accurate account of all their receipts and expenditures, and transmit a verified copy of the same to the Comptroller on the first Monday of January in each year, and each Warden is required to append to such account an affidavit, that he has not taken or received any money or goods as presents, either directly or indirectly, for services as Warden, except the legal fees to which he is entitled. The Board have a common seal, and they are each authorized to administer oaths. The office of the board is one of record and copies of papers and records therein, authenticated by seal are required to be received in evidence by the courts of the State.

HARBOR MASTERS.

By an act of the Legislature, passed April 1, 1796 (chap. 41), the Governor was required and directed by and with the advice and consent of the Council of Appointment, to appoint four proper persons to be Harbor Masters of the Port of New York, who should have authority to regulate and station all ships and vessels in the stream of the East and North rivers within the limits of the city of New York, and at the wharves thereof, and to remove from time to time, ships or vessels not employed in receiving or discharging their cargoes, to make room for such others as might require to be more immediately accommodated for the purpose of receiving or discharging theirs, of which the Harbor Masters were constituted sole judges. Persons having charge of vessels were subjected to heavy fines for refusal or neglect to obey their directions; the fines when collected were paid to the treasurer of the society of the hospital in the city of New York, for the use of that corporation. The Harbor Masters were further required to superintend and enforce the execution of all laws of the State, and all by-laws and rules and regulations of the city of New York, for cleansing the docks and wharves, and for preventing and removing nuisances in or upon them.

Pilots of the Port of New York were required to register in the office of the Harbor Masters the name, size and dimensions of each and every pilot boat used by them; they were also required to report the time of going out and returning into the harbor with their boats, and also to report all ships and vessels inward and outward bound seen by them at sea, or at anchor within or without Sandy Hook. Harbor Masters were authorized to order pilots to go out upon duty when in their judgment the safety of navigation of the port should render the going out of such pilot boats necessary. The same act gave them power to appoint and remove a deputy or deputies at will. Their compensation was provided for by fees collected from ships and vessels entering the Port of New York. An act passed, February 19, 1819, provided for the appointment of but two Harbor Masters; and the fees collected were required to be divided equally between them, and the right to appoint a deputy or deputies was restricted to the event of sickness or death of one of the Harbor Masters. In 1827 (chap. 133), the number of Harbor Masters was fixed at three and increased to four by an act passed, May 14, 1840 (chap. 313). In the same year Harbor Masters of the Port of New York were prohibited from performing the duties of their office on the shore of the city of Brooklyn or village of Williamsburgh. An act passed, January 15, 1848 (chap. 2), increased the number of Harbor Masters to seven, one of whom was required to reside in the city of Brooklyn, and discharge his duties at the wharves, piers and slips adjacent or belonging thereto. In 1850 (chap. 72), the number was increased to eleven; two of whom were required to reside in Brooklyn. Of those appointed, at least five were required to have been Masters of vessels sailing from the Port of New York, or pilots who had been engaged in piloting vessels in and from said port, or seamen that had been engaged in navigating the waters of the Harbor of New York. Their term of office was fixed by the act, at two years, or until others were appointed in their places.

They have no jurisdiction over vessels lying at or within any of the wharves, docks or slips belonging to the city of New York. An act passed, June 28, 1853 (chap. 467), devolved all duties connected with pilots and pilotage upon "The Board of Commissioners of Pilots," created by the act, who were also charged with the duty of requiring owners or lessees of piers and bulk-heads of New York city and Brooklyn, to keep the same clean and in good repair.

Chapter 436 of the Laws of 1860, passed April 16, continued the number of Harbor Masters at eleven, and provided for the appointment by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, of an officer to be called "Captain of the Port of New York," and the Harbor Masters were required to assist him in the performance of his duties, which were practically the same as were previously exercised by them. The act required that the fees received should be divided between the Captain of the Port and the Harbor Masters. An act passed May 22, 1862, prohibited either the Captain of the Port or the Harbor Masters, from being interested as owners or agents in any steam tow-boat, ship, vessel, canal-boat, barge, or lighter, navigating the Port of New York.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 4, 1883 (chap. 357), authorized the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint one Captain of the Port and eleven Harbor Masters, the former to hold office for three years, the latter for two years or until others are appointed. The same act provided that all fines and penalties collected shall be applied to the use of the New York Hospital, and abolished fees, tonnage duties and taxes. In lieu of fees, the compensation of the Captain of the Port was fixed at $3,500 per annum, and that of Harbor Masters at $2,500, with an allowance not to exceed $200 per month, for office expenses. The repeal of chapter 487 of the Laws of 1862, abolished the offices of Captain of the Port and Harbor Masters acting at the date of the passage of the act of 1883, and the respective offices have been vacant since May 4 of that year.

CAPTAIN OF THE PORT OF NEW YORK.

An act of the Legislature, passed April 16, 1860 (chap. 436), directed the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint an officer to be called "Captain of the Port of New York," to hold office for three years, unless sooner removed for malfeasance or inability to discharge his duties. The act further provided that the eleven Harbor Masters then in office should in all respects be subject to such rules and regulations as may, from time to time, be prescribed by him. Chapter 487, of the Laws of 1862, required him to divide the port of New York into eleven districts, and assign Harbor Masters thereto, to perform the duties thereof; each Harbor Master being authorized, within the district assigned to him, to provide and assign suitable accommodations for all ships and vessels, and regulate them in the stations they are to occupy at the wharves and in the stream, and to remove, from time to time, such vessels as are not employed in receiving or discharging their cargoes; they were also given power to determine as to the fact of vessels being fairly and in good faith employed in receiving or discharging the same, and were authorized to determine how far and in what instances it is the duty of persons having charge of ships and vessels to accommodate each other in their respective situations.

It is made the duty of the Captain of the Port to hear complaints against any Harbor Master for improperly discharging the duties of his office, and his defense thereto. Pending decision in the matter by the Governor, to whom the testimony is required to be submitted within ten days, the Captain of the port is authorized to suspend such Harbor Master from the exercise of the duties of his office. Prior to 1883, the compensation of the Captain of the port and the Harbor Masters was provided for by fees collected from ships and vessels entering the port of New York, which were required to be divided between them, share and share alike. Chapter 357 of the Laws of 1883, passed May 4, abolished the fee system and fixed the compensation of the Captain of the Port at $3,500 per annum, and that of Harbor Masters at $2,500, with an allowance of not to exceed $200 per month for office expenses. The same act provided for the appointment by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, of a Captain of the Port and eleven Harbor Masters, and re-enacted the various provisions governing the respective offices, and also repealed chapter 487 of the Laws of 1862, thereby discontinuing the offices created thereunder. There having been no appointments made under the provisions of the Law of 1883, the offices have been vacant since May 4 of that year.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ONONDAGA SALT SPRINGS.

During the reign of Charles V, some Spaniards went from Florida to the vicinity of Onondaga in search of silver, owing to marvellous descriptions given by the aboriginal inhabitants, of a white substance which covered the earth in that locality. The salt springs were well known to the Jesuit missionaries; they were visited by Father Le-Moyne, among others, and he reported their existence to the Dutch at New Amsterdam, but his statements were discredited. In 1776, Samuel Kirkland, a missionary of the Scotch Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Heathen, directed the attention of General Philip Schuyler to the springs, from which the Indians were then making salt. In 1777, General Schuyler, in addressing Congress on the subject, said that, in his opinion, the springs might be "improved to advantage" if some one familiar with the process of salt boiling could be sent there.

James Duane and Robert Yates were appointed to attempt the manufacture of salt, which was commenced in May, 1788, by Col. Comfort Tyler; he and Asa Danforth constructing the first salt works. In September of that year, the chiefs of the Onondaga tribe of Indians conveyed the salt lands to the State of New York by treaty, at Fort Schuyler. The Indians, a few years prior to the Revolutionary War, had deeded the salt lands in the vicinity of Onondaga to Sir William Johnson, but the conveyance was subsequently declared invalid. With the exception of the Oneidas; the Iroquois having taken up arms against the Congress, the salt lands became forfeited; but neither the State nor the General Government availed themselves of the rights acquired under such forfeiture.

In 1793, Moses DeWitt and William VanVleet formed the first copartnership for the manufacture of salt. During the same year James Geddes erected a salt manufactory at Liverpool; the business developed rapidly thereafter, the lands being taken possession of under the principles of squatter sovereignty. Difficulties having arisen with regard to the priority of rights, the Legislature passed an act April 1, 1797 (chap. 90), requiring the Surveyor-General to survey the salt lands in person and lay the same out in lots of not more than ten acres. Each lessee being required to manufacture at least ten bushels of salt per year, and was prohibited from charging more than sixty cents per bushel therefor, and was further required to pay four cents per bushel in lieu of rent. In the original leases, the Legislature reserved the right, upon their expiration of renewing them, for the term of seven years or of purchasing any or all of the salt works at their true value. The same act authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Council of Appointment, to appoint a Superintendent of the salt works at an annual salary of $800, he to hold office during the pleasure of the Council. He was prohibited from having any interest in the salt springs and was charged with the duty of receiving and storing the salt manufactured at the salt works, the same to be by him delivered to its owners as they might find purchasers, upon payment of one cent per bushel for storage, and four cents per bushel for tax.

The Superintendent, by the act of 1797, was directed to keep a large quantity of salt on hand for the people of the State, but this requirement was repealed in 1801. The act of 1797 required him to make annual reports to the Legislature. April 15, 1817, he was directed to make quarterly reports to the Commissioners of the Canal Fund in lieu of the annual reports originally provided for, which he continued to do until 1825. Since the latter date he has reported to the Legislature. The salt duty was fixed at three cents in 1805. In 1812, it was advanced to twelve and one-half cents, and thereafter the sum of $2,055,458.06 was contributed toward the construction of the canals from this tax.

In 1822, the Legislature offered a bounty of three cents on each bushel of coarse salt delivered at any point on the Hudson river or Lakes Erie and Ontario, and exempted laborers in coarse salt works from jury and military duty; and no well was allowed to be dug without the consent of the Superintendent. The duty was reduced to six cents in 1834, and to one cent in 1846. A duty is levied on foreign salt imported into this country. In 1859, the Legislature directed that leases should be made to all manufacturers for the period of thirty years, doing away with the vexatious suits arising out of the question of priority of leases. In 1860, all of the manufacturers united in forming the salt company of Onondaga; the property was appraised at an aggregate value of $3,200,000, the owners were to manufacture the salt and the company was to take it at twelve and one-half per centum of the valuation.

How highly the people of the State prize its salt springs, is shown by the fact that section 7 of article 7 of the Constitution provides that the Legislature shall never sell or dispose of the salt springs, belonging to the State. At present the care and superintendence of the salt springs and the manufacture and inspection of salt upon the salt springs reservation are vested in the Superintendent of the Onondaga Salt Springs, who holds his office for the term of three years, subject to removal by the Governor for cause. The Superintendent gives a bond for the faithful performance of the duties of his office; he appoints and removes at pleasure his subordinates, and for their acts, in virtue of their offices, he is responsible. His compensation is fixed at $1,500 per annum, to be deducted monthly from any moneys in his hands drawn from the treasury, pursuant to law. He is authorized, from time to time, to ordain and establish such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, as he may deem expedient, respecting the manufacture and inspection of salt and the collection of duties thereon; the manner and order of receiving salt water from the State reservoirs and aqueducts, the mode of conducting such to the respective manufactories, and the securing of the water from waste and loss, the loading of salt in bulk, or otherwise, into boats, to be transported upon the canals, or the shipment of salt by railway or otherwise, to be conveyed to market. And he is authorized to exercise in all other respects such supervision as shall tend to the more perfect execution of the provisions of law regulating the manufacture of salt.

The Superintendent is deemed to be in possession of all the lands, buildings, erections, pumps and machinery of every kind, and of all water-courses, conduits, wells, aqueducts, springs, and all other property belonging to the people of this State, connected with the salt works, on the salt springs reservation, and he has the charge, government and management of the same, under such provisions as shall be prescribed by law. He is required to make annual reports to the Comptroller of the quantity of salt inspected during the previous fiscal year, the amount of revenues accruing thereon, and from other sources; the expenditures made by him, and the amount which in his judgment will be necessary for the support of the salt springs for the ensuing year. He is also required to annually make a report in detail to the Legislature of his doings during the year just then expired, embracing such information in regard to the manufacture of salt, and the situation of the public works, together with such recommendations for their further improvement and extension as he shall deem necessary and proper. He is allowed a deputy who in case of the death, removal or resignation of his principal, possesses all the powers and discharges the duties of Superintendent until such time as another shall be appointed. He is also authorized to appoint a number of inspectors, clerks, and other employees. The revenue derived from the manufacture of salt is paid into the State Treasury to the credit of the general fund.

EMIGRATION.

COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.

The adoption of a concurrent resolution, February 9, 1847, calling upon the New York State representatives in Congress to secure the passage of laws governing emigration, was the cause of directing public attention to the overcrowding of vessels engaged in the transportation of emigrants, and the inattention of shipmasters to the cleanliness of the steerage and the comfort and health of passengers to an extent "shocking to the sense of humanity and disgraceful to any country possessing the power to prevent the recurrence of such enormities," and resulted in the passage of a law by the State Legislature, May 5, 1847,¹ creating a board of ten persons, six of whom were named in the act, who with the Mayors of the cities of New York and Brooklyn, the President of the German Society and the President of the Irish Emigrant Society of the city of New York as ex-officio members, were constituted Commissioners of Emigration. The term of office of two of the appointed Commissioners expired each second year, their successors to be appointed by the Governor and Senate for six years. The act authorized the Commissioners to examine into the condition of passengers arriving at the Port of New York by ship or vessel, and to provide for the expenses incurred, it was directed that masters and commanders of vessels carrying emigrants, should within three days of arrival, give a bond of $300 for each emigrant passenger landed, conditioned to indemnify the cities, counties and towns of the State for the maintenance of such as should become a public charge within five years ; or in lieu of the bond, to pay to the Chamberlain of the city of New York, as commutation money, the sum of one dollar for each emigrant passenger. The fund thus created to be subject to withdrawal on the warrant of the Commissioners and to be used for the payment of current expenses and the indemnification of the several cities, counties and towns of the State for support of needy or destitute emigrants. A subsequent law ¹ of the same year placed the Marine Hospital in the custody and under the control of the Commissioners. By chapter 219, Laws of 1848, the Commissioners were authorized to purchase or lease suitable docks or piers in the city of New York, to be set aside for the exclusive use of landing emigrants and alien passengers, and to designate persons to board vessels from foreign ports, having on board emigrant passengers, for the purpose of advising them and putting them on their guard against fraud and imposition.

The commutation money was increased in 1849 to one dollar and fifty cents and in 1853 to two dollars and again in 1867 to two dollars and fifty cents for each emigrant passenger. By chapter 857, Laws of 1868 authority was granted the Commissioners to examine witnesses under oath concerning complaints made as to treatment of passengers and the food and drink furnished to them.

By a law passed April 26, 1870, the then existing Board of Commissioners was superseded by a new Board consisting of nine persons named in the act, together with the same ex-officio members as the former Board. This Board was also superseded by an act passed April 26, 1873, which authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint six persons who, with the Mayor of the city of New York and the President of the two Societies named in the original act as ex officio members, should be the Commissioners of Emigration. The period which the Board was required to care for persons capable of earning their own living was reduced to two years. The commutation money was fixed at one dollar and fifty cents for each emigrant passenger by chapter 475 of the Laws of 1871.

March 20, 1876, the Supreme Court of the United States decided the State law exacting commutation tax or bond to be unconstitutional and void, since which date the expenses of the Commissioners have been provided for by appropriations from the State funds, varying from $150,000 to $200,000 per annum.

An act of Congress passed August 3, 1882, imposed upon vessels bringing alien passengers to ports of the United States, a per capita tax of fifty cents for each one landed, and the Secretary of the United States Treasury was charged with supervision over immigration to the United States, and was empowered to enter into contracts with such State commissions, boards or officers as should be designated for that purpose by the Governor of any State, to take charge of the local affairs of immigration at the ports within the State. The act also provided that when there shall be found among the passengers of any vessel a convict (excepting those convicted of political offenses), lunatic or idiot, or persons unable to care for themselves without becoming a public charge, that such persons should not be permitted to land. In conformity with this law Governor Cornell designated the Commissioners of Emigration as the Supervisors of Emigration at the Port of New York, and on September 2, 1882, the Board entered into a contract with the Secretary of the Treasury to take charge of emigration at that port, the expenses incurred by them to be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury from the per capita tax.

The present work of the Commissioners is carried on under two general departments, designated as the Emigrant Landing Department at Castle Garden and the Hospital and Refuge Department at Ward's Island. From the organization of the Board in 1847 to January 1, 1888, 8,858,377 emigrants have landed under the supervision of the Commissioners, who receive no compensation for services, and are prohibited from receiving any gain, profit or advantage through or by means of their offices. They are authorized to employ necessary officers, agents, clerks and servants and are required to report annually to the Legislature.

An act passed April 21, 1883, authorized the Governor to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a Commissioner of Emigration, who should hold office for five years, and until the appointment and qualification of his successor. Such Commissioner with the President of the German Society and the President of the Irish Emigrant Society of New York, to constitute the Board of Emigration of the State. The Commissioner is required to give a bond of $100,000, and shall receive an annual salary of $6,000. The act further provides that five days after the Commissioner shall have qualified that the terms of office of the present commissioners shall cease, and their powers, rights and authority shall pass to and be vested in the newly created Board of Emigration and its successors, who are directed to render quarterly statements of their receipts and disbursements to the Comptroller. The act also reduced to one year, the period for which an alien emigrant shall be chargeable to the immigrant fund or be entitled to admission to the State Immigrant Institutions under the control of the Board. April 27, 1883, Governor Cleveland nominated William H. Murtha of Brooklyn for Commissioner of Emigration, which nomination was not acted upon by the Senate previous to its sine die adjournment.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

Chapter 354 of the Laws of 1883 authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint three persons, who should constitute the New York Civil Service Commission, charged with the duty of preparing suitable rules with which to test, by practical and competitive examinations, the capacity and fitness of applicants for employment in the public service of the State, and of those therein as well, to the end that appointments and promotions be made on the basis of merit and competition. An act passed May 29, 1884 (chap. 410), directed that persons who served in the army or navy of the United States in the late war, and have been honorably discharged therefrom, shall be preferred over other persons of equal standing, for appointment to positions in the civil service of the State, and of cities affected by the civil service laws, and the act further provided that persons thus preferred shall not be disqualified from holding any position in the civil service on account of age or by reason of any physical disability, provided such disability does not render them incompetent to perform the duties of the position applied for. The Commissioners are prohibited from holding other office or place under the State Government; they receive annual salaries of $2,000 each, and are in addition repaid expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties. The Commission is authorized to employ an examiner, secretary and necessary clerks. They are required to make annual report of their proceedings to the Governor for transmission to the Legislature. The act does not fix the term of office of the Commissioners. The Seal of the Commission is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York—Civil Service Commission."

BOARD OF CLAIMS.

An act of the Legislature, passed April 7, 1883, established a Board of Claims and authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint three persons, residents of the State, Commissioners of Claims, of whom two, and no more, should be practicing attorneys and counselors of the Supreme Court, the persons so appointed to constitute the Board of Claims. The first Commissioners to hold office for two, four and six years respectively and until their successors are appointed and have qualified. Vacancies as they occur to be filled by the Governor and Senate for the term of six years. The Governor may remove any Commissioner within the term for which he shall have been appointed, but before so doing he shall furnish such officer a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity of being heard in his defense.

The Board are required to hold at least four sessions, in the city of Albany, during each year, and may hold adjourned sessions at such other places in the State as they deem necessary. They have jurisdiction to hear, audit and determine all private claims against the State which shall have accrued within two years prior to the time when the claim is filed, the same not being barred by existing statutes, and to allow thereon such sums as should be paid by the State. The Commissioners may administer oaths, issue subpoenas to witnesses and for the production of books and papers, and may issue commissions to take testimony within and without the State. They have power to punish for contempt in like cases and in like manner as the Supreme Court. Where the amount in controversy exceeds $500, either party feeling aggrieved by the award of the Board may appeal to the Court of Appeals upon questions of law only, which court may affirm, reverse, modify or dismiss the appeal, or award a new hearing before the Board of Claims. Chapter 60, of the Laws of 1884, vested in the Board of Claims all the jurisdiction and power to hear and determine claims against the State, formerly possessed by the Canal Appraisers and the State Board of Audit.

The Attorney-General is required to attend, in person or by deputy, each session of the Board, on behalf of the State. The Board keep a record of their proceedings and report the same to the Legislature annually. The Commissioners hold office for six years and receive annual salaries of $5,000, and are allowed, for necessary expenses, not to exceed $500 for each Commissioner. They are authorized to appoint and at pleasure remove a clerk, deputy clerk, a stenographer and a messenger, each of whom are required to take the constitutional oath of office before entering upon their duties. The clerk is required to give a bond to be approved by the Board and report his receipts and disbursements under oath to the Comptroller annually. The salaries of each are fixed by law.

The act of 1883 abolished the office of Canal Appraisers and the State Board of Audit, and directed that on May 31, 1883, those claims pending before the Boards named should be transferred to the Board of Claims. The Seal of the Board is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Board of Claims."

BOUNDARIES.

The States General of the United Provinces of the Netherlands originally laid claim,¹ by right of discovery,² to the country "between New France and Virginia, the sea coasts whereof lie in the latitude of forty to forty-five degrees." In 1632 (May 5) the West India Company³ referred to the charter of Virginia, as covering the territory from the 37th to the 39th parallels, and that of New England as including the territory between the 41st and the 45th; claiming for themselves the territory between the 39th and 41st, within which bounds the English had not undertaken any plantation. This was followed by the difficulties with the English on the Connecticut,⁴ and the abortive effort to settle the boundaries which was made in 1650.⁵ In 1656, Adriaen Van der Donck described New Netherland⁶ as lying between the Connecticut river and Virginia, extending north to the St. Lawrence. This territory was conveyed to the Duke of York,⁷ with an indefinite extension over the region claimed by the French, the St. Lawrence not being recognized as a boundary. With this modification, the English succeeded to the Dutch title and the Dutch jurisdiction.⁸ The Royal Boundary Commissioners fixed the Mamaroneck as part of the boundary between New York and Connecticut; and the Duke of York released New Jersey to John Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret. Controversies with regard to boundaries continued throughout the entire colonial period.⁹

One of the greatest obstacles to the adoption of the Articles of Confederation by some of the States, was the title to the western territory. The claim of New York was unique, in many respects. It did not hold solely by virtue of grants from the sovereign, but by purchase and treaty from and with the Indians, and particularly the powerful Iroquois Confederacy. Its sovereignty, as an independent commonwealth, included the territory occupied by the Iroquois. The Dutch had held by virtue of undoubted right from the Connecticut to the Delaware. The province had been stripped of these natural limits, on each side, along the coast, by the unwise action of the English authorities. The State voluntarily surrendered its claim to western lands, as a seal to its devotion to the Confederation, by an act passed February 19, 1780. The Continental Congress recognized the importance of this act of sacrifice, in the adoption of a report September 6 of the same year, and history has done full justice to our imperial Commonwealth.¹ The same spirit of devotion to the common good led to the renunciation of the claim to Vermont. The boundaries thus settled, in general terms, have been subject to critical examination from time to time, by various Commissioners and Agents; and have been re-examined and established by the Regents of the University under authority of various legislative enactments.

By a resolution of the Senate, passed April 19, 1867, the Regents of the University were directed to examine and ascertain the true location of the boundaries of the State. An act was passed by the Legislature, May 26, 1875 (ch. 424), directing them to resume the work of examination of the true location of the monuments which mark the several boundaries of this State, as authorized by the Senate resolution of 1867, and in connection with the authorities of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, respectively, to replace any monuments which may have become dilapidated or been removed, on the boundary lines of those States. A committee was appointed for this purpose, June 1, 1875. In 1880 the Regents were authorized, by chapter 340 of the laws of that year, to designate three of their number as Commissioners, to meet with Commissioners appointed by, and empowered to act for, the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, for the purpose of ascertaining the boundary lines as originally established and marked with monuments. The Commissioners were authorized to renew any dilapidated or lost monuments, and to erect additional ones if deemed necessary. The Regents were required to report the action of the Commissioners to the Legislature for its consideration and ratification. Under the provisions of this law the New Jersey boundary line was completed in 1882, and the Pennsylvania line in 1885.

By chapter 449 of the Laws of 1886, the Supervisors and Commissioners of Highways of towns adjoining boundary lines of the State were charged with the care of the monuments placed by official action, to mark the State boundary lines, and were required to annually examine and inspect the same, and report thereon in detail to the State Engineer. The inspection and examination of State boundary monuments was, by a subsequent law (ch. 421, Laws of 1887), devolved upon the State Engineer and Surveyor. The same act directs that the State Engineer and Surveyor shall, during the year 1887, and every third year thereafter, cause an examination to be made of all monuments upon the State boundaries, and requires him to make a detailed report thereof to the Legislature. In co-operation with persons duly authorized by the adjoining States, he is to restore and replace such boundary monuments as may be found injured, displaced or removed, and to cause suitable stone monuments to be set wherever such are now lacking, at points where the State boundary is intersected by the boundary of any towns or counties of this State, or by any highway.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

In 1835, the Secretary of State was directed by the Legislature to report at its next session a plan for a Geological Survey of the State. In this report it was recommended to divide the State into four districts, and to appoint two Geologists to each, a Draftsman, a Zoologist and a Botanist. An act was passed, April 15, 1836, authorizing a survey, and the proposed plan was changed to the appointment of a Mineralogist for the whole State, and a Geologist and an assistant for each district. These appointments were made by the Governor, excepting those of Assistant Geologists, who, after the first, were appointed by their principals. The State was originally divided into four districts, as follows:

At the end of the first season (autumn of 1836), a re-organization of the third and fourth districts was recommended by the Geologists, and made by the Governor, by which Cayuga lake, and a line drawn north and south from its extremities, became the west boundary of the third and east boundary of the fourth district. Tompkins county was divided by this line. An exchange was soon after made between the Geologists first appointed to the third and fourth districts, and a Palaeontological Department was recommended. To this, Mr. Conrad, the Geologist of the fourth district, was chosen April 1, 1837, and Mr. James Hall was appointed to fill the place thus made vacant. The following persons were commissioned in this survey:

STATE SURVEY.

In the latter part of the last and early in the present century, most of the lands in the State were parceled out for sale and settlement by rude chain and compass surveys, made under the authority of the owners of the various grants. The object was simply to measure and mark in the cheapest manner the boundaries of lots offered to the incoming settlers.

The first map of the State was made by putting together the results of these special surveys. Its errors and deficiencies were such that Gov. De Witt Clinton, in his message to the Legislature in 1827, urged the necessity of "an authentic and official map of the State." No action appears to have been taken in the matter. In a communication to the Legislature, Feb. 18, 1852, Gov. Washington Hunt again brought the subject before the Legislature, appealing to "the example of other governments in furnishing to the world an accurate delineation of the topographical features of their territory." In 1853 Gov. Horatio Seymour, in his first message, set forth the reasons for "an accurate survey of our State and the establishment of permanent monuments."

Afterward the Board of Regents of the University interested themselves in the matter, but without effect. Several reports made by Commissioners to locate the boundaries of the State also set forth the difficulties resulting from want of an accurate survey.

1 Resigned in spring of 1833; Mr. J. Lang Cassels, Mr. — Seymour, and perhaps others, were subsequently employed as assistants in this district, but none of them were commissioned by the Governor.

2 Transferred to the fourth district in 1837; E. Emmons, Jr., afterward acted as assistant.

3 Transferred to the fourth district in 1836, and to Paleontological Department in 1837.

4 Resigned in 1837; E. S. Carr, and perhaps others, afterward acted as assistants in the third district.

5 Transferred to the third district in 1837.

6 Transferred to the fourth district in 1837; resigned in 1839; E. N. Horsford, and others, were afterward employed as assistants in fourth district.

7 Formed in 1842; discontinued in 1851.

8 Resigned in autumn of 1842.

In the autumn of 1875, the American Geographical Society of New York appointed a committee to examine into the necessity for a State survey. The committee found and reported that there had never been an official survey of the State; that there was no topographical map of its surface; and that the maps published by private parties were grossly erroneous, the misplacements on them of important towns and cities often amounting to several miles. The representation of these facts to the Legislature of 1876 resulted in the passage of an act¹ making an appropriation for "an accurate trigonometrical and topographical survey of the State," and appointing for one year seven Commissioners to conduct the same.

The first meeting of the Board was on May 31, 1876, when Chancellor John V. L. Pruyn was elected President. The Commissioners appointed Mr. James T. Gardiner Director of the State Survey, July 11, 1876, and on the 24th of August, the Board authorized the Director to proceed with the execution of the work in accordance with plans submitted by him, and field-work was begun.

By an act passed May 16, 1877,² the Legislature reappointed for one year six of the Commissioners, filled a vacancy in the Board, and appointed an eighth Commissioner. On the 6th of May, 1878, a new act³ was passed, reappointing for an indefinite term the seven surviving Commissioners, and limiting the survey to trigonometrical work. Chapter 280, Laws of 1883, empowered the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to fill existing and future vacancies in the Board. The Commissioners receive no salaries but may be reimbursed for expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties. An act passed May 18, 1886 (chap. 414), directed the Commissioners to perfect and complete the records and computations of the State Survey so as to put them in the most permanent and convenient form for future use, and to prepare for printing such records and results as should be published, the same to be transmitted to the Legislature of 1887 in complete form for printing. The act further provided that all other records shall, when the work is completed, be deposited in the office of the State Engineer and Surveyor and the arrangements for the prosecution of the work were required to be made with the advice and approval of that officer.

ADIRONDACK SURVEY.

That elevated portion of the State lying to the northward of the Mohawk river and bounded on the east by Lake Champlain, on the west by the Black river and on the north by the Canadian frontier and the St. Lawrence river, has come to be known as the Adirondack region, and its interior as the Adirondack Wilderness. Of the latter, though beautiful and picturesque beyond description, and containing vast tracts of State lands, but little has been accurately known until a recent period. Under George III during the Colonial period compass lines were run for the boundaries of the land patents granted by the King. The "Royal Grant," now in the county of Herkimer, was laid out for Sir William Johnson in 1768, and Bergain's purchase in 1785. The Jerseyfield patent, forming the southern line of the Wilderness, was marked out in 1770, and in 1772 the great Totten and Crossfield purchase of nearly one million acres was located to the northward of these tracts, by Ebenezer Jessup.

At the close of the Revolution, lands on the border of this region were given to soldiers. Among those who settled there and attempted to reduce the forest to a state of cultivation was Baron Steuben. Subsequently King Joseph Bonaparte made a settlement at the lake which still bears his name. In 1791, Alexander MaComb obtained from the State the vast tract known as MaComb's purchase, which was an unknown forest region of an area of about four million acres, covering the northern portion of the present Adirondack district. On this tract the State made no survey, nor had any definite knowledge of the land lines established by MaComb, consequently when assessments were levied on the lands it was found impossible to accurately locate subdivisions. Although compass surveyors were sent into the region, the magnetic iron ore with which that portion of the State abounds led them astray and caused great confusion. At the time of the geological survey under the administration of Governor Marcy, and subsequently under Governor Seward, the great iron deposits were developed and became valuable and important estates.

Previous to 1865, at which time Verplanck Colvin commenced the exploration of the Adirondack region, the interior of the Wilderness had remained almost unknown. The work was continued by him at his own expense until 1872, at which time the Legislature, recognizing the importance of the work, gave its aid for the purpose of securing a systematic topographical survey of the Wilderness. Subsequent to 1872 the survey was conducted at the expense and under the control of the State. Its plan, which is fully set forth in the Superintendent's annual reports to the Legislature, is an accurate triangulation of the mountain peaks, where the copper bolts marking the instrument stations serve as imperishable monuments of reference. To the triangulation as a basis, or skeleton, the topography of the region is attached, forming a map of the whole, dependent upon astronomical observations for its meridians, instead of on the variable magnetic needle, which had been proved useless in the region. The work has been of great practical value for the reason that the survey has been the means of the re-establishing and monumenting long-lost boundaries of ancient royal grants, at a time when legal disputes of grave character rendered their re-discovery of importance, besides providing indisputable land-marks for future guidance.

An act passed May 25, 1878 (chap. 370), extended the time for the completion of the topographical survey and exploration of the Adirondack wilderness region, six years. In accordance with the provisions of the act, work on the survey was discontinued May 25, 1884. The supervision of the work from its inception until its discontinuance was directed by Superintendent Colvin, who made annual reports of the progress of the work to the Legislature; his compensation was fixed at $2,500 per annum. Assistants and clerks were appointed by the Superintendent. The Seal of the office was the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, of the Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — Superintendent of the Adirondack Survey."

Chapter 499 of the Laws of 1883 passed June 2, directed the Superintendent of the Adirondack Survey to make surveys showing the location and area of the detached portions of State lands in the counties of Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Hamilton, Herkimer, Lewis, Saratoga, St. Lawrence and Warren, and to connect the same with the surveys of the interior, and to show upon a map or maps the position of such lands. The act required the methods of survey to be in accordance with those used on the Adirondack Survey, and directed that copies of all maps relating to such State lands be filed in the office of the Comptroller and State Engineer and Surveyor.

COMMISSION OF STATE PARKS.

An act of the Legislature passed May 23, 1872 (chap. 848), established a Commission of State Parks for the State of New York; the Commissioners, seven in number, were named in the act, they served without compensation and were appointed for the term of two years. They were charged with the duty of inquiring into the expediency of providing for vesting in the State the title to the timbered region lying within the counties of Lewis, Essex, Clinton, Franklin, St. Lawrence, Herkimer and Hamilton, for the purpose of converting the same into a public park. The Commissioners were required to report the result of their labors, with such suggestions as they might have to make to the Legislature, at its next session. In submitting their report May 15, 1873, they say:

“After a careful consideration of the projected forest park, with its practical bearing upon the interest of the people of the whole State, we are of opinion that the protection of a great portion of that forest from wanton destruction is absolutely and immediately required. We do not favor the creation of an expensive and exclusive park for mere purposes of recreation, but condemning such suggestions, recommend the simple preservation of the timber as a measure of political economy. The conclusion that the permanent preservation of a large portion of this forest is necessary, is based upon numerous considerations intimately connected with the great business interests of the State, conspicuous among which is an adequate supply of water for the use of the people of the State.

It has been shown that the forests preserve and protect the springs and streams among them; and when we find individuals managing their property in a reckless and selfish manner, without regard to the vested rights of others, it becomes the duty of the State to interfere and provide a remedy. Here, by ruthless destruction of the forest, thoughtless men are depriving the country of a water supply which has belonged to it from time immemorial, and the public interest demands legislative protection. The canal interests of the State are very great, and are already suffering from this wrong. The water supply of the Champlain canal is entirely obtained from the streams of this wilderness and the Erie canal, from Rome to Albany is almost entirely supplied from the same watershed. In the Hudson, near Albany and Troy, navigation at midsummer has become very difficult. The mill owners at Glen's Falls and at other points find that their water supply is failing; and the farming lands throughout the State suffer from storms and droughts of increasing severity. It is of no consequence that, through ignorance of the natural laws governing rain and rivers, men have hitherto permitted, without protest, the injustice which they felt, but the cause of which they did not understand. The State must apply the remedy, and to protect their interests, preserve the forest. The great Adirondack forest has a powerful influence upon the general climatology of the State; upon the rain-fall, winds and temperature, moderating storms and equalizing throughout the year the amount of moisture carried by the atmosphere; controlling, and in a measure subduing, the powerful northerly winds, modifying their coldness and equalizing the temperature of the whole State."

The Commissioners say in concluding their report: "There is no need for any expenditures, save, possibly, in the improvement of a few of the principal roads leading to the settlements. The forest is in itself a natural park, and it would be improper to think of inclosing and fencing it, for it should be a common unto the people of the State. The question before your commission is one of great importance to the State, and requires their further consideration. For the present we deem it advisable, and recommend, that the wild lands now owned and held by the State be retained until this question is decided."

No action was taken in the matter by the Legislature until February 6, 1883, at which time an act was passed (chap. 13), setting apart all State lands in the Adirondack region as a reservation, and prohibiting the Commissioners of the Land Office from making sales of State lands in the counties of Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Hamilton, Herkimer, Lewis, Saratoga, St. Lawrence and Warren. Thus the Adirondack Park — the Atlantic coast equivalent of the Yosemite and United States Yellowstone Park — has become an accomplished fact, as the people of New York have through its Legislature reserved for public use forever, the grand, healthful northern forests of the State, one of the exceptionally beautiful portions of the continent, diversified by lakes, rivers, mountains and broad stretching forests. Of this immense tract the State owns more than 573,000 acres much of which is heavily timbered.

Subsequent to the passage of the act of 1883, it was found that by tax sales against half-owners of lands, the State had become jointly interested with certain lumbermen, and was also owner of cultivated farm lands and town and village lots in the Adirondack counties; as such lands were not desirable for the great forest reservation, an additional act, passed May 25, 1883 (chap. 470), provided for the settlement of ownership of lands held by private parties jointly with the State, and for the sale of the cultivated lands and town lots owned by the State. By an act passed May 15, 1885, (chap. 283) the "Forest Commission" have the custody and control of all the wild lands of the State.

FOREST COMMISSION.

An act of the Legislature passed May 15, 1885 (chap. 283), authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint three persons to be known as Forest Commissioners. At the first meeting of such Commissioners, the act required that they should divide themselves by lot, so that their terms of office expire in two, four and six years respectively; the full term thereafter to be six years. Commissioners may be removed by the Governor for cause, and he is authorized to fill vacancies, subject to confirmation by the Senate at its next session.

The Commissioners serve without compensation, except that there may be paid them their reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of official duty. They are authorized to employ a forest warden, forest inspector, a clerk and such agents as they may deem necessary, and to fix their compensation, but the total expense of the Commission is limited to the sums appropriated therefor by the Legislature.

All of the lands owned or hereafter to be acquired by the State, within the counties of Clinton, excepting the towns of Altona and Dannemora; Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Hamilton, Herkimer, Lewis, Saratoga, St. Lawrence, Warren, Washington, Greene, Ulster, Sullivan and Oneida constitute and are known as the forest preserve, which are required to be forever kept as wild forest lands and shall not be sold, nor shall they be leased or taken by any person or corporation, either public or private. The Forest Commission have the care, custody, control and superintendence of the forest preserve. It is made the duty of the Commissioners to maintain and protect the forests now on the forest preserve, and to promote as far as practicable the further growth of forests thereon. They also have charge of the public interests of the State, with regard to forests and tree planting, and especially with reference to forest fires in every part of the State. The powers previously vested in the Commissioners of the Land Office and in the Comptroller, so far as they related to the lands set aside for a forest preserve, were transferred to the Forest Commission.

The Commissioners may, from time to time, prescribe rules and regulations, which they may alter or amend, affecting the whole or any part of the forest preserve, and for its use, care and administration. The forest warden, forest inspectors, foresters and other persons acting upon the forest preserve under the written employment of the forest warden or the Forest Commission, may, without warrant, arrest any person found upon the forest preserve violating any of the provisions of the forestry law. The Commissioners are authorized to bring actions in the name or on behalf of the people of the State to prevent injury to the forest preserve or trespass thereon, and the Attorney-General is required to prosecute and defend such actions. And it is further provided that the Forest Commission shall take such measures as the Department of Public Instruction, the Regents of the University and the Forest Commission may approve, for awakening an interest in behalf of forestry in the public schools, academies and colleges of the State, and of imparting some degree of elementary instruction upon this subject therein.

All income derived from State forest lands is required to be paid over by the Forest Commission to the treasury of the State, and a strict account shall be kept of all receipts and expenses, which account shall be audited by the Comptroller and a general summary thereof reported annually to the Legislature. In January of every year the Commissioners are required to make a written report to the Legislature of their proceedings, together with such recommendations for further legislative or official action as they may deem proper.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE STATE RESERVATION AT NIAGARA.

An act of the Legislature, passed April 30, 1883 (chap. 336), authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint five persons to be known as "The Commissioners of the State Reservation at Niagara," who were empowered to select and locate such lands in the village of Niagara Falls and the county of Niagara and the State of New York, as in their opinion might be proper and necessary, to be reserved for the purpose of preserving the scenery of the Falls of Niagara and of restoring such scenery to its natural condition. The lands, however, were not to be taken possession of in the name of the State until such time as the Legislature should make the necessary appropriation for the payment of land-owners. The compensation to be paid by the State to the respective property-owners, having been determined by appraisers appointed for the purpose by the courts; the Legislature, by chapter 182 of the Laws of 1885, appropriated the sum of $1,433,429.50 for the payment of the several awards. The act also provides that the lands so purchased shall be known as "the State Reservation at Niagara," and that they shall be forever reserved by the State for the purpose of restoring the scenery of the falls of Niagara to and preserving it in its natural condition; and that such lands shall forever be kept open and free of access to all mankind without fee, charge or expense to any person for entering upon or passing to or over any part thereof.

By a subsequent act of the same year (chap. 286) passed May 20, the State Reservation at Niagara was placed under the control and management of the Commissioners of the State Reservation at Niagara and their successors in office. A majority of the Commissioners constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; they have power to lay out, manage and maintain the reservation and make and enforce ordinances, by-laws, rules and regulations necessary to effect the purposes thereof, and for the orderly transaction of business not inconsistent with the laws of this State; they also fix the prices to be charged by drivers of public conveyances for carrying persons for hire within the limits of the reservation; and are authorized to appoint a superintendent and employ such other persons as may be needed, one or more of whom, to be designated by the Commissioners, shall have the powers, and may perform the duties, of a police constable, in criminal cases. The Commissioners fix the compensation of the persons who may be appointed or employed by them, but no debt or obligation can be created by them exceeding the amount of money at the time at their disposal.

The term of office of the Commissioners is five years, they serve without pay, but are reimbursed for actual expenses incurred in the performance of official duties, vacancies in the Board are filled by the Governor. They are authorized to appoint a secretary and treasurer of the Board. And in the month of January of every year the Commissioners report their proceedings and a statement in detail of all their receipts and expenditures for the next preceding calendar year to the Legislature, with an estimate of the work necessary to be done and of the expenses of maintaining the reservation for the ensuing year they also make such recommendations and suggestions as they shall see fit.

THE CAPITOL.

The seat of government during the colonial period was in the city of New York. The Legislature generally held its sessions at the Fort during the early portion of the period, and subsequently met in the City Hall. Occasional sessions were held at Jamaica. New York was nominally the capital during the Revolution, but the occupaney of the city by the Royal troops compelled the Legislature to meet at Poughkeepsie, Kingston and Albany. After the evacuation, sessions of the Legislature were held at these places, or in New York, as the two Houses might from time to time agree, or as the Governor might designate. The Legislature has met continuously in Albany since 1798, the sessions being held at first in the Stadt Huys, corner of Broadway and Hudson avenue. In 1803, the Common Council of the city adopted a resolution requesting the Legislature to pass an act, authorizing the erection of a State and Court House, and appointed a committee to prepare a petition and map, and to report an estimate of the cost.¹ The committee submitted their report March 7th, and the Legislature authorized the erection of the building by an act passed April 6, 1804. Commissioners were appointed by the act. The corner stone was laid April 23, 1806, by Philip S. Van Rensselaer, Mayor of the city; the building was termed the Capitol by an act passed in 1809, and the Commissioners rendered their final accounting in 1814.

THE NEW CAPITOL.

The first legislative action with reference to a New Capitol was taken April 24, 1863, when, on motion of Hon. James A. Bell, the Senate referred the subject to the Trustees of the Capitol and the Committee on Public Buildings. In 1865, the Senate appointed a committee of three to receive propositions from various cities. In response to the circular issued by the committee, Albany proposed to convey Congress Hall block, or any other lands in the city required for the purpose. This proposal was accepted, and an act passed, authorizing the erection of a New Capitol, May 1, 1865 (chap. 648). The corner stone was laid June 24, 1871. The exercises included an introductory address by Hon. Hamilton Harris, reading of documents placed in the corner stone by Hon. William A. Rice, an address by Governor John T. Hoffman, and Masonic ceremonies conducted by Most Worshipful John H. Anthon, Grand Master. The Legislature by a concurrent resolution, adopted May 14, 1878, declared the new building to be the Capitol of the State of New York, and it was formally occupied as such, January 7, 1879. The same evening the citizens of Albany gave a reception in honor of the event, and commemorative exercises were had under authority of the Legislature on the 12th of February following.

¹ This committee consisted of John Cuyler, Charles D. Cooper and John V. N. Yates.

The second Board was superseded by an act of the Legislature of 1875 (chap. 134), and the Lieutenant-Governor, Attorney-General and Auditor of the Canal Department were constituted Commissioners of the New Capitol. An Advisory Board to the Commissioners was appointed July 15, 1875, consisting of F. Law Olmstead, Leopold Eidlitz and Henry Richardson. This Board was superseded by the appointment of Architects in 1876. An act passed March 30, 1883, authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint an officer to be known as the Commissioner of the New Capitol, who shall have charge of the work of constructing and finishing the New Capitol; he is authorized to employ labor, purchase material and make contracts, which in all cases must be awarded to the lowest bona fide responsible bidder. He is required to give a bond of $50,000, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of his office, and receives an annual salary of $7,500. The term of his office is the same as that of the Governor from whom he receives his appointment. The same act abolished the office of Superintendent of the Capitol. A subsequent law of the same year (chap. 349) designated the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Speaker of the Assembly, ex-officio Trustees of the finished portions of the New Capitol building, and of several of the other public buildings of the State at Albany, for which they are authorized to appoint a Superintendent.

An act of the Legislature passed May 23, 1885 (chap. 330) constituted the Governor, the Attorney-General, the presiding officer of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly a Board of Advisory Commissioners of the unfinished portion of the Capitol. Such Board is required at all times to be familiar with the progress of the work on the Capitol building, and from time to time, and sufficiently in advance of the work for an economical and prudent administration thereof, to designate, in writing, to the Commissioner of the Capitol, the parts and portions of such building that shall be advanced or completed under the appropriations made by the Legislature, and the Commissioner is required to act in accordance with such instructions. The Advisory Commissioners also designate the maximum number of persons to be employed on the work. It was further provided by the act that the existing plans of the building shall not be departed from or changed except upon the written assent of the Board of Advisory Commissioners. The powers vested in the Board may be exercised by a majority thereof and not otherwise. The total expenditures and advances for all purposes, from the State Treasury on account of the Capitol building to September 30, 1887, was $17,914,875.02.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

By the provisions of chapter 349, of the Laws of 1883, passed May 2, the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Speaker of the Assembly were constituted trustees of the public buildings of the State located at Albany and were authorized to appoint a suitable person to be superintendent thereof, who shall have the charge and care of the same. The Superintendent, subject to the approval of the trustees, appoints all persons necessary in the maintenance department of the buildings and grounds under his charge, he also, with the approval of the trustees, purchases all supplies required in that department. The Superintendent holds office for two years and is required to give his constant attention to the duties of his office. He subscribes the usual official oath and gives a bond in the penal sum of $10,000 for the faithful performance of his duties. He is authorized to arrest without process on the public grounds under his charge.

COMMISSIONERS OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

By the provisions of chap. 223, Laws of 1862, three Commissioners of Public Accounts were authorized to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold office for three years. The compensation of the Commissioners was fixed by the act, at five dollars for each day actually employed in the discharge of their duties, and an allowance for mileage, the same as made to members of the Legislature. They were charged with the duty of making an annual inspection of the accounts of the State Treasury, during which it was required that they should examine the accounts and vouchers relating to all moneys received and paid from the Treasury during the preceding year. The Commissioners also inspected all accounts kept in the Canal Department; the accounts of the Inspectors of State Prisons, and wardens and agents employed thereat. And examined the books and papers of the Banking and Insurance Departments, to ascertain whether the same were kept in compliance with law. They were further required to ascertain whether the moneys collected from banks, insurance companies, gas-light companies and railroad companies had been paid into the Treasury as required by law, for the maintenance of the respective departments or officers having supervision of their affairs.

The Commissioners reported to the Governor during the month of January in each year, and such report was required to be transmitted by him to the Legislature. The Commission was abolished in 1872 (chap. 541) by a clause in the appropriation bill of that year.

STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES.

The State Board of Charities was organized in 1867 (chap. 951), under the name of the Board of State Commissioners of Public Charities. It consisted of eight Commissioners, one in each judicial district, appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. By a clause in the appropriation bill of 1870 (chap. 281), the Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Comptroller and Attorney-General were constituted ex-officio members of the Board.

The act of 1867 authorized the Commissioners, or any one of them, to visit and inspect, annually, or as much oftener as they might deem proper, all charitable and correctional institutions of the State, excepting prisons, which received State aid. It conferred upon them power to inquire and examine into the financial condition of the various institutions subject to their visitation, the management and care of their inmates, the condition of the buildings and grounds, the conduct of the officers and managers, and generally into all other matters pertaining to their usefulness and good management. They were also authorized and required to visit and inspect each of the county poor-houses and city alms-houses, at least once in every two years. Reports as to the condition of the various institutions subject to the visitation of the Board have been presented each year to the Legislature, accompanied by statistical and financial tables, and a large amount of valuable information has thus been given to the public. The Board has power, under an act passed in 1871 (chap. 713), to relieve counties from the obligation to send chronic pauper insane to the Willard Asylum for the Insane.

By the act of May 21, 1873 (chap. 571), the name of the Board was changed to "The State Board of Charities," and three additional members were authorized to be appointed for the term of eight years, one from the county of Kings and two from the county of New York. By this act the power of visitation was extended to all charitable, eleemosynary, correctional and reformatory institutions, excepting prisons, whether receiving State aid or maintained by municipalities, or otherwise; and to any incorporated or private asylums, institutions, houses or retreats for the detention, treatment and care of the insane or persons of unsound mind. An act passed in 1873 (chap. 661), provides that "every poor person who is blind, lame, old, impotent or decrepit, or in any other way disabled or enfeebled, so as to be unable by work to maintain himself, who shall apply for aid to any superintendent or overseer of the poor or other officer charged with the support and relief of indigent persons, and who shall not have resided sixty days in any county of this State within one year preceding the time of such application, shall be deemed to be a State pauper; and authorizes the State Board of Charities to make contracts for their maintenance. Contracts have been accordingly made with the city of Albany and the counties of Delaware, St. Lawrence, Erie, Broome, Jefferson, Onondaga, Kings, Oneida, Seneca and Monroe. Commissioners receive no salary, but are reimbursed for traveling and necessary expenses. They are allowed a secretary and necessary clerks. The seal of the office is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — The State Board of Charities."

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 18, 1880 (chap. 322), authorized the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint three State Commissioners of Health, of whom two shall be graduates of legally constituted medical colleges and of not less than seven years' practice of their profession. The said commissioners, together with the Attorney-General, the Superintendent of the State Survey and the Health Officer of the Port of New York, who shall be ex-officio members of the "State Board of Health," and three other persons to be designated and appointed by the Governor, one of whom shall be a commissioner of health of the Board of Health of the city of New York, and the others shall be members or commissioners of health of regularly constituted and organized Boards of Health of cities of the State, shall constitute the "Board of Health of the State of New York." The act requires them to meet at least once in every three months and as much oftener as they shall deem necessary. The Board has cognizance of the interests of health and life among the people of the State, and is required to make inquiries in respect to the causes of disease, and especially of epidemics, and investigate the sources of mortality, and the effects of localities, employments and other conditions upon the public health, and collects information relative to death, diseases and health, and has general supervision of the State system of registration of births, marriages and deaths, and of prevalent diseases. It is made the duty of all Health Officers and Boards of Health in the State to communicate to it copies of all their reports and publications and such other sanitary information as may be useful. The clerical duties and safe-keeping of the bureau of vital statistics, supervised by the Board, is provided for by the Comptroller. The Board regulates the transfer of dead bodies beyond the limits of counties in which the deaths occur. An act passed April 29, 1885 (chap. 176), directed the State Board of Health to take cognizance of the interests of the public health, as it relates to the sale of food, drugs, spirituous, fermented and malt liquors, and the adulteration thereof. And gave to it the supervision of the appointment of public analysts and chemists. An additional act passed May 27, 1886 (chap. 467), prohibited the use of any substitute for hops, or pure extract of hops, in the manufacture of ale or beer, sold or offered for sale in this State, and charged the State Board of Health with the duty of enforcing the provisions of the law. The Governor may require the Board to examine into nuisances, and may declare to be public nuisances matters and things certified to him by said Board to be such. The term of office of the Commissioners is three years. No member of the Board, save the Secretary, receives compensation, but the actual traveling and other expenses of the Board incurred while engaged in the performance of official duties may be paid from the appropriations made for its support. The Board are required, before the first Monday in December of each year, to make a report in writing to the Governor upon the vital statistics and sanitary condition and prospects of the State. The Seal of office is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription "State of New York — The Board of Health." The Board was organized May 29, 1880, under the provisions of chapter 322 of the Laws of that year.

COMMISSIONERS OF FISHERIES.

Chapter 285 of the Laws of 1868 established the Commission of Fisheries, for the purpose of ascertaining, by examination, whether the various rivers, lakes and streams of the State could be rendered more productive of fish, and what means were desirable to effect such object. The act named Horatio Seymour, Seth Green and Robert Roosevelt as Commissioners, to serve for two years. By an act passed in 1870 (chap. 567), the term of office of the Commissioners was extended three years and the Governor was authorized to fill vacancies as they might occur. Chapter 74 of the Laws of 1873 continued the existence of the commission indefinitely, and a law passed in 1874 authorized the appointment of an additional Commissioner by the Governor. The Superintendent of Public Works, by an act passed in 1880 (chap. 252), was directed to cause fish-ways to be constructed and maintained in all of the State dams across the Oswego, Oneida and Seneca rivers, and a subsequent law, passed in 1881 (ch. 620), required that the work should be done in accordance with plans prescribed by the Commissioners of Fisheries. The duty of artificially propagating shad, white fish, trout and salmon trout in the waters of the State is devolved upon the Commissioners, and an act passed May 21, 1884 (ch. 320), directed them to erect a fish-hatching establishment at some convenient point in the Adirondack forest, for the purpose of restocking the lakes and streams of that forest with trout and other fish natural to the locality, and stocking such other streams as to them may seem necessary. An additional act passed May 26, 1885 (ch. 85), set aside certain land and waters in the Adirondack forests to be held by the Commissioners of Fisheries solely as reservoirs for breeding fish, and nurseries for young fish, and for experimental purposes in the business of fish culture, and prohibited any one from entering upon the same for the purpose of fishing without the consent of the Commissioners. Chapter 300 of the Laws of 1886 authorized the Commissioner of Fisheries, designated by them as Oyster Commissioner, to appoint a person to be known as State Oyster Protector, who is charged with the duty of patrolling the oyster regions of the State, under direction of the Oyster Commissioner, for the purpose of guarding the same, and enforcing the laws governing the deposit of injurious substances in waters used for oyster culture. Chapter 584, Laws of 1887, changed the title of the Oyster Commissioner to Shell-fish Commissioner. By chapter 317 of the Laws of 1883, the Game and Fish Protectors of the State are made subject to the supervision and direction of the Commissioners of Fisheries. The Commissioners receive no salaries, but are reimbursed expenses incurred in the performance of official duties; they are authorized to appoint a Superintendent and employ other necessary help and report their proceedings to the Legislature annually.

The same act directs the District Attorneys of the several counties of the State to commence and prosecute to termination, actions and proceedings in the name of the people against persons reported by any Protector to have violated the game and fish laws. Protectors are authorized to arrest without warrant, they hold office for three years and receive annual salaries of $500, with $250 additional for traveling expenses. An act of the Legislature, passed May 18, 1886 (chap. 409), authorized the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint an officer to be known as "Factory Inspector," also an assistant Factory Inspector whose terms of office shall be three years. The factory inspector and assistant are empowered to visit and inspect at all reasonable hours, and as often as practicable, the factories, workshops and other establishments in the State where the manufacture of goods is carried on, and he is required to report to the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the State, on or before November 30 of each year. NEW YORK STATE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' HOME.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 15, 1876 (chap. 270), incorporated "The Grand Army of the Republic Soldiers' Home of New York," whose affairs were to be managed by a board of twenty-four trustees, fifteen of whom were named in the act, and the election of six provided for; the Governor and Comptroller of the State of New York, and the commander of the Grand Army of the Republic of the department of New York were constituted ex officio members of the board. Save the treasurer, the trustees were prohibited from receiving compensation, except actual and necessary traveling expenses incurred in attending the meetings of the board of trustees, or attending to any business connected with the corporation, by direction of the board of trustees. The object and purpose of the corporation was to provide a home for the reception, care, maintenance and relief of soldiers and sailors from the State of New York, who served in the Union army or navy during the war of the rebellion, and received an honorable discharge therefrom, who might from any cause stand in need of the care and benefits of a soldier's home. The corporation was authorized to select a site for the home and purchase the necessary lands therefor and a detailed statement of its affairs was required to be annually reported to the Comptroller of the State.

Chapter 48 of the Laws of 1878, passed May 11th, authorized the Grand Army of the Republic Soldiers' Home of New York, to transfer and convey all its real and personal property to the State of New York, and directed the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint nine reputable citizens of the State as a board of trustees for the completion, management and control of the Home, the name of which, by the act, was changed to "New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home." Three of the trustees first appointed were to hold office for three years, three for two years, and three for one year; thereafter, three trustees were to be appointed annually. The Governor and Attorney-General are ex officio members of the board. Trustees receive no compensation and are under the same restrictions as under the original act of incorporation. The board of trustees, when organized, were required to at once take possession of all the property of the corporation so conveyed to the State and proceed to complete the buildings already begun or hereafter to be erected, and have them ready for occupation, with all suitable dispatch, with any funds appropriated therefor, or which might come into their hands for such purpose, and pay any existing indebtedness of the corporation which would become a lien thereon. The board of trustees were authorized to make contracts for work and materials for the completion of the buildings on the property conveyed, which was located at Bath, in Steuben county, and for the furnishing thereof, also for the furnishing of supplies for use and consumption therein; they were further authorized to adopt and establish such rules and regulations specifying the duties of its officers and for the government of its inmates, fixing the terms and conditions of admission to said Home, and prescribing the causes and manner of expulsion therefrom, as might by them be deemed necessary, provided, however, that no such contract could be entered into, and no such rules and regulations become operative until the same had been submitted to and approved by the Comptroller.

The act provided that every honorably discharged soldier or sailor who served in the army or navy of the United States during the late rebellion, who enlisted from the State of New York or who shall have been a resident of the State for one year preceding his application for admission, and who shall need the aid or benefit of said Home, in consequence of physical disability or other cause within the scope of the regulations of the board, shall be entitled to admission to such Home, subject to the conditions, limitations and penalties, prescribed by the rules and regulations adopted by the board.

The board of trustees is required annually, not later than January 15, to make a detailed report to the Legislature of all its receipts and expenditures and of all its proceedings for the previous year, together with full estimates for the coming year, verified by the oaths of the president and treasurer of the board.

COMMISSION TO DETERMINE THE POSITION AND MOVEMENTS OF NEW YORK STATE TROOPS ON THE BATTLEFIELD OF GETTYSBURG.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 26, 1886 (ch. 466), designated four persons who were named in the act, who, with the Adjutant-General of the State, were constituted Commissioners for the State of New York, to determine the positions and movements, at the battle of Gettysburg, of the several military organizations of this State which took part in that battle, and to do such other acts relating thereto, as might thereafter be required of them. They were directed to report their proceedings to the Legislature of 1887, with such recommendations as they should consider proper to secure the permanent marking of the movements and positions of the New York State troops. The Commissioners served without compensation. The Governor was authorized to fill vacancies in the board by appointment.

An act passed May 3, 1887 (ch. 269), authorized and directed the Commissioners to erect monuments on the battlefield of Gettysburg, in the State of Pennsylvania, to eighty-seven regiments and batteries which were enumerated in the act, at an expense of fifteen hundred dollars each, the same to be erected upon the site designated by the Commissioners as the principal and proper position of such regiment or battery on that battlefield. Prior to the erection of the monuments, the Commissioners were required to secure the dedication of the ground upon which each shall rest, to the memorial purposes for which they are to be erected ; with the right of free access thereto by the public, subject to the rules and regulations of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association. Each monument erected by the Commissioners was required to bear upon some conspicuous part thereof, the Arms of the State of New York, and, so far as practicable, a statement of the precise time when the position was held by the regiment or battery to be commemorated, and the principal movements made by such regiment or battery during the battle.

The Commissioners were required to consult and advise with the survivors of the regiments and batteries to which monuments were to be erected, concerning the designs of the same and the inscriptions to be placed thereon. When the monuments shall have been erected to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, the act directed that their care and custody be intrusted to the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, provided that the dedication of the grounds occupied shall be in such form and be evidenced by muniments of title, or right of visitation and supervision as shall satisfy the Attorney-General of this State that the purposes thereof shall be forever secured to the citizens of this State, to-wit: The right of free access to such grounds, and that the State of New York shall have the right at all times to take such proper measures to secure the protection and preservation of the monuments and the grounds on which they stand as shall be consistent with the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the State of Pennsylvania; which muniments of title or of right shall be duly recorded in the proper office in the county in which the grounds lie, and shall be deposited and preserved forever in the office of the Secretary of State of this State. The Commissioners were further authorized and directed to cause to be erected upon said battlefield, at a cost to this State not to exceed fifty thousand dollars, a suitable memorial structure to the memory of the officers and soldiers of the State of New York who fell on the battlefield of Gettysburg; such memorial structure to have an appropriate inscription thereon, specially relating to the New York soldiers who are buried in the National Cemetery at Gettysburg. The Commissioners were directed to make a full report of their proceedings to the Legislature of 1888, and at such other times as might thereafter be required by the Governor or the Legislature. By the same act it is made the duty of the Governor, from time to time, as he shall deem proper, at least once in every three years, to cause to be inspected all of the monuments erected by the Commissioners, and the grounds and avenues secured therefor, and to examine and inquire into the means employed for their protection and preservation, and report their condition, with such facts in relation thereto as he may deem proper, to the Legislature.

STATE BOARD OF MEDIATION AND ARBITRATION.

An act of the Legislature, passed May 18, 1886 (ch. 410), created a State Board of Arbitration consisting of three persons, to be appointed by the Governor and Senate, for the term of one year. The act required that one arbitrator be selected from the party which at the last general election cast the greatest number of votes for Governor of the State, and one from the party which cast the next greatest number of votes for the same officer, the third to be selected from a bona fide labor organization of the State. Chapter 63 of the Laws of 1887 provided for the appointment, under similar conditions, of three persons to constitute a State Board of Mediation and Arbitration upon which the powers and duties of the former board were conferred.

The State Board of Mediation and Arbitration are authorized to appoint a clerk or secretary, who shall keep a full and faithful record of the proceedings of the board, and also all documents and testimony forwarded to it by local boards of arbitration, and perform such other duties as the board may prescribe. The clerk or secretary is empowered, under the direction of the board, to issue subpoenas, to administer oaths in all cases before said board, and to call for and examine books, papers and documents of any parties to a controversy, and he is authorized to enforce their production in the same manner as courts of record, or the judges thereof, in this State. The arbitrators and clerk are required to take the constitutional oath of office before entering upon the performance of their duties. And it is further provided that an appeal may be taken from the decision of any local board of arbitration within ten days after the rendition and filing of such decision. It is made the duty of the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration to hear and consider appeals from the decisions of local boards, and to promptly proceed to the investigation of such cases, and the decision of said board thereon, which is required to be in writing, shall be final and conclusive in the premises upon both parties to the arbitration. Whenever a strike or lock-out shall occur, or is seriously threatened in any part of the State, and shall come to the knowledge of the board, it shall be its duty to proceed, as soon as practicable, to the locality of such strike or lock-out and put themselves in communication with the parties to the controversy, and endeavor by mediation to effect an amicable settlement of the controversy.

Any two of the arbitrators constitute a quorum for the transaction of business and may hold meetings at any time or place within the State. Examinations or investigations ordered by the board may be held and taken by and before any one of their number if so directed. But the proceedings and decision of any single arbitrator is not conclusive until approved by the board, or a majority thereof. Each arbitrator has power to administer oaths. The board are required to report to the Legislature annually, and are directed to include therein such statements, facts and explanations as will disclose the actual working of the board, and such suggestions as to legislation as may seem to them conducive to harmonizing the relations of, and disputes between, employers and the wage-earning masses, and the improvement of the present system of production. The term of office of the Arbitrators is fixed at three years, with annual compensation of $3,000 each, payable quarterly.

NEW YORK AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.

An act of the Legislature, passed June 26, 1880, created an institution to be known as the New York Agricultural Experiment Station, having for its purpose the promoting of agriculture in its various branches by scientific investigation and experiment. The management of its affairs was intrusted to a board of nine persons, to be designated by various agricultural organizations of the State. In 1881 (ch. 702) its affairs were placed in the hands of nine trustees, named in the act, to be known as the Board of Control; the term of three trustees expires annually, and their successors are appointed by the Governor for the full term of three years. The Board has authority to acquire necessary real estate,¹ and to appoint a director, to have charge of the experiments and investigations necessary to accomplish the objects of the institution; they also employ chemists and other persons to carry on the work of the station. Property acquired by the Board shall belong to the State and be disposed of only as authorized by law. The Governor is ex-officio a member of the Board. They elect from their number a President and appoint a Secretary and a Treasurer; the latter gives a bond of $10,000. The members of the Board receive no salary, but may be paid actual traveling expenses and expenses incurred while in attendance at meetings of the Board.

After January 1, 1885, it is unlawful for any person to practice as a pharmacist unless he or she shall have been granted a license by the Board. Violations of the several provisions of the act are made misdemeanors and are punishable as such. The expense of the Board is paid from the fees received from licenses. An act of the Legislature, passed April 9, 1887 (ch. 124), authorized the Governor to appoint three Commissioners, two of whom shall be judges or ex-judges of the Supreme Court, and one of whom shall be an attorney and counselor-at-law of twenty years' practice, whose duty it shall be to examine the bill entitled "An Act to establish a Code of Evidence," which passed the Legislature at the session of 1886, but which was not approved by the Governor, and to report the same to the Legislature of 1888, within ten days after the opening thereof, incorporating therewith such changes, alterations and amendments as, in their judgment, may be deemed essential and proper. The report transmitted to the Legislature was required to be substantially a codification of the existing law of evidence, except wherein changes may have been regarded by the Commissioners as absolutely essential or extremely desirable. The Commissioners served without compensation, but were reimbursed for necessary expenses incurred. They were authorized to employ a clerk, stenographer and other necessary expert assistance, whose compensation was fixed by the Commissioners. THE JUDICIARY.

The judicial system of the State of New York is the growth of the soil. It differs fundamentally, alike in spirit and form, from the older systems of England and the Continent. That subtle spirit which is the genius and organic principle of institutions is in this commonwealth thoroughly radical ; but in its manifestation and working it has always been constructive and progressive, rather than destructive or wayward. The genius of the commonwealth required an independent judiciary, responsible directly to the people ; but the conservatism of growth which is as intuitive with us as is our radicalism of ideas, induced a very cautious progress in the practical application of the principle. The germ gradually and systematically unfolded the outward organism, until to-day the judicial system of New York, in its structure and its character, is held in high regard alike in Europe and in this country. This system, however, was a growth and not a mechanical device.

Originally, the law-enacting and law-interpreting as well as law-enforcing functions centered in the Governor. No act of the Legislature could become a law without his assent ; he was the Chief Judge of the Court of Final Resort, and his associates of the Council were practically his subordinates ; and he was the Chief Executive of English statutes and Colonial enactments. He was the representative of Royal authority and Parliamentary will. With this limitation, he contended for his prerogative as law-giver, judge and executor ; councils, courts and administrative officers being but his agents, advisers and aids, Assemblies being but an orderly method of making known the wishes of the people, and Legislatures only joint committees to prepare bills subject to his approval and the approval of the Crown. The first State Constitution took the supreme judicial function away from him, and vested it in the Lieutenant-Governor and Senate, the Chancellor and Justices of the Supreme Court. The former, under the Colonial government, had frequently been the Chief Justice, who was almost uniformly a friend of the legal rights of the people, as construed by the Whigs of England ; and the Senate was the legitimate successor of the Council. The Lieutenant-Governor and Senate were elective officers, and the judicial officers were appointed ; thus uniting popular control with conservative stability. The Constitution of 1846 divided the Court, constituting a Court of Impeachments and a Court of Errors, the latter now becoming a purely judicial body. This differentiation and development grew as inevitably as any thing in nature. The Court of Appeals, as at first constituted, was composed of Judges selected from the Justices of the Supreme Court ; but this in time was found to be cumbrous, the business of the Courts having increased to an extent to seriously interfere with the proper discharge of conflicting duties. The natural outgrowth of this state of affairs was the present Court of Appeals, with the intermediate General Term. Thus, while the system has changed, the changes have only been in the direction of a systematic unfolding of the original germ, adapting itself to the general life and order of the commonwealth.

COURTS OF FINAL RESORT.

Supreme appellate and admiralty jurisdiction were vested in the Director-General and Council under the Dutch government, and in the Governor and Council under the English Government. These various judicial functions, however, were subdivided under the latter.

COURT OF ASSIZES.

This Court was established under the authority of "The Duke's Laws," promulgated at Hempstead in 1665. It was composed of the Governor, members of the Council, High Sheriff and such Justices of the Peace as might attend. It sat in New York once a year, the regular term beginning on the last Thursday of September. Special terms, however, could be called at other times, to hear causes requiring speedy dispatch. It had original jurisdiction in all criminal matters, and held trials by jury. In civil cases it had jurisdiction when the value was £20 and upwards. In addition to judicial, this court exercised a sort of legislative power, and registered the edicts of the Duke of York, and of the Governor and Council. The secretary of the province was clerk of this court. It was abolished in 1683.

CORRECTION OF ERRORS AND APPEALS.

The Court for the Correction of Errors and Appeals, only, was established in 1691. It was composed of the Governor and Council, and when convened in that capacity assembled at the fort. The powers of the Court were analogous to those of the Court of Final Resort (described below), previous to 1846. Appeals lay to it from any judgment exceeding in value £100 sterling, which amount was increased in 1753 to £300; if the amount exceeded £500, an appeal was allowed to the King in Privy Council, provided the appeal was made within fourteen days after the decision, and the appellant gave bonds for the payment of the final cost and judgments. But in cases where the Episcopal Church was concerned, appeals were allowed from inferior courts to the Governor and Council, and from the latter to the King in Council, without limitation of any sum.

COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS AND THE CORRECTION OF ERRORS.

The thirty-second section of the Constitution of 1777 provided that a Court should be instituted for the Trial of Impeachments and the Correction of Errors, under regulations which should be established by the Legislature, to consist of the President of the Senate for the time being, and the Senators, Chancellor and Judges of the Supreme Court, or the major part of them. In matters of impeachment, the thirty-third and thirty-fourth sections provided that the power of impeaching all officers of the State, for mal and corrupt conduct in their respective offices, should be vested in the representatives of the people in Assembly, but that it should always be necessary that two-thirds of the members present should consent to and agree in such impeachment; that, previous to the trial of every impeachment, the members of the court should respectively be sworn, truly and impartially to try and determine the charge in question, according to evidence; and that no judgment of the said court should be valid unless assented to by two-thirds of the members then present; nor should it extend further than to removal from office and disqualification to hold or enjoy any place of honor, trust or profit under the State. But the party so convicted should be, nevertheless, liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to the laws of the land. In every trial on impeachment, or indictment for crimes or misdemeanors, the party impeached or indicted was allowed counsel, as in civil actions. It was also ordered that when an impeachment should be prosecuted against the Chancellor, or either of the Judges of the Supreme Court, the person so impeached should be suspended from exercising his office, until his acquittal. In the correction of errors the Constitution provided that when an appeal from a decree in equity should be heard, the Chancellor should inform the court of the reasons of his decree, but should not have a voice in the final sentence. If the cause to be determined should be brought up by writ of error, on a question of law, on a judgment in the Supreme Court, the Judges of the court should assign the reasons of their judgment, but should not have a voice for its affirmance or reversal. In pursuance of these provisions in the Constitution, the Legislature passed an act, November 23, 1784, organizing the Court. It authorized sessions to be held during the meeting of the Legislature, and at such other times and places as might be ordered; directed a seal to be prepared and a Clerk to be appointed, and prescribed the manner of proceeding in cases of impeachment. The Court adopted its seal February 6, 1786. It is thus described: "Field argent; in the precise middle chief, a sun in its meridian; below the sun, a scroll, bearing the words NEW YORK; and round the field the inscription of COURT FOR TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS AND CORRECTION OF ERRORS." This continued to be the seal of the Court until abolished by the Constitution of 1846.

In regard to the correction of errors, appeals were allowed to it from the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court and Court of Probate, and Admiralty Court except in cases of capture. All appeals from Admiralty or Probate were to be made within fifteen days, and also all appeals from decretal orders in Chancery. All appeals from final decrees in Chancery, and writs of error upon judgments in the Supreme Court, had to be brought within five years after judgment rendered or decree made. The president of the Senate only had a vote in case of a tie among the other members of the Court. Writs of error in civil cases, and criminal cases not capital, were writs of right and issued of course, but in capital cases they were writs of grace. The Chancellor issued the writs in all cases; but in capital cases only on order, upon motion or petition, with notice to the Attorney-General or State prosecutor.

The court remained the same under the Constitution of 1821, except that a majority only of the members elected to the Assembly was requisite for an impeachment. The Court ceased with the second Constitution, after an existence of nearly seventy years.

COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS.

The Court for the Trial of Impeachments and the Correction of Errors was abolished by the Constitution of 1846. Its powers and duties in regard to impeachments were conferred and enjoined on a new court, termed the Court for the Trial of Impeachments. This Court is composed of the President of the Senate, the Senators, or a major part of them, and the Judges of the Court of Appeals, or a major part of them. On the trial of an impeachment against the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor cannot sit with the Court. No judicial officer can exercise his office after impeachment until acquitted. The concurrence of two-thirds of the members present is necessary to a conviction. Judgment, in case of impeachment, can extend no further than to removal from office, or removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit within the State; but the party impeached shall be liable to indictment and punished according to law. The Assembly, by a vote of a majority of all the members elected, has the sole power of impeachment. When summoned, it is directed to be held at the Capitol in Albany, the officers of the Senate to be officers of the Court. If the President of the Senate is absent, the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals presides; if both are absent, such member as the Court shall elect. The Court is a Court of Record, and has a Seal,¹ which was filed July 30, 1853, having the same device as the former Court.

COURT OF APPEALS.

The Court of Appeals succeeded the Court for the Trial of Impeachments and the Correction of Errors, so far as the correction of errors is concerned. As first organized, under the Constitution of 1846, it was composed of eight judges, four of whom were chosen by the electors of the State for a term of eight years, and four were selected from the class of Justices of the Supreme Court having the shortest time to serve. The Judges elected by the people were so classified that an election occurred every odd year. The Judges selected from the Supreme Court were taken each even year from the first, third, fifth and seventh districts, and each odd year from the second, fourth, sixth and eighth districts, and served one year. The Judge elected by the State at large having the shortest term to serve, acted as Chief Judge. The Clerk was elected by the people for three years. The Reporter was appointed by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Attorney-General for three years.

¹ Changed by chapter 190, Laws of 1882, to Arms of the State.

The article in relation to the Judiciary, framed by the Convention of 1867-8, reorganized the Court of Appeals. This article was approved by the people at the general election held in 1869. In accordance with its provisions, the Court of Appeals is now composed of a Chief Judge and six Associate Judges, who "hold their office for the term of fourteen years, from and including the first day of January after their election." The first Judges were chosen at a special election held in April, 1870. At the first election of Judges, each elector voted for the Chief Judge and four only of the Associate Judges. Vacancies are to be filled at the next general election happening not less than three months after such vacancy occurs; and, until so filled, the Governor and Senate, or if the Senate is not in session, the Governor alone, may fill such vacancy.

The new Judiciary article also provided for a Commission of Appeals, composed of the four Judges of the Court of Appeals, in office by election or appointment when the article went into effect, and a fifth commissioner, appointed by the Governor. Causes pending in the old Court of Appeals on the 1st day of January, 1869, were determined by the Commission. The Commissioners selected the Chief. Their term of office was limited to three years; but was extended two years by the Legislature¹ pursuant to amendment of the Constitution adopted Nov. 5, 1872.² The term expired July, 1875.

The Judges and Commissioners entered upon their duties, pursuant to the Constitution,³ on the first Monday of July, 1870.

Judges are prohibited, by the Constitution, from holding any other office or place of public trust; from exercising any power of appointment to public office, and from practicing as attorney or counselor, or acting as referee. They are removable by concurrent resolution of both Houses of the Legislature, if two-thirds of all the members elected to each branch concur therein.

The Court of Appeals is almost continually in session, taking recess as it may from time to time order. It has full power to correct or reverse the decisions of the Supreme Court. Five Judges constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of four is necessary to pronounce a judgment. If such concurrence be not had, the case must be reheard; but no more than two rehearings can be had, and if then four Judges do not concur, the judgment of the court below is affirmed. The Legislature may authorize the judgments, decrees and decisions of any inferior local court of record established in a city having original civil jurisdiction, to be removed for review directly into the Court of Appeals.

³ Art. 6, § 24.

The Judges of the old Court of Appeals, elected prior to April 18, 1857, each received a salary of $2,500 per annum; those since that date, $3,500. By chapter 203 of the Laws of 1870, the salary of Chief Judge was fixed at $7,500, and Associate Judges at $7,000. A subsequent law, passed March 17, 1887, increased the same to $10,500, and $10,000 respectively. By a clause in the appropriation bill of 1871 (ch. 718), each Judge has an annual allowance of $2,000 in addition to salary. The salaries of Judges of the Court of Appeals whose terms are abridged by the constitutional limitation as to age, and who have served ten years or more, are paid for the term for which they were elected.¹

The Court appoints a Clerk at a salary of $5,000, who holds office during its pleasure. He gives a bond of $25,000 for the faithful performance of his duties, and appoints a deputy, who acts as clerk during the absence or inability of his principal. His office in the Capitol at Albany contains the records of the former Court of Errors, Supreme Court, Court of Chancery and Court of Probates. The Court also appoints a Reporter at a salary of $5,000. The seal of the Court, in use prior to 1883, is shown on Plate O, No. 2. The present seal is the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscription "State of New York -- Court of Appeals."

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

This was a Civil Law Court. The Governor and Council acted, in the time of the Dutch, as the Judges of the Court. Subsequently, under the Duke of York, special commissions were issued by the Governor to determine such cases according as they occurred, until 1678, when authority was given to appoint a judge and other officers of the Court, which, at first, was established by warrant, or in virtue of the Governor's commission; but, eventually, it depended from the Lords of the Admiralty in England. Its jurisdiction extended over New Jersey and Connecticut, as well as New York, and was so enlarged, by divers statutes, as to include almost every breach of the acts of trade. Appeals from this Court lay originally to the Court of Admiralty in England, but shortly before the Revolution a Superior Court of Admiralty was established in North America, and, thenceforward, all appeals from Vice-Admiralty Courts were directed to be made to it.

The Court existed for a short time under the State Government. In 1774 Judge Morris resigned the commission he held from the Crown, in consequence of having sided with the Colonists. On the 25th of November, 1775, the Continental Congress recommended the Colonies to establish courts to adjudicate questions that might arise relative to captures on the seas during the War of Independence, and that all trials be by jury. The High Court of Admiralty of the State of New York was accordingly authorized. Pursuant to an act of the Continental Congress, passed October 13, 1777, appeals could be had from this court to a Committee of their body. Under the Articles of Confederation an act was passed establishing a Court to hear appeals, termed the Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture. On the 14th of February, 1787, the State Legislature passed an act to prevent the encroachments of the Federal Court, providing that it should not have cognizance over transactions within the boundaries of the State. The present United States Constitution vested admiralty jurisdiction exclusively in the Federal Courts, and consequently the State Court ceased by the adoption of that instrument by the State in 1789. The powers of the Court have since been exercised by the United States District Court.

The Seal of the State Court of Admiralty was oval, and had for its device the figure of Neptune, in a car drawn by sea horses, holding in the right hand a trident and in the left an American flag; in the background a ship. Legend, SEAL OF THE COURT OF ADMIRALTY, STATE OF NEW YORK.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

Equity jurisdiction was vested in the Court of Assizes under the Duke's Laws. On the 1st of November, 1683, a Court of Chancery was established by name. The Governor, or such person as he might appoint, was Chancellor, assisted by the Council. It was continued by act of 6th May, 1691, but expired by limitation in 1698. It was revived by ordinance, 28th August, 1701; suspended 13th June, 1703, and finally re-established 7th November, 1704.

The Court was opposed by the General Assembly and the Colonists, not because they did not consider such a court necessary, but because they questioned the right of the Crown to establish an equity court in the Colony, and the propriety of constituting the Governor and Council such court; deemed its decrees oppressive, and the delays and expense attending its operations onerous and unnecessary.¹ It held its sessions in the council chamber at the fort in the city of New York.

The Court was recognized by the Constitution of 1777 as then in existence. It provided that the Chancellor should not hold any other office, except that of Delegate to the General Congress upon special occasions; but if elected or appointed, it should be at his option in which to serve. In May, 1788, the Court was reorganized by the Convention of Representatives of the State of New York. Masters and Examiners were appointed by the Council of Appointment; the Register and Clerks by the Chancellor. The office of Assistant Register was established in New York in 1804. By act of April 13, 1814, the Reporter of the Supreme Court was made the

Col. Hicks, from the Committee on Grievances, reported that, as well by the complaints of several people as by the general cry of his Majesty's subjects inhabiting this Colony, they find, that the Court of Chancery, as lately assumed to be set up here, renders the liberties and properties of the said subjects extremely precarious; and that by the violent measures taken in and allowed by it, some have been ruined, others obliged to abandon the Colony, and many restrained in it, either by imprisonment or by excessive bail exacted from them, not to depart even when no manner of suits are depending against them; and therefore are of opinion that the extraordinary proceedings of that Court, and the exorbitant fees and charges countenanced to be exacted by the officers and practitioners thereof, are the greatest grievance and oppression this Colony has ever felt, and that for the removal of the fatal consequences thereof, they had come to several resolutions; which being read were approved of by the House and are as follows, to wit:

Resolved, That the erecting or exercising in this Colony a Court of Equity or Chancery (however it may be termed) without consent in General Assembly, is unwarrantable and contrary to the Laws of England, a manifest oppression and grievance to the subjects, and of pernicious consequence to their liberties and properties.

Resolved, That this House will, at their next meeting, prepare and pass an act to declare and adjudge all Orders, Ordinances, Decrees and Proceedings of the Court so assumed to be erected and exercised as above mentioned to be illegal, null and void, as by Law and Right they ought to be.

Resolved, That this House at the same time will take into consideration whether it be necessary to establish a Court of Equity or Chancery in this Colony, in whom the jurisdiction thereof ought to be vested, and how far the powers of it shall be prescribed and limited.

The Governor immediately dissolved the General Assembly and "ruffly used" several members, placing one under confinement, which proceedings were strongly condemned by the succeeding Assembly. On the 6th of November, 1735, the first resolution above given was again adopted, with the following:

Resolved, That a Court of Chancery within this Colony, in the hands or under the exercise of a Governor, without consent in General Assembly, is contrary to law, unwarrantable, and of dangerous consequence to the liberties and properties of the People.

The position of the Assembly was set forth at length in an address to Acting Governor Clarke, September 7, 1737.

Reporter of the Court of Chancery. Both these officers were appointed by the Chancellor, who also licensed all solicitors and counselors in the court. A Seal for the court was ordered by an act passed March 16, 1778. Several dies are preserved in the State Library. They are essentially alike, though differing somewhat in detail. Two of the dies are given on Plate P, Nos. 2 and 3.

The Constitution of 1821 provided that the Chancellor should be appointed by the Governor, and should hold his office during good behavior, or until he had attained the age of sixty years. On an appeal from the decision of the Chancellor to the Court for the Correction of Errors (of which he was a member), the Constitution provided that the Chancellor should give his reasons for his decision, but should have no voice in the final sentence. By an act passed March 21, 1823, the duties of the Judge of the Court of Probates were devolved on the Chancellor.

By a provision in the second Constitution equity powers were vested in the Circuit Judges, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the Chancellor. An act was passed April 17, 1823, to carry out this provision. It authorized each Circuit Judge to appoint a Clerk for the Court of Equity to be held by him, who should also perform the duties of a Register in said Court. The Judges were directed to devise a seal for the clerks, to be used in all equity proceedings. These Courts were subsequently abolished; the Chancellor was invested with general equity jurisdiction, the Circuit Judges acting as Vice-Chancellor in their respective circuits.

Masters and Examiners were appointed by the Governor and Senate for three years, unless sooner removed; and the Registers and Assistant Registers by the Chancellor during pleasure. In 1823 there were five hundred and ten Masters and twenty-five Examiners.

In January, 1831, a separate Vice-Chancellorship for the first Circuit was established, and in March, 1839, one for the eighth Circuit, the office holding by the same tenure as that of Chancellor. The office of the former was in New York, the latter in Rochester. In March, 1839, an Assistant Vice-Chancellor was established for the first Circuit.

Pursuant to the Constitution of 1846, the Court of Chancery ceased its existence the first Monday of July, 1847, and its powers were vested in the Supreme Court.

SUPREME COURT.

The Supreme Court was originally established by an act of the Legislature, May 6, 1691, continued by divers acts, which having expired by limitation in 1698, the court was continued by proclamation January 19, 1699, and finally by ordinance of the Governor and Council, dated May 15, 1699.

It was empowered to try all pleas, civil, criminal or mixed, as fully and amply as the English Courts of Kings Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, and was possessed of all the powers of those courts, though it was not supplied with their officers, and did not proceed on the equity side. Any action amounting to upwards of twenty pounds could be commenced in or removed to it. It could correct the errors and revise the judgments of inferior courts. Appeals lay from it to Governor and Council, for any judgment above £100 sterling, which sum was increased, in 1753, to £300. It had four terms in a year, and always sat in the city of New York; the practice was modeled after that of the Kings Bench. By act of the General Assembly, the judges were made Judges of Nisi Prius, and annually performed a circuit through the counties, at which time they also had a commission of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery, in which some of the county judges were joined. This commission was issued by the Governor, and was directed to the judges named in the commission.

The court consisted at first of five judges, two of whom, together with the chief justice, constituted a quorum. From 1701 until 1758, it was composed of a chief justice and two associate or puisne judges. In November, 1758, a fourth judge was added. In 1769 the distinction of the associates as 2d, 3d and 4th was abolished, and thenceforth the puisne judges ranked according to the dates of their commissions. In 1691 the salary of the chief justice was £130, and associate justices £100. The other justices did not receive a salary. In 1698 the chief justice received £100. In 1702 he received £300 and a fee of ten shillings on the first motion in every cause, the second judge £150, the associate £50. In 1765 the chief justice was allowed £300, and the associates £200 for holding the circuits. In 1774, the chief justice received from the crown £500 sterling, and £300 New York currency from the province. The associate justices each received £200 provincial currency, and fees.

The judges and those practicing before them, wore no particular costume, nor was there any distinction or degrees among the lawyers.

Persons who had served seven years under an attorney, or had taken a collegiate course and served three years' apprenticeship, were granted licenses to practice in this court by the Governor, under his seal, on the recommendation of the Chief Justice, and on subscribing the usual oaths.

The First Constitution of the State recognized the Supreme Court as then existing, and the Convention which adopted it reorganized the Court May 3, 1777. On the reorganization of the Court in 1778, the Judges were empowered to devise a seal (act of March 16, 1778), and the proceedings were directed to be in the name of the People of the State instead of that of the King. The Judges were appointed by the Council of Appointment, and their terms of office limited to the age of sixty years.¹ At first the Court consisted of three members, but a fourth was added in 1792, and a fifth in 1794. On the 4th of April, 1778, the salary of the Chief Justice was fixed at £300 ($750 New York currency) per annum. The Associate Justices were allowed £200 ($500 New York currency), and forty shillings per day for attendance on the Oyer and Terminer, and their travel fees. These sums were gradually increased until, in 1797, each Justice received a salary of $2,000 per annum. On the 19th of June, 1812, their salaries were fixed at the annual sum of $3,000 for three years. On the 17th of April, 1816, the sum was increased to $4,500, without limit as to time. On the 20th of April it was enacted that the Justices residing in the city of New York should be entitled to receive fees for the transaction of Chamber business, and other services appertaining to their offices. In 1820 the salaries were reduced to $3,500, and in 1821 to $3,000, at which they remained until the Second Constitution went into effect.

In 1785, two terms of the Court were directed to be held in Albany each year, and two in New York; the former commencing the last Tuesday in July and third Tuesday in October, the latter the third Tuesdays of January and April. The April and October terms continued three weeks, and the January and July terms two. After the 30th of March, 1811, the terms of the Court were commenced on the third Monday of October and the first Mondays in January, May and August, and closed Saturday of the ensuing week. The May and October terms were held in New York, and the January and August terms in Albany.

In 1785 it was provided that the office of the Clerk should be kept in New York city and that of his deputy in Albany, all the papers and records filed in the office of the latter to be removed every six months to the office of the former. March 10, 1707, the Judges were authorized to appoint an additional Clerk, who was to keep his office in Albany, and to remove such papers from the New York to the Albany office as they might deem proper. They were also required to cause an additional seal to be prepared. On the 4th of April, 1807, another office was authorized and located in Utica, and the Justices authorized to devise another seal. The clerks were directed to furnish each other, at every term, a transcript of the docket of all judgments in their offices.

April 7, 1804, a Reporter was authorized to be appointed by the Judges, at a salary of $850 per annum, to report the decisions of the Supreme Court and the Court for the Correction of Errors, and to publish the same.

On the 19th of April, 1786, the Legislature enacted that issues joined should be tried in counties where the lands were situated, the cause of action arose, or the offense was committed, unless the Court should order the trial to be had at the bar of the Court. This provision was not applicable to actions of a transitory nature, and the Court could, notwithstanding, order trials by juries in other counties in all proper and necessary cases.

The first rules of the Court were adopted at the April term, 1796. They were drawn by Judge Benson. Under these rules any person could practice as an attorney who had served a clerkship of seven years with a practicing attorney. From this term of seven years should be deducted the time passed in classical studies after attaining the age of fourteen years, provided such period did not exceed four years. After an attorney had practiced four years he was admitted to practice as counsel. This period was reduced to three years at the November term in 1804. Judge Kent first introduced the practice of presenting written opinions on matters of importance. The seal of this Court is given on Plate O, No. 4.

Several important and organic changes were made in the Supreme Court by the Constitution of 1821. The Supreme Court sat four times a year in review of their decisions, and for the determination of questions of law. Each Justice of the Supreme Court, however, had power to hold Circuit Courts as well as the Circuit Judges, and any Justice of the Supreme Court could likewise preside at the Oyer and Terminer.

In the Supreme Court, all process was to be tested in the name of the Chief Justice, if there was one; if not, then in the name of any Justice of the Court. The Court had power, from time to time, to amend its practice in cases not provided for by statute, and was directed every seven years to revise its rules, so as to ultimately secure the abolishment of fictitious and unnecessary process and proceedings; the simplifying of pleadings and proceedings; expediting the decisions of causes, diminishing costs and remedying abuses and imperfections in practice.

The Judges were appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They held their offices during good behavior, or until they attained the age of sixty; and were removable by joint resolution of the Legislature, concurred in by two-thirds of the Assembly and a majority of the Senate. They could hold no other office, were exempted from military duty, could receive no fees or perquisites, could not sit in any case in which they were directly or indirectly interested, nor take part in the decision of any case passed on by them in any other court, nor practice as attorneys and counsellors, nor have partners who did, except in cases in which they were interested.

The Judges were reduced to three. From 1823 they were allowed an annual salary of $2,000 each; which sum was increased to $2,500 in 1835, and in 1839 permanently to $3,000. The act of 1835 abolished their compensation for travel and attendance as members of the Court of Errors.

In 1823 the terms of the Court were held the third Mondays of February and October, and first Mondays of May and August; the May term to be in the city of New York, the August term at Utica, and the February and October terms at Albany. The terms continued four weeks, but no process was to be tested or made returnable the last two weeks. Subsequently the terms commenced on the first Mondays of January, May and July, and the third Monday of October; the January and October terms at the Capitol in Albany, the May term at the City Hall in New York, and the July term at the Academy in Utica. These terms were held five weeks; but no argument was to be heard the last week except by consent of parties and counsel, and no process was to be issued, tested or returned after the second Saturday, except subpoenas, attachments and writs of habeas corpus. In 1841 the October term was changed from Albany to Rochester, and one of the Justices was required to sit at the Capitol in Albany to decide such non-enumerated business as should arise, except such as should be directed by rule to be heard in term time.

Clerks' offices were continued at New York, Albany and Utica. In 1829 an additional one was established in Canandaigua, which was removed in 1831 to Geneva, and in 1841 to Rochester. Each Clerk possessed a seal of the Court. The Clerks were appointed by the Justices for three years unless sooner removed, and were directed to appoint deputies. The Justices could order the removal of papers from one office to another at any time.

A Reporter for the Supreme Court and Court of Errors was directed to be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor, Chancellor and Chief Justice, to hold office during their pleasure, who was to be a counsellor-at-law or in Chancery of at least five years standing.

A Court of Exchequer was erected by Gov. DONGAN in 1685, and was composed of the Governor and Council. It had jurisdiction over all matters relating to his Majesty's lands, rents, rights, profits and revenues. The act of 1691 gave the Supreme Court cognizance of matters in exchequer, thus doing away with the necessity for a separate Court of Exchequer. It was reorganized as a branch of the Supreme Court, by an act passed February 9, 1786, for the better levying and accounting for fines, forfeitures, issues, amercements and debts due to the people of the State. The junior Justice of the Supreme Court (or in his absence one other of the Puisne Justices), was constituted the Judge of the Court, which was instituted for determining all causes mentioned in the above title of the act instituting it, in which he was to proceed according to law and the course of the Exchequer. A seal was directed to be made and a Clerk appointed. The seal was adopted July 17, 1786, and is thus described: "Lozengy, argent and Jules, supported on the sinister side by Justice standing on a floor, lozengy, sable and argent; each of the sable checks charged with a star."¹ William Popham was the only Clerk of the Court, holding the office from the date of his appointment, July 17, 1786, until January 1, 1830, when the Court was abolished pursuant to the general repealing act of December 10, 1828.

The Constitution of 1846 abolished the Supreme Court as it then existed, and established a new one, having general jurisdiction in law and equity. It authorized the division of the State into eight judicial districts, which was accomplished, and the several districts defined by an act of the Legislature passed May 8, 1847 (ch. 241), which also provided for the election of thirty-three Justices of the Supreme Court, of which number the first district was entitled to five, and the remaining districts to four each; they were so classified that one in each district should go out of office every two years; the term of office of their successors being fixed at eight years.

The General Terms of the Court in the several districts were to be held by a presiding Justice and two associate Justices, to be designated according to law. Either of the Justices might hold a Special Term of the Court — a Circuit Court — or preside in Courts of Oyer and Terminer in any county of the State. The Justices were to be elected by the electors of the several districts at such times as might be prescribed by law, and were to receive, at stated times, compensation to be fixed by law; they were prohibited from receiving fees, and could hold no other office or public trust. A Justice might be removed from office by concurrent resolution of both houses of the Legislature, provided two-thirds of all of the members elected to the Assembly and a majority of all the members elected to the Senate concurred, after charges had been preferred and the accused given opportunity to be heard in his defense; vacancies in the office were to be filled by the Governor, until the same should be filled at the next general election of Justices. The clerks of the several counties were constituted its clerks and their seals the seal of the Court, and all of its decisions were free for publication by any person.

The "Act in relation to the Judiciary," passed May 12, 1847 (ch. 280), provided for the classification of the Justices of the Supreme Court, by lot; the classes drawn to have respectively two, four, six and eight years to serve, the Justice having the shortest term to serve, who was not a Judge of the Court of Appeals, was designated as presiding Justice of the Supreme Court; which possessed the same powers and jurisdiction as the former Court of Chancery and Supreme Court, and its Justices were clothed with the powers and exercised the jurisdiction of Justices of the former Supreme Court; the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellors and Circuit Judges. The act further provided that there should be General Terms of the Court held in every county of the State having a population exceeding 40,000, at least once in each year, and in the other counties at least once in two years. The Supreme Court was empowered with the appointment of the times and places of holding the General and Special Terms thereof, and the terms of the Circuit Court and Court of Oyer and Terminer, and at least two Special Terms and two Circuit Courts were required to be held yearly in each county, excepting Hamilton. At any General Term, the Court might remove justices of the peace and judges and justices of inferior courts not of record. No Justice of the Supreme Court could practice as an attorney or counselor in any Court of the State, nor have voice in the decision of a cause in which he had been counsel or attorney. The Court, at General Term is authorized to admit persons properly qualified to practice as attorneys, solicitors and counsellors in all courts of the State.

The Supreme Court by an order made July 14, 1847, prescribed the times and places of holding General and Special Terms, and Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer. The provisions of this order were superseded by the Code of Procedure adopted by the Legislature in 1848, and amended and re-enacted in 1849, which required that at least four General Terms should be held annually in each judicial district, at such times and places as the Justices in the several districts should appoint. The act as passed in 1848 specified the number of Special Terms, Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer to be held annually in each county; it was so amended in 1849 that at least two terms of the Circuit Court and Court of Oyer and Terminer were required to be held in each county; for this purpose Fulton and Hamilton were treated as one county.

The Governor was required to designate the times and places of holding the General and Special Terms, and the Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer and the Justices to hold the same until December 31, 1849; and every two years thereafter the Justices in each district were required to make the like designation in their respective districts. The Governor was also empowered to appoint extraordinary General and Special Terms and Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer, whenever in his judgment the public good might require it. By this act the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity, and in the forms of procedure therein, was abolished, it also regulated the time and manner of commencing civil actions, and (in connection with the rules adopted by the Court) the mode of procedure therein. An appeal might be taken to the Supreme Court from a judgment rendered in a County, Mayor's or Recorder's Court, and must be heard at General Term; an appeal might also be taken to the General Term, from an order or decision of a single Justice of Special Term or Circuit or Chambers, and from a judgment rendered in an action commenced in the Supreme Court. The salary of a Supreme Court Justice was $2,500, but by act of April 18, 1857 (ch. 792) the compensation was fixed at $3,500 per annum.

An amended Article VI of the Constitution, called the Judiciary Article, was framed by delegates elected April 23, 1867 (under chapter 194, Laws of 1867), to a Constitutional Convention convened pursuant to section two, article thirteen of the Constitution, by a vote of the people November 6, 1866. The Convention met at Albany, June 4, 1867, and adjourned February 28, 1868. The amended Article VI was submitted to a vote of the people, separately from the remainder of the amended Constitution, pursuant to chapter 318, Laws of 1869, and was ratified November 2, 1869. It continued the then existing Supreme Court, with general jurisdiction in law and equity, composed of the Justices then in office, during the remainder of their official terms, and of their successors. The existing judicial districts, eight in number, were continued until changed pursuant to law. Five of the Justices were required to reside in the first judicial district in which is the city of New York, and four in each of the other districts.¹

It was directed that provision should be made by the Legislature, from time to time, but not oftener than once in five years, for organizing in the Supreme Court not more than four General Terms thereof; each to be composed of a presiding Justice, and not more than three other Justices to be designated according to law, from the whole number of Justices; and provision was also to be made by law for holding the General Terms in each district. Vacancies in the office of Justice to be filled for a full term at the next general election happening not less than three months after the same shall occur, and until so filled, the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, if in session, or if not in session, the Governor alone to appoint to fill such vacancy, which appointment continues in force until and including the last day of December after the election at which the same shall be filled. Justices may be removed by concurrent resolution of both houses of the Legislature provided two-thirds of all the members elected thereto concur therein after charges have been preferred and the accused been given opportunity to be heard thereon.

The Legislature is empowered to provide for detailing Judges of the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas of New York to hold Circuits and Special Terms in that city, as the public interests may require. Justices of the Supreme Court are chosen by the electors of their respective districts for the term of fourteen years; they retire from office upon reaching the age of seventy years, and receive compensation established by law, payable from the State treasury.¹

By an act of April 27, 1870 (ch. 408), the General Terms, as then organized, were abrogated and provision was made for a reorganization thereof. The State was divided into four departments, and the times and places of holding the General Terms therein the first year were fixed. The act² required the Governor, immediately after its passage, and thereafter from time to time as vacancies occurred, to designate from the Justices of the Supreme Court, a presiding Justice and two associate Justices for each department, to compose the General Term therein. The presiding Justice to serve as such during his official term, and the associate Justices for five years; associate Justices may sit in the General Term of any department of the State. The Justices resident in each department designate the times and places for holding Special Terms, Circuit Courts, and Courts of Oyer and Terminer therein.

By the act of June 2, 1876, entitled "The Code of Remedial Justice," as amended June 5, 1877, and entitled "The Code of Civil Procedure," the General Term Justices of the Supreme Court and the Chief Judges of the Superior City Courts are required to meet in convention every two years to establish and revise general rules of practice for all Courts of Record of the State, except the Court for Trial of Impeachments and the Court of Appeals. The Justices in each department designate the times and places of holding General Terms therein.

The Legislature of 1882 directed the submitting to the people the question of amending the Constitution so as to provide for organizing the Supreme Court — not more than five General Terms and for the election of two additional Justices thereof in the first, fifth, seventh and eighth Judicial Districts, and one additional Justice in the second, third, fourth and sixth Judicial Districts, the Justices so elected to be invested with their offices on the first Monday in June, 1884. The amendments were adopted at the election held in November, 1882, and by chapter 329 of the Laws of 1883, the State was divided into five judicial departments, and provision was made for the election of the twelve additional Justices authorized.

A reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court is appointed by a convention of General Term Justices, his term of office being five years and until his successor is appointed and qualified; he is required to report and publish such of the decisions of the General or Special Terms as he deems for the public interest to have reported; not more than three volumes of his reports are to be published in any year, and he must cause them to be kept on sale, to persons in this State, at not exceeding $2.50 per volume of not less than 700 pages. He is not entitled to other salary.

CIRCUIT COURTS AND COURTS OF OYER AND TERMINER.

By the Duke's Laws it was provided that upon information of any Court of Sessions to the Governor and Council, of any capital offender, a commission of Oyer and Terminer should issue for the more speedy trial of such person, unless the Court of Assizes was to sit within two months. Several Courts were held under this provision. In 1683 an act was passed "to settle courts of justice" which directed a Court of Oyer and Terminer to be held in the respective counties of the province, composed of one judge, assisted by four justices of the peace of each county named in the commission. In the city of New York, the mayor, recorder, and four aldermen were associated with the judge. This court had jurisdiction over all capital, criminal or civil causes, trials at common law, and actions of £5 or upwards removed thither. It held a general appellate jurisdiction over the other courts of the colony, subject to an appeal to the king. The authority for holding the court was derived from a commission issued by the Governor, and directed to the judges named in the commission. It was abolished 6th May, 1691, but the name was retained in the Supreme Court to designate its criminal circuit.

By an act passed April 19, 1786, one or more of the Justices of the Supreme Court were required to hold during the vacations, and oftener if necessary, Circuit Courts in each of the counties of the State, for the trial of all issues triable in the respective counties. The proceedings were to be returned to the Supreme Court, where they were to be recorded and judgment given according to law. The Justices were likewise empowered to take Assizes of Novel Disseizin, or any other assizes, in their discretion, at the Circuit. In 1789 the Legislature enacted that all issues triable by a jury might be tried either at the Circuit or at the bar of the Supreme Court, without any order for the purpose. In 1797 an order was rendered necessary for such trials. On the 12th of February, 1796, the office of Clerk of the Circuit was abolished, and the duties devolved on the County Clerks. On the 10th of February, 1797, the Legislature passed a law directing the Court to designate, at its April term, one of their number to hold Circuit Courts in the western, one in the eastern, one in the middle, and one in the southern district.

An act passed February 22, 1788, provided for the holding of Courts of Oyer and Terminer by the Justice, at the same time with the Circuit, to continue until all business before it was disposed of. Two or more of the Judges and Assistant Judges of the Court of Common Pleas were to sit in the Oyer and Terminer with the Justices. In the city of Albany there were associated with them the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen. In the city of New York, the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen, two or more of them, alone sat on the Bench with the Justices. These local magistrates could not sit on the Oyer and Terminer in any but their own counties. The Court had power to direct its process into any city or county. The Governor had power to issue commissions of Oyer and Terminer whenever he deemed it advisable, always naming the Justice of the Supreme Court in the commission, with such others as the Governor and Council of Appointment might deem proper. Once in each year the records and processes were to be sent to the Exchequer to remain of record. On the 12th of February, 1796, the office of Clerk of the Oyer and Terminer was abolished, and its duties vested in the County Clerks. Seven Assistant Attorney-Generals for as many districts were also directed to be appointed.

The Constitution of 1821 (art. 5, sec. 5), provided that the State should be divided, by law, into convenient number of Circuits, not less than four nor exceeding eight, subject to alteration by the Legislature, from time to time, as the public good might require; for each of which a Circuit Judge should be appointed, in the same manner, and hold his office by the same tenure, as the Justices of the Supreme Court; and who should possess the powers of a Justice of the Supreme Court at Chambers and in the trial of issues joined in the Supreme Court; and in Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and Jail Delivery. It also provided that such equity powers might be vested in the said Circuit Judges, or in the County Courts, or in such other subordinate Courts as the Legislature might by law direct, subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the Chancellor. In pursuance of these provisions an act was passed April 17, 1823, dividing the State into eight Circuits, corresponding with the eight Senate districts. No changes were made in these districts during the continuance of the Court. Two Circuit Courts at least were held each year in every county of the State separately organized, except in the county of New York, in which the Court was held four times. Each Judge appointed the times and places for holding the Courts within his Circuit, for the period of two years, and the length of time they should be held. The County Clerks were the Clerks of the Court, except in the county of New York, where the Clerk of the Supreme Court was Clerk. Each of the Circuit Judges was to appoint a Clerk of the Court of Equity to be held by him, who was to perform all the duties of a Register of said Court. He was to have a seal, to be used in all equity proceedings. This Seal was filed May 24, 1823, and is described as follows: "In the centre an open scroll, surrounded by rays; the word EQUITY inscribed on the upper part of the scroll, and a sword and olive branch crossed upon the lower edge, surrounded with the legend, STATE OF NEW YORK. CIRCUIT COURTS." See Plate O, No. 5.

The Circuit Judge also held a Court of Oyer and Terminer, at the same time and place with the Circuit, or otherwise if they so appointed. In the counties, at least two of the Judges of the county were associated with them. In the city of New York, the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen, or any two of them, sat with the presiding Justice, who might also be the first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. In Albany, Columbia and Rensselaer counties, the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen, or any two of them, and in Schenectady the Mayor and Aldermen, might sit on the bench instead of the County Judges. The Governor was empowered to issue special commissions of Oyer and Terminer, addressed to a Supreme Court or a Circuit Judge, if in his opinion necessary. The Court had power, by a grand jury of the county, to inquire into all crimes and misdemeanors within the county, to try all indictments found by the grand jury and at the Court of General Sessions of the Peace which had come into the Oyer and Terminer, and to deliver the jails of the county, according to law, of all prisoners therein. All indictments found by the Grand Jury for offenses triable at the Court of General Sessions could be sent to the Oyer and Terminer for trial. The court possessed a seal. It could send its writs into any other county of the State. Uniform rules and regulations were to be established for conducting business in each Court.

Any Judge of the Supreme Court could hold a Circuit Court or preside at the Oyer and Terminer. In the counties of New York; Albany and Oneida, a Justice of the Supreme Court was directed to hold such Courts once in each year. The Judges were appointed by the Governor and Senate.*

* Since the adoption of the Constitution of 1846, Circuit Courts in each county have been held by a Justice of the Supreme Court; any Justice may hold a Circuit Court in either of the counties of the State, such Court is a Court of Record, and the clerk of the county is its clerk and his seal the seal of the Court. The Court has general jurisdiction in civil actions. The Court of Oyer and Terminer is a Court of Record in each county. By an act passed June 21, 1882 (ch. 360), this Court is to be held by a Justice of the Supreme Court without associates. It has general jurisdiction in criminal actions, and such as is conferred upon it by special statutes, and except in New York, the clerk of the county is its clerk.

ADMINISTRATION OF ESTATES.

ORPHAN COURT.

In virtue of the prerogative, the Director-General and Council of New Netherland were guardians of widows and orphans. It was the duty, at first, of the deacons of the church to attend more immediately to these interests, and to notify the Director of the decease of any members of the Commonalty. In New Amsterdam the Burgomasters became ex officio Orphan Masters in 1653, but as they were burdened with many other duties, they were relieved of the latter office at their own request, and special Orphan Masters appointed. The number of these at first was two, but they were increased to three in 1658. Their duties were similar to those of Surrogate. Fort Orange had a separate court.

PREROGATIVE COURT.

This Court, under the Colony, concerned itself only in the probate of wills and in matters relating to the administration of the estates of intestates, and granting licenses of marriage. The authority to grant probates of wills was vested by the Duke's laws in the Court of Assizes and the Courts of Sessions, the Mayor's Court also exercising like jurisdiction. Where the estate exceeded £100, the wills and other instruments of administration were recorded with the Provincial Secretary in the city of New York; otherwise, with the Clerk of the Court of Sessions. The seal of the Court is shown on Plate P, No. 1.

Granting probates, being a part of the royal prerogative, was subsequently reserved, by the royal instructions, to the Governor or person administering the government. In accordance with this principle, the Legislature passed a law, November 11, 1692, directing that all probates and letters of administration be thenceforth granted by the Governor or his delegate, under the seal of the prerogative office, and that two freeholders should be elected or appointed in each town, to have charge of the estates of intestates, which duty, under the Duke's laws, had been performed by the constable, overseers and justices. All wills relating to estates in New York, Orange, Richmond, Westchester and Kings counties, were to be proved at New York; in more remote counties, the Court of Common Pleas was authorized to take the proof and transmit the papers to the record office for probate. In 1750 the provision was extended to Orange, and subsequently to the more remote northern counties. Surrogates, with limited powers, were appointed in other counties at an earlier date, as will be seen by the list elsewhere published.

COURT OF PROBATES.

In 1778, the Legislature passed an act¹ divesting the Governor of the powers he possessed under the Colonial period in the Prerogative and Probate Courts, and transferring them to the Judge of the Court of Probates, except in the appointment of Surrogates. In 1787, Surrogates in each county were empowered to be appointed, the Judge of the Court of Probates holding jurisdiction in cases of decease out of the State, or of non-residents within the State. An act was passed March 10, 1797, providing that the Court should be held in Albany, and that the Judge and Clerk should remove the papers and documents of the Court to that city, and reside there. The Court held appellate jurisdiction over the Surrogates' Courts. It was abolished on the 21st of March, 1823, its records deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals at Albany, and its jurisdiction conferred on the Chancellor. We give a representation of the Seal of the Court on Plate P, No. 4.

SURROGATES.²

Surrogates under the First Constitution were appointed for an unlimited period by the Council of Appointment, and an appeal lay from their decisions to the Judge of the Court of Probates of the State. Under the Second Constitution they were appointed by the Governor and Senate for four years, and appeals lay from their decisions to the Chancellor.

The Constitution of 1846 abolished the office of Surrogate except in counties where the population exceeds 40,000, and devolved its duties on the County Judge. In counties exceeding in population 40,000, the Legislature may authorize the election of Surrogates. They are elected for a term of six years, and are allowed to take the acknowledgment of deeds and administer oaths in the same manner as County Judges.³

² For names of Surrogates, see Civil Divisions.

³ Laws 1851, ch. 175.

The Constitution authorizes the Legislature to provide for the election of a county officer to perform the duties of Surrogate in case of his inability, or of a vacancy, and to exercise such other powers in special cases as might be provided by law. This has been done in several counties, by special acts passed on application of the respective Boards of Supervisors. The Surrogates' Court, in each county, is a court of record, having a seal.

COUNTY COURTS.

A Court of Sessions was held in each of the three ridings of Yorkshire,¹ by the resident justices of the peace, three times a year, viz.: in the first, second and third weeks of the month of March, June and December. It heard matters in equity, and acted as a Court of Probate. The mode of procedure was by bill and answer, and the court exercised jurisdiction in actions from £5 to £20. Appeals lay to the Assizes. Actions of assault and battery, breach of the peace, and such like, were triable before this court, but it could not take cognizance of any cause or crime for which provision was not made in some law, but was obliged to remit such causes or crimes, with the evidence, to the Court of Assizes, for final disposition, according "to the known laws of England." All actions were tried before a jury of seven men, taken from the overseers of the different towns within the riding. In capital cases the jury consisted of twelve.

In 1683 an act was passed directing that a Court of Sessions be held by three justices of the peace, in each of the twelve counties of the province, as follows: In New York four times, in Albany three times, and in the remainder of the counties twice each year. The Governor and Council were authorized to designate the times for holding the courts in Duke's and Cornwall counties. In the city of New York the court was held by the mayor and four aldermen. It determined all causes, civil and criminal, by a jury, but actions exceeding £5 could be removed, on application, to the Court of Oyer and Terminer. It had a marshal, or erier, and a clerk.

By the act of 1691, and ordinance of 1699, the functions of this court were confined to criminal matters; civil cases were transferred to the Court of Common Pleas. Upon the adoption of the Constitution of 1846, a County Court was organized in each county of the State, excepting New York, and provision was made for the election of one County Judge' in each county to hold the same, who shall have such jurisdiction in cases arising in Justices' Courts, and in special cases, as the Legislature may prescribe; but shall have no original civil jurisdiction, except in such special cases. The Legislature may confer upon him equity jurisdiction in special cases. In pursuance of these provisions, the Legislature has given the County Judge jurisdiction in actions of debt, assumpsit and covenant, in sums not exceeding $2,000; in cases of trespass and personal injury, not to exceed $500, and in replevin suits, $1,000. The Legislature has also conferred upon the County Court equity jurisdiction for the foreclosure of mortgages; the sale of the real estate of infants; partition of lands; admeasurement of dower, satisfaction of judgments whenever $75 is due on an unsatisfied execution, and the care and custody of lunatics and habitual drunkards. The new judiciary article continued the County Courts with the powers and jurisdiction they then possessed, subject to the action of the Legislature. They were also given original jurisdiction in all cases where the defendants reside in the county, and in which the damages claimed shall not exceed $1,000. The Legislature may confer additional original and appellate jurisdiction. The tenure of office of the County Judge was extended from four to six years, upon the election of the successors of present incumbents.

The Constitution associates with the County Judge, two Justices of the Peace, to be designated by law, to hold Courts of Sessions, with such criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature shall prescribe, and perform such other duties as may be required by law.

The Constitution authorizes the Legislature to provide for the election of a county officer to perform the duties of County Judge in case of his inability to act, or of a vacancy, and to exercise such other powers in special cases as may be provided by law. This has been done in several counties, by special acts passed upon the application of the respective Boards of Supervisors. The times of holding the County Court and Court of Sessions in each county are fixed by the County Judge, and he may also, in certain cases, make orders in causes pending in the Supreme Court and exercise the powers of a Supreme Court Justice at Chambers. The Clerk of the County is also clerk of these courts, except of the Court of Sessions in the counties of New York and Kings.

¹ The list of First Judges and County Judges will be found under the department of Civil Divisions.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

This Court was established in New York¹ and Albany, by the charters of 1686. A Court of Common Pleas was erected for each county by the act of 1691. At first it was composed of one judge, with the three justices, but in 1702 it was ordered that the judge be assisted by two or more justices in holding the court, all of whom were appointed by the Governor, and held office during his pleasure. It had cognizance of all actions, real, personal and mixed, where the matter in demand exceeded the sum of £5 in value. Its practice assimilated both to the King's Bench and Common Pleas at Westminster. Its errors were corrected in the first instance by writs of error brought in the Supreme Court. Appeals were allowed to the Supreme Court for any judgment where the amount involved exceeded the sum of £20. The court was also authorized, in the more remote counties, to take the proof of wills and transmit the proceedings to the record office in the city of New York. The clerks were appointed by the Governor—except the clerk at Albany, who, in some instances, was appointed by the King—and held their offices either for life, or during the pleasure of the appointing power.

The Court of Common Pleas was continued from the Colonial period. For most of the time under the First Constitution, the number of Judges and Assistant Justices in the various counties differed widely, in some counties the number being as great as twelve of each. By an act passed March 27, 1818, the office of Assistant Justice was abolished, and the number of Judges was limited to five, including the First Judge. The Court was continued without material change by the Constitution of 1821. The Judges were appointed by the Governor and Senate for a period of five years. The seals of the several County Clerks were the seals of the Court. This Court, except in the city and county of New York, ceased to exist, upon the adoption of the Constitution of 1846.

¹ The Court of Common Pleas for the city and county of New York is the oldest judicial tribunal in this State (Daly's History of New York, C. P., 1 E. D. Smith's reports, xvii). Under Dongan's charter, in 1686, the former Mayor's Court was called a Court of Common Pleas, and its civil and criminal jurisdiction defined (id., xlviii); but it was still known as the "Mayor's Court," as it was called under the Dutch. After the year 1688, the criminal branch of it was called the "Court of Sessions."

The ordinance by the Governor and Council, made May 15, 1699, establishing this court, may be found in the Revised Laws of 1813, vol. 2, p. 10, App.

The "Mayor's Court" was presided over by the Mayor and Recorder alternately. While Martin Livingston was Recorder, Mayor Clinton ceased to preside in the Mayor's Court, and from that time until 1821, the Recorder sat as presiding judge in the latter court. In 1821, an act was passed (chap. 72) changing its name of the "Mayor's Court," to the Court of Common Pleas for the city and county of New York, and the office of First Judge was created. The Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen were still authorized to sit in it as formerly, but the First Judge was empowered to hold the court without them, and it was his special duty to hold it.

Previous to the act of 1854 (chap. 198) the County Clerk was ex-officio Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas. Under that law of 1854, Benj. H. Jarvis was appointed Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, which position he held until his death in September, 1858, when Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., was appointed.

CITY COURTS.

The City Courts were composed of the mayor and aldermen during the Colonial period and for a long time thereafter. They occasionally had jurisdiction in matters pertaining to courts of probate and surrogates' courts. In the time of Andros, in 1678, admiralty cases were tried in the Mayor's Court of New York, by special commission. The act of 1683 provided that, in the city of New York, the court should be composed of a mayor, and four aldermen, and be held four times a year. In 1686 Albany was incorporated, and the court was to be held three times a year. The mayor, recorder and four aldermen were also associated with the judge in holding the courts of Oyer and Terminer. The act of 1691 affirmed the powers of these courts, and provided for appeals to the Supreme Court for any judgment above the value of £20. Their powers were the same as those of the Common Pleas and Sessions. City Courts are now variously constituted.

SUPERIOR CITY COURTS.

The amended Judiciary article of the Constitution (art. vi, § 12) provides: "The Superior Court of the city of New York, the Court of Common Pleas for the city and county of New York, the Superior Court of Buffalo and the City Court of Brooklyn are continued, with the powers and jurisdiction they now severally have, and such further civil and criminal jurisdiction as may be conferred by law." These courts were reorganized in pursuance of this article, under various legislative enactments; and, by the Laws of 1873 (ch. 293) were termed "Superior City Courts," and were vested with original jurisdiction, at law, and in equity, concurrent and co-extensive with the Supreme Court, of all civil actions, and of all special proceedings of a civil nature. Appeals are taken direct from these courts to the Court of Appeals.

The Court of Common Pleas of the city and county of New York is the oldest judicial tribunal in this State (see page 306). It was continued under the Constitution of 1846. The three judges in office when the amended Judiciary article was adopted were continued, and the election of three additional judges was directed.

The Superior Court of the city of New York was established by an act passed March 31, 1828. It was the principal commercial court. Equity jurisdiction was conferred upon it by the Judiciary act of 1847. Three justices were added in 1849 (Laws 1849, ch. 124), law and equity jurisdiction given, and cases were transferred to it from the Supreme Court.

A Recorder's Court was created for the city of Buffalo by an act of the Legislature passed in 1839. The appointment of the Recorder was vested in the Governor. The office was made elective by the people, by the Constitution of 1846. The court was reorganized in 1854, and merged into the present Superior Court, with three judges, whose terms were fixed at six years, and subsequently changed to fourteen years. The Recorder served as a judge for the remainder of his term (two years). The Court was one of criminal jurisdiction the same as the Supreme Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The City Court of Brooklyn was established by chap. 125 of the Laws of 1849. Prior to the first Monday of July, 1870, the Court consisted of one judge, elected for six years from May 1 succeeding his election, known as "City Judge;" since that date it has consisted of three judges, who are known as Judges of the City Court of Brooklyn, and are elected for the term of fourteen years from the 1st day of January succeeding their election.

The Constitution requires that the Judges of each Court shall appoint a Chief Judge from among their own number.

Other city courts are the Recorder's Courts of Utica and Oswego, the Mayor's Court of Hudson and the City Court of Albany and the City Court of Yonkers.

TOWN AND JUSTICES' COURTS.

During the Colonial period the Constable, with five, at least, of the Overseers of the towns, held a Town Court. They had power to make necessary orders or by-laws "for the welfair and improvement of their Towne, provided they be not of a criminal nature, nor repugnant to the Duke's Laws, nor impose a penalty higher than 20s. for one offense." Such by-laws were, however, subject to the confirmation of the Court of Assizes. In civil suits they had jurisdiction to the amount of £5; over that sum, an appeal lay to the Court of Sessions. In 1683 the organization of this Court was modified. It was to be held by three commissioners on the first Wednesday in each month, in each town, and was empowered to determine causes for debt and trespass, of forty shillings and under, without a jury, unless such were demanded by the plaintiff or defendant. By the law of 1691 and the ordinance of 1699, every Justice of the Peace, resident within any town or county, assisted by one of the freeholders of the town where the cause of action originated, was vested with power to decide such small causes, except one of the parties desired a jury. By subsequent acts three justices (one of whom was to be of the Quorum) were empowered to try, without a jury, any offender who did not find bail within twenty-four hours after being in custody, for any offense under the degree of grand larceny, and to inflict any punishment, so that it did not extend to life or limb. Such three justices, with five freeholders, also had power, without previous indictment by the grand jury, summarily to try slaves charged with capital felonies, and to punish them even with death. Justices of the Peace were appointed until the adoption of the Constitution of 1846, by which the office was made elective and their number regulated by law.

In addition to the Courts of Record in this State, the following are enumerated in the Code of Civil Procedure, as Courts not of record, having such jurisdiction as is specially conferred upon them by statute:

1. Courts of Justices of the Peace in each town, and in certain cities and villages:

2. Courts of Special Sessions of the peace in each town and in certain cities and villages, except in certain cases where special provision is made by law, they must be held by one Justice of the Peace of the town or city in which they are held, and a recorder of a city has power to hold a Court of Special Sessions therein.

3. The Districts Courts in the city of New York, held by the District Judges and having generally the same civil jurisdiction as Courts of Justices of the Peace.

4. Police Courts in cities and villages.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Legislative function of government, as defined and limited by the Constitution of the State, is the growth of our own soil, the same as the Judicial function. The Constitution of the colony recognized three branches to the Legislature, only one of which owed its origin to the will of the people, while the other two existed by grace of the sovereign. The conflicts of the Colony were the same as the contemporaneous conflicts of the mother country; they were struggles between Royal power and Parliamentary authority. The first Constitution of the State was based on the principle of parliamentary supremacy. Gradually, however, the People exercised their sovereignty more and more directly, until now the powers of the Legislature are restricted by the Constitution. The history of the aggressions upon royal power has been traced in detail. The parliamentary principle was not fully applied, as in England; for the reason that the Chief Executive and the upper branch of the Legislature, being chosen by the people, could be safely intrusted with their legitimate rights. The Governor, however, was at first deprived of the power over the enactment of laws which he held under the Colony; but this power was subsequently restored to him in a modified form. Neither Executive nor Legislative supremacy is now conceded; for the organic law as directly established by the people, through approval of the constitutional recommendations of their representatives, restrains both.

The Legislative branch of the State Government has always consisted of a Senate and Assembly. Bills may originate in either House, but must be passed by both in order to become laws. In case bills are returned with objections, two-thirds of all the members present (if a quorum) passed the bill notwithstanding the objections, until the adoption of the amendments to the Constitution in 1874. Two-thirds of all elected are now necessary to override a veto. Each house makes its own rules and judges the qualifications of its own members. Their sessions are open and journals published.

Soon after the organization of the Government, the Assembly asserted the right (which had belonged to the Colonial Assembly) of originating all bills containing appropriations of the public moneys. The Senate, on the 26th of October, 1778, asserted its co-ordinate right in that respect. This was met by the Assembly, on the 4th of November, passing a formal resolution asserting its sole right to the privilege. The discussion was not continued. Usage has established the right of the Assembly to originate money bills; the Senate freely exercising its right to amend, modify or reject, as it may deem proper, which the Council could not do.

The two houses, jointly, from 1777 to 1789, appointed Delegates to Congress; since 1787, Regents of the University; since 1789, Senators in Congress; from 1816 to 1844, Canal Commissioners, and under the Constitution of 1821, the Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, and Commissary-General; since 1854, the Superintendent of Public Instruction. By an act passed May 6, 1844, it was provided that Canal Commissioners¹ should be elected by the people. This Constitution provided for a decennial census from which the apportionment of Senators and Assemblymen should be from time to time equalized.

Under the existing Constitution, any elector of the State, receiving a plurality of all the votes cast in any legislative district of the State, at a regular election for members of the Legislature, may become a member of the branch to which he is thus elected. But "no person shall be eligible to the Legislature who at the time of his election is, or within one hundred days previous thereto, has been a member of Congress, a civil or military officer under the United States, or an officer under any city government; and if any person shall after his election as a member of the Legislature be elected to Congress, or appointed to any office, civil or military, under the government of the United States, or under any city government, his acceptance thereof shall vacate his seat." Nor can any member of the Legislature receive any "civil appointment within the State or the Senate of the United States, from the Governor, the Governor and Senate, or from the Legislature or from any city government during the time for which he shall have been elected; and all such appointments and all votes given for any such member for any such office or appointment shall be void."

Each member of the Legislature receives for his services an annual salary of $1,500, and one dollar for every ten miles of travel, in going to and returning from the place of meeting, once in each session, on the most usual route. Senators, when the Senate alone is convened in extraordinary session, or when serving as members of the Court for the Trial of Impeachments, receive an additional allowance of ten dollars a day; and the same compensation is paid the managers on the part of the Assembly, not exceeding nine in number.

The Lieutenant-Governor is President of the Senate, and it is customary for that body likewise to elect a President pro tem. A Speaker is elected by the Assembly, at the commencement of each annual session, on the first Tuesday in January in each year. It likewise elects a Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Doorkeeper, etc., and has several minor officers.

The Legislature is prohibited from passing a private or local bill in any of the following cases: Changing the names of persons. Laying out, opening, altering, working or discontinuing roads, highways or alleys, or for draining swamps or other low lands. Locating or changing county seats. Providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases. Incorporating villages. Providing for election of members of boards of supervisors. Selecting, drawing, summoning or impaneling grand or petit jurors. Regulating the rate of interest on money. The opening and conducting of elections or designating places of voting. Creating, increasing or decreasing fees, percentage or allowances of public officers, during the term for which said officers are elected or appointed. Granting to any corporation, association or individual, the right to lay down railroad tracks. Granting to any private corporation, association or individual any exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise whatever. Providing for building bridges and chartering companies for such purposes, except on the Hudson river below Waterford, and on the East river or over the waters forming a part of the boundaries of the State. In these cases the Legislature is required to pass general laws, and also in all cases where in its judgment general laws can be rendered applicable. But no law shall authorize the construction or operation of a street railroad except upon the condition that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on, and the consent also of the local authorities having the control of that portion of a street or highway upon which it is proposed to construct or operate such railroad be first obtained; or in case the consent of such property owners cannot be obtained, the general term of the Supreme Court, in the district in which it is proposed to be constructed, may, upon application, appoint three commissioners who shall determine, after a hearing of all parties interested, whether such railroad ought to be constructed or operated, and their determination, confirmed by the court, may be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners. But these provisions do not apply to bills reported by the Commission to revise the statutes. The Legislature is prohibited from granting extra compensation to any public officer, servant, agent or contractor and so also are the Common Councils of cities and the Boards of Supervisors of counties. And the Legislature can neither audit nor allow any private claim or account against the State, but may appropriate moneys to pay such claims as shall have been audited and allowed according to law. Every law which imposes, continues or revives a tax shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied, and it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object. Charters of savings banks must be regulated by general law. Neither the credit nor the money of the State shall be given or loaned to or in aid of any association, corporation or private undertaking. This, however, does not prevent the Legislature from making such provisions for the education and support of the blind, the deaf and dumb, and juvenile delinquents, as to it may seem proper. Nor does it apply to any fund or property held by the State for educational purposes.¹ "No bill shall become a law after the final adjournment of the Legislature, unless approved by the Governor within thirty days after such adjournment."²

Each branch of the Legislature judges of the qualifications of its own members, and makes its own rules for their government. Their sessions are open, except when the public welfare requires secrecy, and their journals are published.

The Clerks of the Senate and of the Assembly were required under an act passed April 14, 1859, to provide a Seal for each house, for authenticating copies of legislative papers. They both represent the crest of the State arms, with the legends, STATE OF NEW YORK, CLERK OF THE SENATE, and STATE OF NEW YORK, CLERK OF THE ASSEMBLY, respectively, around the margin. The Assembly Seal had rays surrounding the design, while that of the Senate had none. These seals were superseded January 1, 1883, by the Arms of the State as described in chapter 190, Laws of 1882, surrounded by the inscriptions, "State of New York — Clerk of the Senate," and "State of New York — Clerk of Assembly," respectively.

THE COUNCILS.

The Council of the Director-General of the Province of New Netherland acted as an Executive Council and a Supreme Court, with admiralty and appellate jurisdiction. Appeals lay to them from decisions of local or inferior courts. The members could not be sued before, and were not amenable to, such inferior courts. Their independence of the Governor was, however, very trifling; they may be said, indeed, to have held their office purely at his pleasure, as in one instance he caused a file of soldiers to eject summarily the Vice-Director, or Deputy-Governor, from the council chamber, for opposition to his will, and, on a different occasion, it is alleged, that he caned another member of the Board. In extraordinary circumstances, it was the custom to adjoin some of the colonists or public servants, to the Board, and the captains of the West India Company's ships, when on shore, had a voice in the Council. The Schout-fiscal had a seat, but no vote in the Board, and when he acted as prosecuting officer, he retired from the Bench.

The Council of the Governor of the Colony of New York does not seem to have been, at first, limited to any determinate number. On the appointment of Major Andros to the government, in 1674, he was authorized to choose such a number as he should find convenient, and it consisted, in his time, of ten members. In 1683, Governor Dongan was also empowered to name his Council, which was also limited to ten, and in 1686 reduced to seven members. Afterward, in 1691, the number was increased to twelve, and so remained fixed whilst the English possessed the country, though by death and other casualties it sometimes fell short of that number. All the members very rarely attended the sittings of the Council, many residing at a distance. They were named in the Governor's instructions, but vacancies were filled, from time to time, either by the Governor, or by royal mandamus. Any member residing in the Province, absenting himself therefrom and continuing absent from the Province above twelve months together, without leave, or remaining absent two years successively without leave, forfeited his commission, and such as did not attend the sittings of the Council when summoned were liable to suspension. The quorum was fixed, in 1691, at five; afterward reduced to three; but in 1697 it was re-established at five, and so continued, although in some exceptional cases three formed a quorum in the Legislative Council, and two members could adjourn the session.

In 1691 the constitution of the Council was organized as it continued throughout the colonial period. Their privileges and powers were laid down in the royal instructions to the Governor. Their functions were threefold: 1. In an Executive capacity, they acted as a Privy Council to the head of the Government in civil matters, who was generally present when the Executive Council was in session. They were consulted in the grant of all patents, which could not pass the seal without their advice; they had also a voice in the appointment to most of the civil offices in the colony. 2. They formed, with the Governor, a Court for the Correction of Errors and of Appeals, and sat, ordinarily, in the fort at New York. 3. They constituted the second branch of the Legislature, co-ordinate with the Senate of the present day. Previous to 1736, the Governor presided also in the Council when it acted in a Legislative capacity, and, in case of a tie, gave the casting vote as presiding officer. This was pronounced unconstitutional in Governor Cosby's time, and thenceforward the Legislative Council met without the Governor, and held its sessions in the city hall. The members ranked according to the date of their commissions. At first the Chief Justice presided, but his duties at the Supreme Court requiring his attendance, it was resolved that the senior councillor present should be President. In committee, the chairman had no voice. When acting as Legislative Councillors, their proceedings were very formal, and in many respects they imitated the House of Lords. Each member had the privilege of entering his dissent, and the reason at large on the minutes, but could not vote by proxy. The messages from the Council to the Assembly were conveyed by one of their own members, at whose entrance the House rose and received the message standing. Their sessions were with closed doors. The minutes of the Legislative Council were printed for the first time in 1861, by order of the State Senate.

A Councillor's title was "The Honorable." His name was inserted in all the commissions of the Peace as of the Quorum, whereby he was empowered to act as Justice of the Peace in any county within the Province. He held his office during pleasure, and served without salary. His position, nevertheless, was such, that he was enabled to secure for himself, his family and friends, large grants of land, which indemnified him for whatever time and labor he otherwise lost. The Surveyors-General of the Customs sat and voted as "extraordinary Councillors" within their District, during the time of their residence within such district.

COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

This body was appointed on the 3d May, 1777, after the formation of the State Constitution, as a temporary form of government, until a Governor should be elected and the Legislature meet. It consisted of fifteen members, and sat from the 14th May to the 10th of September, 1777.

On the adjournment of the Legislature in October, a second Council of Safety was appointed, which held its sessions first at Kingston; moved thence to Hurley and finally removed to Poughkeepsie. This Council consisted of thirteen persons; but every member of the Senate and Assembly, and the Delegates of the State in Congress, were ex officio members, and entitled to a vote. It continued in session from the 8th of October, 1777, to the 7th of January, 1778, and was superseded by the Legislative Convention which met in the interval between that date and the assembling of the Legislature.

COUNCIL OF REVISION.

The original section of the Constitution creating the Council of Revision (Sec. 3), was introduced into the Convention on the 1st of April, 1777, by Robert R. Livingston (afterward Chancellor of the State), and the original draft is in his handwriting. After stating that "laws inconsistent with the spirit of this Constitution, or with the public good, may be hastily and unadvisedly passed," it ordained "that the Governor, for the time being, the Chancellor and the Judges of the Supreme Court, or any two of them, together with the Governor, shall be, and hereby are, constituted a Council to revise all bills about to be passed into Laws by the Legislature. And for that purpose shall assemble themselves, from time to time, when the Legislature shall be convened. And that all bills which have passed the Senate and Assembly shall, before they become laws, be presented to the said Council for their revisal and consideration; and if upon such revision and consideration, it should appear improper to the said Council, or a majority of them, that the said bill should become a law of this State, that they return the same, together with their objections thereto in writing, to the Senate or House of Assembly, in whichever the same shall have originated, who shall enter the objections sent down by the Council, at large, in their minutes, and proceed to reconsider the said bill." Upon such reconsideration being had, the bill shall become a law "if approved by two-thirds of the members present." In order to prevent any unnecessary delays, it further ordained, "that if any bill shall not be returned by the Council within ten days after it shall have been presented, the same shall be a law, unless the Legislature shall, by their adjournment, render a return of the said bill within ten days impracticable; in which case, the bill shall be returned on the first day of the meeting of the Legislature, after the expiration of the said ten days."

The Council had a Clerk, and sat with closed doors. Its members were not to be allowed any compensation, under any pretense whatever. During its existence it returned one hundred and sixty-nine bills to the Legislature, with its objections, fifty-one of which became laws notwithstanding. The Council was abolished by the Constitution of 1821. Its minutes comprise five volumes, and are deposited in the office of the Secretary of State. They have never been printed; but a history of the Council, its Members and its Vetoes, edited by ALFRED B. STREET, formerly State Librarian, has been published.

COUNCIL OF APPOINTMENT.

The Executive Council of the Colonial period was succeeded under the first State Constitution, by a Council of Appointment, which was composed of one Senator from each district, openly nominated and appointed each year by the Assembly, no Senator being eligible two years successively. At first, difficulties occurred, in a few instances, in settling upon the term of office, but it was finally determined that members held their office for a full year from the date of their appointment, without regard to their senatorial term. In 1781, Gov. Clinton protested against the admission of Parks, appointed in place of Paine expelled, on the ground that under the Constitution nominations could only be made "once in a year." This position was overruled, and Parks admitted to the seat. The Governor was the presiding officer of the Council, and had a casting vote. Until 1801, he alone exercised the power of originating nominations, but the Constitutional Convention, which assembled that year, gave a concurrent power of nomination to the several members of the Council.

SENATE.

The Lieutenant-Governor is, ex officio, presiding officer of the Senate. He cannot participate in debates, nor vote, except in cases of a tie. In his absence the Senate elects one of its own members to act as President, pro tem., and while so acting he has the right to vote. Under the first Constitution the Senate consisted of twenty-four members, apportioned among four great districts. After the first election they were divided by lot into four classes, so that the terms of six should expire each year. An additional Senator was to be added to each district whenever, by a septennial census, it was shown that the number of electors in the district had increased one twenty-fourth. This increase was to be allowed until the number reached 100. The census of 1795 made the number forty-three. In 1801, the rule being found unequal in its operation, the Constitution was amended so as to fix the number permanently at thirty-two, which has ever since been retained.

The principal change made by the Constitution of 1821, in the legislative branch of the government, was the election of State officers by joint ballot, and the conferring of the appointing power upon the Governor and Senate. The following officers were thus appointed, besides several local and minor officers:¹ Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, Judges of County Courts, Surrogates, Masters and Examiners in Chancery, Notaries Public, Supreme Court Commissioners, Loan Commissioners, Inspectors and Measurers for commercial purposes, Recorders and Marshals of cities, Commissioners of Deeds in this State, Superintendent of Salt Springs, Harbor Masters, Port Wardens and Pilots, Directors in certain Banks, Inspectors and Clerks of Prisons, Indian agents, etc., Inspectors of turnpikes, Canal Appraisers, Major-Generals, Brigade Inspectors and Chiefs of the Staff departments, except Adjutant-General (appointed by the Governor) and Commissary-General. At the time of the adoption of the new Constitution, 2,238 officers were thus appointed.

The power of appointment by the Governor and Senate is limited to Superintendent of Public Works, Superintendent of Prisons, Superintendents of the Bank and Insurance Departments, Railroad Commissioners, Capitol Commissioner, Commissioners of Claims, Civil Service Commissioners, Commissioner in Lunacy, Commissioner of Statistics of Labor, Members of Board of State Charities, State Assessors, Trustees of Asylums for Idiots and Insane, Port Wardens and Harbor Masters of New York, Health Officer and Captain of the Port of New York, Commissioners of Emigration, and other civil officers, Majors-General and Commissary-General.

When deliberating upon appointments to office, the Senate is said to be in executive session, and they usually on such occasions sit with closed doors; their votes and debates are not preserved, and their proceedings are recorded separately in volumes kept by their clerk. Executive sessions of the Senate have been repeatedly convened at times when the Legislature was not in session, and when important offices were to be filled.

The State was divided into eight great Senatorial districts, each of which was entitled to four Senators, one being elected every year. Term of office, four years. Under the present Constitution, the Senate consists of thirty-two members, who are elected each odd year, one in each Senatorial district. The Senate districts must consist of contiguous territory, and no county can be divided unless entitled to two or more Senators. A census is required to be taken every ten years (1875, 1885, etc.), and an apportionment must be made by the Legislature at its first session after the return of every enumeration.

THE ASSEMBLY.

The right to representation in General Assembly was finally secured, by the people residing in the province of New York, after the Revolution in England which placed William and Mary on the throne.¹ On the 19th of March, 1691, Governor Sloughter arrived, with instructions to re-establish the Assembly² and to reinstate the people in their rights. It met on the 9th of April, 1691, and consisted of seventeen members, which number was increased, subsequently, to twenty-seven. The compilers of the laws were directed to commence with the General Assembly of 1691. After an existence of about ninety-two years, the Colonial Assembly adjourned April 3, 1775, and never again convened.

Previous to 1716, new Assemblies were elected about every two years, though sometimes but a few months would intervene between the elections. The Assembly elected in 1716 continued over ten years — from June 5, 1716, to August 10, 1726. Four Assemblies succeeded during the next ten years, the last expiring May 3, 1737. A new Assembly convened June 15, 1737, which passed an act providing for triennial elections. The bill passed the Council and received the sanction of Lieutenant-Governor Clarke, but was repealed by the King, November 30, 1738, on the recommendation of the Lords of Trade, notwithstanding the Lieutenant-Governor sent a written appeal in favor of it. The next Assembly convened March, 1739, and continued until September, 1743, when it was dissolved. On the 8th of November following, another House met and, in December, passed an act limiting each Assembly to seven years, if not previously dissolved.

In 1774, the House was composed of thirty-one members. They were elected on writs issued by order of the Governor, who had the power, by and with the advice of the Council, to convene, prorogue or dissolve the Assembly at pleasure. In case of vacancy during the session of the Legislature, the writ was issued on a warrant signed by the Speaker. None were eligible for representatives except freeholders, resident in the district from which they were elected.

Members were paid by their constituents, those of New York, Westchester, Queens, Kings, Ulster, Richmond, Dutchess, Orange, and the Manor of Cortland, receiving six shillings (75c.) a day; of Albany, Schenectady, Borough of Westchester, Manors of Livingston and Rensselaerswyck, ten shillings ($1.25), and those of Suffolk, nine shillings ($1.12½) a day, for the time of their attendance, which was duly certified by the Speaker, and the same per diem, for the time, which was fixed by law, for their journey to and from New York.

On the day appointed for the meeting of a new Legislature, the members elect convened at the Assembly Chamber, in the city of New York, and if they were above thirteen in number, sent the Clerk of the House to inform the Governor of their attendance. Commissioners, generally the Judges of the Supreme Court, were sent to the Assembly Chamber to qualify them, after which their presence was required before his Excellency, who requested them to return to their chamber and elect a Speaker. For that purpose they again retired, and having made a choice, conducted the person elected to the Chair, which was placed at the upper end of the long table. He subsequently presented himself, accompanied by the members, to the Governor, for his approval, which was of course. The Speaker, thereupon; addressed the Governor, and, in behalf of the House, prayed "that their words and actions may have a favorable construction; that the members may have free access to him, and they and their servants be privileged with freedom from arrests." The Governor, having granted this request, opened the session by reading his speech to both Houses, a copy whereof was delivered to the Speaker of the Assembly.

Messages to the Council were conveyed by one of the members of the House, who was met at the bar of the Council by the Speaker of that body, into whose hands the message was delivered. All money bills originated in the Assembly, which, according to the practice of the House of Commons, allowed no amendment to be made thereto by the Council.

Both Houses were present in the Council Chamber when the Governor passed the bills sent to him, on which occasion the custom was for his Excellency to ask the advice of his Council with respect to every bill. If approved, he signed them after these words: "I assent to this bill, enacting the same, and order it to be enrolled." The acts were thereupon published in the open street, near the city hall, New York, in the presence of the Governor and both branches of the Legislature.

All laws passed were subject, subsequently, to an absolute veto of the King. If disallowed, an order in Council to that effect was transmitted to the Governor and recorded in the minutes of the Council, and notice of the fact was given by proclamation.

The General Assembly was succeeded by the Provincial Congress. The First Provincial Congress assembled on the 22d of May, 1775. Some of the members were elected for one year, others for six months. A majority of the counties represented constituted a quorum for the dispatch of business. The vote was taken by counties, each of which generally designated in its returns the number of its delegation that might cast the vote to which it was entitled. At first, New York had four, Albany three, and each of the remaining counties two votes, except Gloucester (now in Vermont), which had one vote; but the ratio was changed in 1776, and in the Third Provincial Congress and the State Convention, New York was allowed eight; Albany six; Dutchess five; Ulster, Westchester, Queens and Suffolk each, four; Orange three; Kings, Richmond, Tryon, Charlotte and Cumberland, each two votes, and Gloucester one vote. But any member was at liberty to have his name and dissent from the vote of his county entered on the minutes. The proceedings were with closed doors, and none but members, all of whom were pledged to secrecy, were permitted to take copies of the minutes. Provision was made with a view to the ultimate publication, at the close of the session, of the proceedings of the Congress, except such part as the unanimous voice of the counties should declare to be of a secret or unimportant nature; leaving to the body power to publish from time to time such extracts as it may deem fit. These rules governed succeeding Congresses, but the Journal was not printed until 1842.

The First Provincial Congress held three sessions, viz.: from the 22d May to the 8th July, when it adjourned until the 26th of the same month, having appointed a Committee of Safety to sit during the recess. It re-assembled on the 26th of July, and sat until the 2d of September, when it adjourned until the 2d of October, the Committee of Safety sitting in the interval. It assembled for the third time, on the 4th of the latter month, and finally dissolved on the 4th of November, having previously provided for an election of a new Provincial Congress.

The Second Provincial Congress was to be elected on the 7th, and to have met on the 14th of November, but a sufficient number of deputies did not attend until the 6th of December, 1775. Like its predecessor, it sat in the city of New York. It held three meetings, or sessions, viz.: from the 6th to the 22d December, 1775; from the 12th February to 16th March, and from the 8th to the 13th May, 1776. Queens county was not represented in this Congress. The Committee of Safety superintended public affairs during the adjournment.

The Third Provincial Congress was elected in April, 1776, to meet at New York on the 14th of May, but a sufficient number of members not attending, it adjourned from day to day until the 18th, when, a quorum being present, it proceeded to business, and continued in session until the 30th of June; on which day it adjourned, an attack on the city being anticipated.

The Fourth Provincial Congress assembled at the court-house in the town of Whiteplains, in the county of Westchester, on the 9th of July, 1776; and the Declaration of Independence having been read and unanimously agreed to, the title of the body was changed, on the 10th of July, from that of the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New York, to that of The Convention of the Representatives of the State of New York. This body continued to sit at Whiteplains until the 27th of July, when it adjourned to meet at Harlem on the 29th; where it continued until the 29th August, when it adjourned to Fishkill, leaving the public business, meanwhile, in the hands of the Committee of Safety. The Convention met in the latter place on the 5th of September, in the Episcopal Church, but that building "being very foul with the dung of doves and fowls, without any benches, seats, or other conveniences whatever," it adjourned to the Dutch Church. On the 7th it took a recess until the 14th of the same month, and thence continued in session until the 5th of October, when it adjourned over to the 15th, and again resigned the care of public affairs to the Committee of Public Safety. It held brief sessions on the 5th and 6th of December, and on the 11th of February, 1777, resolved to adjourn to Kingston. It met at the latter place on the 6th of March, and having formed a State Constitution and provided a temporary form of government by electing a Council of Safety, it finally dissolved on the 13th of May. The approach of the enemy on Kingston obliging the Legislature, then in session at that place, to disperse, the members of the Senate and Assembly met as a Convention there on the 7th of October, 1777, and appointed another Council of Safety, whereupon they adjourned. This Legislative Convention assembled afterward at Poughkeepsie, January 7, 1778, and having adopted sundry measures, was dissolved by the meeting of the Legislature, on the 15th of the same month.

The Assembly, under the State Constitution, has always been chosen annually. It consisted at first of seventy members, with the power to increase one with every seventieth increase of the number of electors until it contained three hundred members. When the Constitution was amended in 1801, the number had reached 108, when it was reduced to 100, with a provision that it should be increased after each census, at the rate of two annually, until the number reached 150. This increase was twelve in 1808, and fourteen in 1815. The Constitution of 1821 fixed the number permanently at 128. Members were elected on a general ticket. Under the Constitution of 1846, members of Assembly are elected by single districts.

No change can be made in the representation of counties between the period fixed by the Constitution for the apportionment based upon the Census taken in years ending in 5. Counties erected from parts of other counties, or embracing parts of different election districts, between these periods, cannot have a separate representation until the next apportionment. In such cases the elections are held and the votes canvassed in the original counties, as if no division had been made until the arrival of the period for a new apportionment. The Legislature apportions to each county its relative number of members, and the Boards of Supervisors divide the towns and wards in their respective counties into Assembly Districts, except in the city and county of New York, where the apportionment is made by the Board of Aldermen. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties were required to meet on the first Tuesday of January succeeding the adoption of the Constitution, and divide the counties into districts, of the number apportioned to them, of convenient and contiguous territory, and as nearly equal population as possible. After each State Census, the Legislature is required to re-apportion the members and to direct the time when the supervisors shall meet for the purpose for re-districting. Pursuant to this provision the boards met in June, 1857, 1866 and 1879. Fulton and Hamilton counties together elect one member, and every other county one or more. Acts re-apportioning the State reached the order of third reading of bills each session since the census of 1875 was taken, but failed of final passage, in consequence of differences of opinion with regard to the proper ratio of representation. An act was finally passed April 23, 1879 (Laws 1879, ch. 208).

1 Announced their withdrawal, in a petition presented to the Governor and Council June 9. This petition was delivered to the Assembly by the Governor, who held it to be "not cognizable by him," and advised its signers to return, which they formally did June 11, saying: "but cannot sit and act as members at present—but desire further time for consideration."

2 Declared "not qualified according to law," May 28.
3 Admitted June 6.
4 Declared "not qualified according to law," May 27.
5 Admitted June 7.
6 Died before the meeting of the Assembly.

7 In place of Kerfbyl, deceased.
8 The Earl of Bellomont, Governor, being dead, and the Lieutenant-Governor absent, the Council and General Assembly concurred in the opinion that the administration of the Government devolved on the Council. This was disputed by Colonel William Smith, president of the Council, who claimed that the government vested in him. These gentlemen thereupon signed a paper in opposition to the position of the Council and Assembly, whereupon the latter adopted a resolution declaring that the subscribers had "offered the greatest scandal to the Whole House of Representatives" and were "liable to the severest rebukes of this House for their disloyalty and insolence, and that Major Matthew Howell, being the writer and deliverer in of the said paper, be forthwith expelled this House."

9 Abraham Gouverneur received 10 votes; William Nicoll, 9; not voting, 2.
10 Declared disqualified for non-residence, and "ordered to withdraw," August 19.
11 Wessels dismissed, and Schermerhorn, the next highest candidate, admitted August 20.
12 Withdrew with Wessels and Nicoll August 20, "notwithstanding the speaker often commanded them, in the name of the House, to stay and attend the service of this House." [Assembly Journal.] Expelled for non-attendance August 26, and new elections ordered.

13 Admitted September 18, in place of Schuyler, Abeel and Van Rensselaer, respectively.
14 Admitted September 12, in place of Jackson, Whitehead and Drake, respectively. Expelled September 22, for having presented a paper "writ in barbarous English," representing that the organization of the House is illegal, and Gouverneur an alien; and for refusing to recognize a summons to appear and answer with regard thereto. The succeeding assembly (November 11, 1702), adjudged Gouverneur an alien, and adopted a resolution that acts passed under the speakership of an alien are "not binding upon the citizen."

15 Died in the interval between the two sessions, and new election ordered.
16 Dismissed for non-residence August 22.
17 Purdy withdrew with the other seceders, August 20. Fowler contested his seat and was admitted August 26. The House then consisted of 12, including Schermerhorn and Fowler, one more than a quorum.
18 Appointed October 29, 1702.
19 Admitted October 26, 1704, in place of Daniel Whitehead, deceased.

CIVIL DIVISIONS.

The State of New York, for the purpose of more conveniently administering the affairs of local government, is divided by law into counties, which are further subdivided into towns. Municipal governments, likewise, are provided for cities and villages, securing to them separate officers and tribunals for the management of their peculiar corporate affairs, and other privileges, varying with their respective charters.

The earliest conflicts between the People and the Director-General, under the Dutch government, had for their object the securing of corporate rights.¹ A measure of success was attained. The English adopted the system of counties, towns, cities and villages. Under the State government the Legislature has exercised supreme control, and possesses the power to grant or withhold municipal privileges still, except as limited by the Constitution. The policy of local control of local affairs has become the accepted policy of the State, and is in a degree recognized in the Constitution, by the amendments adopted in 1874.

The most important general provision of the Constitution relating to the civil divisions of the State is the amendment adopted in 1874, which declares that "no county, city, town or village shall hereafter give any money or property, or loan its money or credit, to or in aid of any individual, association or corporation, or become, directly or indirectly, the owner of stock in or bonds of any association or corporation, nor shall any such county, city, town or village be allowed to incur any indebtedness, except for county, city, town or village purposes. This section shall not prevent such county, city, town or village from making such provision for the aid or support of its poor, as may be authorized by law."

COUNTIES.

Under the Dutch the only divisions were the city and towns. In 1665, a district or Sherifffalty called Yorkshire, was erected. It comprised Long island, Staten island and part of the present county of Westchester. For judicial purposes it was divided into three Ridings. The East Riding comprised the present county of Suffolk; the West Riding, Staten island, Kings county, Newtown and part of Westchester; the North Riding, all the present county of Queens, except Newtown.

Counties were erected, for the first time, by the act of 1683, and were twelve in number, as follows: Albany, Cornwall, Dukes, Dutchess, Kings, New York, Orange, Queens, Richmond, Suffolk, Ulster and Westchester. The county of Cornwall consisted of what was known as the district of Pemaquid (now in Maine), and Dukes county consisted of the several islands on the coast of Massachusetts. These counties were included in the patent to the Duke of York. They were detached on the reorganization of government in 1691.

Cumberland county, in 1766, Gloucester in 1770, and Charlotte in 1772, were formed out of Albany county. The two first, and part of the last, are now in the State of Vermont.

Tryon county was erected in 1772, also out of Albany, and comprised the country west of a north and south line extending from St. Regis to the west bounds of the township of Schenectady, thence running irregularly south-west to the head of the Mohawk branch of the Delaware, and along the same to the south-east bounds of the present county of Broome; thence in a north-westerly direction to Fort Bull, on Wood Creek, near the present village of Rome; all west of the last-mentioned line being Indian Territory. Thus, the Province consisted, at the Revolution, of fourteen counties.

Counties are erected and their boundaries changed at the will of the Legislature. With the exception of Hamilton county, each one is entitled to at least one Member of Assembly. Except in the counties of New York and Kings, and the larger cities, there is elected at least one School Commissioner to each Assembly District. Also, for school purposes, the towns are divided into school districts. The salaries of the School Commissioners are $800 per annum, which may be increased by the Boards of Supervisors. They hold their offices for three years.

For judicial purposes, there is elected in each county a County Judge, and in counties where the business requires it, a Surrogate, Special Judge and Surrogate, Special Judge and Special Surrogate. Surrogates are elected for six years, under the amended judiciary article. Most of the Special County Judges and Special Surrogates hold offices for three years only. Two Justices of Sessions are chosen annually, but no elector can vote for more than one.

There are likewise elected in each county a District Attorney, Sheriff, Clerk and Treasurer. Most of the counties of the State elect four Coroners. The law requires Superintendents of the Poor in all counties except Albany, Putnam and New York, which have none. In Herkimer, Jefferson and Queens counties the Superintendents are appointed by the Supervisors. In the remainder of the counties they are elected by the people. Kings and Richmond counties each elect five Superintendents; in the first named county, the Superintendents are Commissioners of Charities. Allegany, Broome, Cayuga, Chemung, Clinton, Cortland, Dutchess, Erie, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Greene, Livingston, Monroe, Montgomery, Niagara, Oneida, Onondaga, Orange, Orleans, Oswego, Otsego, Schenectady, Saratoga, Schoharie, Schuyler, Sullivan, Ulster, Warren and Yates each elect one; all the other counties (except as above noted) choose three.

Sheriffs, Clerks, District Attorneys, Treasurers, Superintendents of the Poor and Coroners hold office for three years. In the counties of Kings, New York and Westchester, Registers of Deeds are elected triennially.

Each county has a Board of Supervisors, consisting of one member from each town and ward in each county, except in New York, in which county the Board of Aldermen constitute the Board of Supervisors; and also, except in the city of Hudson, which is divided into two Supervisors' districts, each district containing two wards. Yonkers elects only one Supervisor, Johnstown is allowed four. The city of Buffalo elects two Supervisors in each ward and the town of Owego, Tioga county, elects two Supervisors. In most of the counties the Supervisors are elected annually (usually in the spring months), but in some of the counties they are elected for two years. The Board has stated meetings for the settlement of its accounts, the apportionment of taxes, and the regulation of internal affairs. It appoints a County Sealer of Weights and Measures, Inspectors of Plank-roads and Turnpikes, and a few other minor officers. The tendency of legislation for several years has been to increase the powers of Boards of Supervisors. Their powers were further increased, under the amendments to the Constitution adopted in 1874 (Art. 3, § 18), by the Legislature of 1875 (ch. 482).

COUNTY JUDGES.¹

In 1683 an act was passed directing that a Court of Sessions be held by three Justices of the Peace in each of the twelve counties of the Province. In the city of New York, the Court was held by the Mayor and four Aldermen; it determined all causes, civil and criminal, by jury, but actions involving £5 could, on application, be removed to the Court of Oyer and Terminer. By the act of 1691, and ordinance of 1699, the functions of this Court were confined to criminal matters; civil cases were transferred to the Court of Common Pleas. Upon the adoption of the Constitution of 1846, a County Court was organized in each county of the State, excepting New York, and provision was made for the election of a Judge in each county to hold the same. The present term of office of County Judges is six years. We give the names of the First Judges of the Court of Common Pleas during its existence, and the County Judges elected or appointed under the Constitution of 1846.

SPECIAL COUNTY JUDGES.

The Constitution authorizes the Legislature, on application of Boards of Supervisors, to provide for the election of an officer, to discharge the duties of County Judge, in cases of inability, or of a vacancy, and to exercise such other powers in special cases as may be provided by law. The Legislature has authorized the election of Special County Judges in several of the counties. The term of office, which usually is three or four years, is fixed in the act creating the office.

SURROGATES.

Surrogates under the first Constitution were appointed for an unlimited period by the Council of Appointment, and an appeal lay from their decisions to the Judge of the Court of Probates of the State. Under the second Constitution they were appointed by the Governor and Senate for terms of four years, and appeals lay from their decisions to the Chancellor. The Constitution of 1846 abolished the office of Surrogate except in counties where the population exceeds forty thousand, and devolved the duties on the County Judge. In counties of forty thousand population the Legislature may authorize the election of Surrogates. They are elected for the term of six years, and are allowed to take acknowledgments of deeds and administer oaths in the same manner as County Judges.

SPECIAL SURROGATES.

By authority of the Constitution, the Legislature may provide for the election of Special Surrogates, who discharge the duties of Surrogate, in cases of inability, or of a vacancy, and exercise such other powers in special cases as may be provided by law. The election of Special Surrogates has been authorized in several counties. The Legislature fixes the term of office, which is usually three years.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

The original appellation of this office was that of Assistant Attorney-General. The districts embraced several counties, and were seven in number. (Act February 12, 1796.) The office was filled by the Governor and Council during pleasure. The Attorney-General officiated personally in New York county. The office of District Attorney was created April 4, 1801. At first the State was divided into seven districts as before, but subsequently several new ones were formed. By a law, passed April, 1818, each county was constituted a separate district, for the purposes of this office. During the prevalence of the Second Constitution, District Attorneys were appointed by the Court of General Sessions in each county.

SHERIFFS.

Sheriffs during the Colonial period were appointed annually, in the month of October, unless otherwise noticed. Under the First Constitution they were appointed annually by the Council of Appointment, and no person could hold the office for more than four successive years. The Sheriff could hold no other office, and must be a freeholder in the county to which appointed. Since the adoption of the Constitution of 1821, Sheriffs have been elected for a term of three years, and are ineligible to election for the next succeeding term.

COUNTY CLERKS.

The County Clerk, during the Colonial period, was constituted by his commission, Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, Clerk of the Peace and Clerk of the Sessions of the Peace, in his county. Under the first State Constitution, it was his duty to keep the County Records, and act as Clerk of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas,¹ and Clerk of the Oyer and Terminer.² The seals of the County Clerk were the Seals of the Court of Common Pleas. County Clerks are now likewise Clerks of the Supreme Court in their respective counties, and their seals are declared to be the seals of the court. The term of office, since the adoption of the Constitution of 1821, has been three years.

CITIES.

The struggle for municipal rights, which was so stubbornly conducted by the first inhabitants of New Netherlands, laid the foundations for civil liberty in the province,¹ as similar struggles had resulted similarly on the continent of Europe. The municipal government instituted in New Amsterdam by the Dutch² was superseded by a chartered government under the English; the charter being granted by the Governor as representing the sovereign, who alone could confer corporate privileges. This power now vests in the Legislature, as the representative of the sovereignty of the people. The privileges conferred upon cities vary with their respective charters. They are divided into wards and districts, the latter of several kinds, for the better administration of their internal affairs. Their officers are a Mayor, Common Council, a Recorder, Clerk and other judicial and administrative officers.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

The counties of New York, Kings, Westchester and Richmond were, by an act passed April 15, 1857, united in one Police District.

By an act passed April 10, 1860, the Police District was extended to embrace also the towns of Newtown, Flushing and Jamaica, in Queens county; the number of Commissioners was reduced from five to three, to be appointed by the Governor and Senate for a term of six years. Those first appointed were classified so that a vacancy would occur once in two years, and the Commissioners holding under the first act were superseded by those appointed under the latter.

An act passed March 16, 1864 (ch. 41), changed the number of Commissioners to four, and their term of office to eight years, except those first appointed. The official term expired on the first day of March. Their names and terms were mentioned in the act. The law provided for the election of their successors in the same manner as Regents of the University are chosen. The remaining Commissioners were to fill vacancies during the interim of the Legislature, persons so appointed to hold office until the Legislature elected their successors.

By the provisions of an act passed in 1866 (ch. 74), the Police Board, with four Sanitary Commissioners, to be appointed by the Governor and Senate, were created a Board of Health for the Metropolitan Police District, and by another act passed the same session (ch. 578), the power to grant licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the District, except in Westchester county, was conferred on the Health Board.

Chapter 381 of the Laws of 1870 repealed the act of 1866 so far as its provisions related to the city of Brooklyn, and conferred the powers previously exercised by the Board on local officers appointed by the Common Council upon nomination by the Mayor. By an act passed April 5th of the same year, the Health Department of the city of New York was reorganized to consist of the Police Commissioners of the city, the Health Officer of the Port, and four officers to be appointed for the term of five years, by the Mayor. The several officers to constitute the Commissioners of Health of the city of New York. The act established four bureaux, the chief officer of one to be designated City Sanitary Inspector, another to be known as the Sanitary Permit Bureau, a third the Bureau of Street Cleaning, and a chief officer of the fourth, to be called the Register of Records; a subsequent law of the same year directed the transfer to the new Board of the books, property and effects in the possession of the Metropolitan Board of Health and conferred the powers exercised by that Board upon the Commissioners of Health, to be thereafter exclusively exercised by them in the city of New York. Chapter 636 of the Laws of 1874 extended the powers of the Commissioners to the waters of the bay, up to and within the quarantine limits as established by law, but not to be held to interfere with the powers and duties of the Commissioners of Quarantine or Health Officer of the Port. The laws relating to the Metropolitan Sanitary District and Board of Health so far as they applied to Westchester county were repealed by chapter 433 of the Laws of 1871, and chapter 160 of the Laws of 1872 authorized the appointment of five Sanitary Commissioners for the county of Richmond, upon whom the powers previously exercised by the Metropolitan Board were conferred.

TOWNS.

Towns were erected by the Legislature until 1849,⁹ when power was given to the several Boards of Supervisors (except in New York county), by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected, to divide or alter the bounds of any town or erect new ones, when such division does not place parts of the same town in more than one assembly district. Application for such division or change must first be made by at least twelve freeholders of each town affected by the division, and a notice of intended application posted in at least five public places, and published in all the county papers. A survey and map of the town or towns must also be filed in the Secretary's office, together with a certified copy of the act of the Board. The latter is published in the Appendix to the Laws of the following session. Towns may also be erected by the Legislature.

¹ On the 31st of December, 1863, Governor Seymour removed the then existing Board, and appointed in its stead Messrs. Joseph S. Bosworth, William McMurray and William B. Lewis. This Board organized on the 5th of January, 1864, by electing Mr. McMurray President. The old Board, however, denied the legality of their removal, and the new Board decided not to act until the decision of the courts upon that question. Before such decision was had, the Act of March 16, 1864, was passed.

There are elected, by ballot, in each town (not excepted by statute) a Supervisor, Town Clerk, three Assessors, a Collector, two Overseers of the Poor, one or three Commissioners of Highways, four Justices of the Peace, Constables (not exceeding five), and two Inspectors of Elections to each election district (a third being designated by the presiding officers [Justices of the Peace] of the town meeting from the two having the next highest vote). As many Pound Masters as the electors shall determine are chosen by a viva voce vote of the electors. One Overseer of Highways for each road district¹ is appointed by the Commissioners of Highways. Assessors and Commissioners of Highways are elected for three years, Justices for four years, and most of the others for one year. All are paid by fees, or a per diem compensation for the time employed.²

An act of the Legislature, passed June 5, 1886 (chap. 585), authorized the electors of each of the several towns of the State, at any town meeting thereafter held, to determine by ballot whether such town shall elect at the next succeeding town meeting, held in the town, a board of town auditors, who shall exercise all the powers conferred by law upon such boards. All bills and claims against the towns must be presented to such auditors on the first day of their session. No person other than a freeholder of the town in which he is elected, is eligible to the office. Town auditors are provided for by special acts in the counties of Warren, Essex, Clinton, Madison, Albany and Saratoga.

Towns are divided into School Districts, in each of which are chosen one or three Trustees,³ a Clerk, Collector and Librarian. Trustees are elected for one or three years; the other officers for one year.

² See Revised Statutes for the powers and duties of towns.

³ By an act passed April 12, 1858, School Districts were authorized to elect one Trustee to hold for three years; but by the provisions of chapter 555, Laws of 1864, when one trustee only is elected, his term of office is limited to one year. Annual school meetings are held on the second Tuesday of October.

EXISTING TOWNS.

[In the following table the names of existing towns only are given, and the dates of erection are those on which they were first recognized by the laws of the State. Many had previously existed under patent in the colonial period. County seats are designated by SMALL CAPITALS, half-shire towns by italics.]

VILLAGES.

Villages were incorporated by the Legislature only, until 1847, when a general law was passed, allowing the citizens of any town not included in an incorporated village, and with a resident population of not less than three hundred persons upon one square mile, to become a corporation under the provisions of the act. When, in the judgment of the Legislature, the objects of these corporations could not be attained by the general law, the Legislature had power to pass special acts for that purpose until the Constitution was amended in 1874.¹

The election of village officers occurs annually on the first Tuesday of March, unless otherwise directed by special act, and unless a town meeting shall be held on that day, then it is held on the day after.

The officers of villages, under the general law, are five Trustees, three Assessors, a Collector, Treasurer and Clerk, three Street Commissioners (when such village shall be a separate road district), such number of Fire Wardens, not exceeding five, as the Trustees may direct to be elected, and one Poundmaster. There are many special exceptions to this act.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

The origins of the Confederation and of the Federal Union have been set forth in the earlier part of this volume. We here give the representatives of the State of New York in the various departments of the Federal Government, except Customs officers and Indian Commissioners.¹

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

The Federal Constitution provides that the President and Vice-President of the United States shall be chosen by electors appointed in such manner as the Legislatures of the respective States shall direct, the number to be equal to their number of Senators and Representatives in Congress. In this State, the electors were originally appointed by the Legislature, by an act passed April 12, 1792. By those acts the Southern District was allowed four electors, and the others three each, and the first Tuesday of November was designated as the time for the meeting of the College, which was directed to be at Poughkeepsie. Subsequently, in pursuance of an act passed March 26, 1796, the Legislature convened in special session, quadrennially, on the first Tuesday of November, at Hudson, in place of the Electoral College. Since 1812, in pursuance of an act passed May 26 of that year, the Electors have met at the Capitol in Albany.

By an act passed March 15, 1825, the Legislature submitted to the people the question of choosing Electors by districts, or on a general ticket, which resulted as follows: "By districts," 66,324. "By general ticket, plurality," 56,801. "By general ticket, majority," 931. The district system thus adopted was only in vogue at one election, when the Legislature, by an act passed April 15, 1829, adopted the general ticket system, as now in use. The Electors must be appointed within thirty-four days before the first Wednesday of December, in every fourth year. In this State the Electors are now chosen on the Tuesday after the first Monday of November, and also in all the other States. In making up the general ticket, one person is selected from each Congressional District, and two to represent the State at large.

The Electoral College is required to meet at the State Capitol on the first Wednesday of December, cast their votes for President and Vice-President, make a certified list thereof, and forward it under seal to the President of the United States Senate, who opens and announces the result, in the presence of the two houses of Congress.

THE PRESIDENT.

The Constitution of the United States provides that the executive power shall be vested in a "President of the United States of America," who shall hold his office during the term of four years. He is chosen by electors from the several States of the Union, who are appointed in such manner as their respective legislatures may direct, each State being entitled to a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress. The time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes — which day is required to be the same throughout the United States — is determined by Congress.

No person, other than a natural born citizen of the United States, is eligible to the office of President, or is any person eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States. Before entering on the execution of his office, the President is required to take the following oath or affirmation: — "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The President is Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and has power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment; he also has power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; he nominates, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoints Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not otherwise provided for in the Constitution, and which shall be established by law; but Congress may vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of Departments. The President has power to fill all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session, and he is also required from time to time to give to Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration, such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; and he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper.

The President receives Ambassadors and other public Ministers accredited to the United States from foreign governments and commissions all the officers of the United States; and it is required of him that he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed. The Constitution provides that he may be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors. His compensation is fixed by law at $50,000 per annum, payable monthly, and he is entitled to the use of the furniture and other effects belonging to the United States and kept in the Executive Mansion; he is authorized to appoint or employ in his official household the following officers, viz.: a private secretary and assistant private secretary, two executive clerks, a steward and messenger whose salaries are paid by the Government. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the office, the same devolve on the Vice-President; in the event of a vacancy in both such offices, Congress designates what officer shall act as President, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

The Vice-President is elected at the same time and in the same manner as the President of the United States. No person who is ineligible for the office of President can be chosen Vice-President. He goes into office with the President and their terms begin on the same day. In case the President should resign, die, or become unable to exercise the functions of his office, or is removed from it, the duties of the position devolve upon the Vice-President during the remainder of the term for which they both were elected. In case both the President and Vice-President should resign, die, or become unable to perform the duties required of them, or be removed from office, Congress has power to designate by law what officer shall then act as President.

The Vice-President is, by virtue of his office, the President of the United States Senate, and in the event of his death, removal, resignation or inability to discharge the duties of his office, the Senate elects a presiding officer of the Senate, who becomes President of the United States, should any cause create a vacancy in that office. The Vice-President may be removed from his office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes or misdemeanors; as presiding officer of the Senate, he cannot vote except when there is an equal division of the Senate on any question, and then his vote is decisive. It is also his duty as presiding officer of the Senate, to open, in the presence of the assembled Senate and House of Representatives, all of the certificates of the electors of the President and Vice-President, and superintend the counting of the votes accompanying the certificates. If no person have a majority of the whole number of electors appointed by the several States, then the Senate is required to choose the Vice-President from the two highest numbers on the list.

FEDERAL CONGRESS.

NEW YORK SENATORS.

The Constitution of the United States provides that the Legislature of each State shall choose two Senators, who shall hold their office for the term of six years. Vacancies occurring during the recess of the Legislature are directed to be filled by the Executive until the next meeting of the Legislature. At the first session they were divided into three classes, so that one-third might be chosen every second year. A Senator must be an inhabitant of the State from which he is chosen, been nine years a citizen of the United States, and have attained the age of thirty years. This State was not represented in the first session of the first Congress.

REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS.

The House of Representatives is composed of members elected by districts. Representatives hold office two years, must reside in the State which they are chosen to represent, have been seven years citizens of the United States, and have attained the age of twenty-five years. Each new Congress commences on the 4th day of March every odd year. The elections are generally held during the even year preceding—in this State on the general election day.

APPORTIONMENT.

The Constitution of the United States directs that a census be taken every ten years, which has been fixed at those ending with a cipher, and after each enumeration Congress apportions the representation among the several States. The following table gives the apportionment under the first Constitution and those subsequently made.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The Speaker is the presiding officer of the House of Representatives, and is chosen by the members of that body. The oath of office is administered by any member of the House of Representatives to the Speaker, and by the Speaker to all of the members and delegates previous to their taking their seats. He certifies the salary and accounts for traveling expenses of delegates and representatives and his certificate is conclusive upon all departments and officers of the government. No person can be employed as a reporter for the House of Representatives without the approval of the Speaker. In case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice-President of the United States, the President of the Senate, or, if there is none, then the Speaker of the House of Representatives, for the time being, acts as President until the disability is removed or a President is elected.

He receives compensation of $8,000 per annum, and is required to give his advice and opinion on questions of law whenever demanded by the President. And the heads of the executive departments may require his opinion on questions of law arising in the administration of their respective departments. He has general superintendence and direction of the attorneys and marshals of all the districts in the United States and the Territories, as to the manner of discharging their respective duties, and they report to him an account of their official proceedings and the condition of their respective offices, in such time and manner as he may direct; he also has general supervisory powers over the accounts of district attorneys, marshals, clerks and other officers of the courts of the United States.

Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General conduct and argue cases and writs of error and appeals in the Supreme Court and suits in the Court of Claims in which the United States is interested; and the Attorney-General may, whenever he deems it for the interest of the United States, either in person conduct and argue any case in any court of the United States, in which the United States is interested, or may direct the Solicitor-General, or any officer of the Department of Justice, to do so.

No public money can be expended upon any site or land purchased by the United States for the purpose of erecting thereon public buildings of any kind until the written opinion of the Attorney-General has been given in favor of the validity of the title, nor until the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the land or site may be located has been given to such purchase. District Attorneys of the United States, on application of the Attorney-General, furnish assistance or information in relation to the titles of the public property lying within their respective districts.

The Attorney-General is required from time to time to cause to be edited and printed in volumes, at the government printing office, such of the opinions of the law officers of the Department of Justice as he may deem valuable for preservation, which are distributed under his direction. He makes regular reports to Congress of the business of the Department of Justice and of such other matters appertaining thereto as he may deem proper, together with a statement of the amounts used for defraying the expenses of the United States courts in each judicial district, with the statistics of crime under the laws of the United States, and a statement of the causes pending in each of the several United States courts during the preceding year.

The Solicitor-General, appointed by the President and Senate, assists the Attorney-General in the performance of his official duties. During the absence or inability of the Attorney-General he is authorized to exercise all of the duties of the office. The Attorney-General is also allowed three Assistant Attorneys-General appointed by the President and Senate. Under the act of 1870, the following law officers of the executive departments exercise their functions under the supervision and control of the Attorney-General, viz.: Assistant Attorney-General for the Department of the Interior, Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department, Solicitor of the Treasury, Solicitor of Internal Revenue, and Examiner of Claims for the Department of State, all of whom are appointed by the President and Senate. In addition to the officers enumerated the Attorney-General is allowed a number of clerks who receive their appointments directly from him.

DIPLMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICERS.

The President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoints Diplomatic and Consular representatives of the United States accredited to foreign governments and countries. The principal and permanent Consular officers are Consuls-General, Consuls and Commercial Agents, who reside in foreign countries to protect the commerce and commercial interests of the United States. The President defines the extent of country to be embraced within any consulate or commercial agency, and from time to time, as he may think conducive to the public interest, prescribes regulations in relation to the duties of all Diplomatic and Consular officers, the transaction of their business, the rendering of accounts and returns, the payment of compensation, the safe-keeping of the archives and public property in the hands of such officers, the communication of information and the procurement and transmission of the products of the arts and sciences, manufactures, agriculture and commerce.

Consuls at ports or places to which they are appointed, receive the protests or declarations which captains, masters, crews, passengers or merchants, who are citizens of the United States, may choose to make there, and also such as any foreigner may make before them relative to the personal interest of any citizen of the United States. Consular officers keep lists of all seamen and marines shipped and discharged by them; also, of the number of vessels arrived and departed, the registered tonnage of the same, the number of their seamen and marines, and of those who are protected, and whether citizens of the United States or not, and as nearly as possible the nature and value of their cargoes and where produced, making returns of the same to the Secretary of the Treasury.

They also take possession of the personal estate left by citizens of the United States (other than seamen belonging to any vessel), who die within the jurisdiction of the Consulate, leaving no representative or relative to care for their effects. The Consul inventories the effects, collects debts due the deceased, pays those due from him, sells such of the property as is perishable in its nature, and after one year the remainder, unless, in the mean time, some relative or representative appears to claim the same; in case no claim is made the effects are forwarded to the Secretary of the United States Treasury in trust for the legal claimants. Persons dying abroad may appoint consular officers their agents for the disposal of their effects, etc., or any other person instead. Consular officers, whose salaries exceed $1,000 per annum, are prohibited, while holding office, from being interested in or transacting business as merchants, factors, brokers or other traders, or as clerks or agents for such persons. All consular officers procure and transmit to the Department of State authentic information concerning the commerce of the countries in which they are located, of such character, in such manner and form, and at such times as the Department of State may prescribe; also the prices current of all articles of merchandise usually exported to the United States from the port or place at which the consular officer is stationed. Other duties of a commercial character are fully prescribed by law.

The Diplomatic Officers of the United States, include the following, who are appointed by the President and Senate: Ambassadors, being persons sent by one sovereign power to another sovereign power to transact public business of importance and interest to one or both of them. Envoys Extraordinary, who are representatives sent from one sovereignty to another on special business of importance. Ministers Plenipotentiary, being envoys or negotiators sent to a foreign government with full diplomatic powers. Ministers resident have diplomatic powers and reside at foreign capitals. Commissioners who are persons appointed by a sovereign power to confer with similar persons appointed from another sovereign power, and authorized to decide special and disputed questions of international interest or importance. Charges d'Affaires, in commission (missi), are ministers of the third or lowest grade sent to a foreign government, and are accredited to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, not to the sovereign as is the case with the higher grades. Agents are officers sent to a foreign country with limited powers to treat upon specified international matters. Secretaries of Legation are officers appointed by the President to serve in the United States Legations abroad. The Secretary of Legation, in the absence of the head of the mission, acts generally, and ex officio, as Charge d'Affaires ad interim without being specially accredited by formal letter.

Diplomatic and Consular officers are prohibited from corresponding in regard to the public affairs of any foreign government with any private person, newspaper or other periodical, or otherwise than with the proper officers of the United States, or from recommending any person, at home or abroad, for any employment of trust or profit under the government of the country in which he is located; or from asking or accepting for himself, or any other person, any present, emolument, pecuniary favor, office or title of any kind from any such government. All persons in the diplomatic service of the United States are prohibited from wearing any uniform or official costume not previously authorized by Congress. The compensation of Diplomatic or Consular Officers is fixed by statute, and is provided for by regular salaries or fees authorized to be collected, which vary from $500 to $17,500 per annum. The fees collected at the legations are required to be accounted for to the Secretary of the Treasury and held subject to his draft or other directions.

INDEX OF NAMES.

The principal purpose of this list is to provide an index to all the names in the volume. In the column of residences, the name of the county of residence is frequently given, as affording the readiest means of finding the name on the page or pages where it appears. The home residence or post-office address is given where known, when it will not interfere with this purpose. Obsolete post-offices are omitted. Figures in parentheses indicate the number of times the name appears on the page. The letter n signifies that the name occurs in a foot note.
